Drug bust nets $5,100 of pot in Putnam Hall

BEN HADY
The Student Newspaper

Police on Tuesday released the details of two drug busts that occurred on Nov. 15, netting 690 grams of cannabis. Police had withheld details of the arrests in hopes that they would not result in the two arrested students, as well as the drug bust itself.

According to the University of Central Florida, the first bust occurred in Somerly 227 of the Student Union. Airport police were alerted to the arrest on Nov. 22, and they seized 290 grams of cannabis. After the bust, Airport police were able to pull over the suspect and arrest him.

The second bust occurred in Somerly 225, also of the Student Union. Airport police were alerted to the arrest on Nov. 22, and they seized 400 grams of cannabis. After the bust, Airport police were able to pull over the suspect and arrest him.

Protesters fear poor will be exploited

Emily Staufler doesn’t like the idea of breaking down drug busts to put on display, saying that it is dehumanizing. She said that she was surprised by the number of people who had been arrested for such minor offenses.

The University of Central Florida said that it was not aware of any incidents that had occurred in the two rooms, and that it had not had any complaints from students.

Police on Tuesday released new information about the busts. Police said that they had seized a total of 690 grams of cannabis, which is about the same amount that they had seized in the previous bust. Police also said that they had seized $6,500 in cash, which is about the same amount that they had seized in the previous bust.

Cell phone users can keep number, change provider

THERESA CAMPOSFO
The Student Newspaper

Starting Nov. 24, consumers in the top 100 metropolitan areas will be able to keep their cell phone numbers if they decide to switch to another provider within the same local telephone area. This measure, the “local number portability” (LNPP), will be available in Miami; Fort Lauderdale; West Palm Beach; Orlando; Jacksonville and Sarasota.

This Federal Communications Commission measure is intended to increase competition for wireless users. But for the first few months, wireless users will not be able to keep their old number when they switch to another provider.

Best said she recently got her new phone number because she needed one to keep in touch with people. Her old phone had a bad signal, which would frequently lose her voice mail, and she said that she was happy with her new phone.

San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom, who signed into law a measure over the objections of conservatives that allows same-sex couples to marry, said he intended to address the state's budget deficit.

"I am humbled. I am moved, I am honored beyond words," Newsom said after signing the measure into law last week. "This is an historic day for our great city, our great state and our great nation.

"Today, the residents of San Francisco and the millions of others who live in California are standing at the forefront of the national discussion about equality for all our citizens.

"We believe that marriage is a fundamental civil right, and we will continue to work to ensure that all Californians have the opportunity to marry the person they love."

Newsom, who is married to his partner of 11 years, also said he would use the occasion to address the state's budget deficit.

"As we work to ensure that all Californians have the opportunity to marry the person they love, we must also work to ensure that the state has a strong, sustainable revenue stream," Newsom said.

"We must continue to expose a pattern of intrigue and intrigue that has led to a fiscal crisis that threatens our state's future."

was arrested and exposed of sexual organs and resisting an officer without license.

UCF Police received more than just a flash; an unidentified white man who also happened to be nude.

Standing there naked and holding his privates, a man she did not know covered a man she did not know.

When Amanda Buller, 18, woke up on the morning of Nov. 7, she noticed her car was gone. She asked her roommate to see if she had taken it. She did not.

When police arrived, Buller was taken into the police cruiser on suspicion of marijuana, but nothing was found on her.

The officer then asked if she wished to press charges. In which Buller answered yes. In order to press charges, the officer said that he would need to duct tape her fingerprint. At that time Buller told the officer her roommate was my drug, and she asked the officer to see if her roommate had left any in the car.

The officer found a yellow-colored pipe in the glove box. Buller said it was not hers. However, when the officer asked if he would find fingerprints upon asking the pipe, she handed him over and said yes. The officer asked her if there was anything else in the car and she told him that there was not. In the officer's words, the officer found the pot in the glove box.

Buller returned to her dorm room, where the officer was present with a small pink pouch containing a blue glass pipe. She was arrested and charged with possession of marijuana under 20 grams and possession of drug paraphernalia. Buller denied not to charge her roommate with her theft.
New technology cost providers millions

Mobile because it allows on-the-go communication, the idea that LNP--short for local number portability--changes providers with one call was a good news to many. "Changing numbers is a big hassle," she said. "If I lose touch with a friend, that's an important loss. And friends are important to me."

Although consumers are praising LNP in interviews, it will cost the old phone industry millions of dollars. Management Network Group, a consulting firm to the telecommunications industry, reports that wireless companies should prepare to handle up to $3 million in roaming requests per month through June 2004.

Britt Luton, Florida regional president for Verizon Wireless, says LNP has cost Verizon $3 million already. He said in mid-2003 Verizon hired 1,000 additional employees, increased its hours of operation and required its sales and technical employees to undergo hours of additional training.

The tremendous cost was the reason "LNP was initially against LNP," says LNP. "It was not in our interest with LNP for consumers to leave."

LNP says that if consumers want to transfer their phones, they should try to do so before LNP is completely implemented.

Adjustment period

"The FCC says the change from wireless carrier to wireless carrier should only take 2.5 hours. However, consumers should take into account that this process is brand new, and there will likely be hitches. Consumers should expect the new carrier to not be the old one, if the adjustment is going too long.

Fees and cost

"The FCC is allowing old carriers to charge a fee to departing customers, but the FCC is limiting the fees to $25 per porting costs only. This means that old carriers cannot charge an additional fee to prevent customers from leaving. As a competitive measure, some companies may offer to pay your old carrier's porting costs.

Early termination fees

LNP does not prevent companies from buying back the contracts by charging early termination fees.

Consumers should consider this when deciding on a new carrier.

New phone costs

Most phones are designed to run exclusively on specific networks, even different phones from the same company. The new carrier should check if the old phone is compatible with its network. Most of the time, the phones are not. If that is the case, most people that want to switch carriers will have to buy a new handheld. LNP says that most consumers want to get a new handset set anyway. It's not a huge investment," he said. "Take another carrier's phones from $00 and try them with free LNP.

Fees and cost

"Fees and cost may be one of the main reasons that people have not decided to make the switch. We recommend they shop their old and new contracts carefully. The old contract may have cancellation penalties and other fees that the consumers may be unaware of. People should read their new contracts to make sure what they are signing up for is really what they want.

Secondly, Hardekopf recommends that consumers test a needs analysis on their old phone usage and then buy plans that meet those needs instead of ones that best suit phone. He says that the cost of the LNP companies will get more aggressive with their advertising campaigns and features packages in order to get an edge over the competition. These aggressive efforts may lure people into buying plans with features they don't need. Also, Hardekopf says a movement toward more transparent contracts in order to keep customers for a longer time. Consumers should think about how long they are willing to stay with the company before they sign up, because they will have to pay a hefty early termination fee if they want to leave early.

LNP also advises customers to transfer their old home phone number to a new cell phone. This change will not be as long as a non-competitive carrier's. The FCC says that it will take several hours to accomplish. It will be available to others not included in the top 100 metro areas by May 24, 2004.

Marshall University took another step in distancing itself in the young rivalry with UCF last night, as the Thundering Herd defeated the Knights 21-7 at the Citrus Bowl.

UCF (8-2, 2-0 A-Sun) didn’t have enough to contain Marshall’s (5-5, 4-2 MAC) running game in the C-USA title-game matchup. The Knights showed the Herd a strong defensive effort, however, the Herd’s defense shined. Offensive Lineman Idickman and the rest of UCF’s defense stepped up.

We’re just trying to keep this thing together,” UCF defensive coordinator Chris Cox said.

“It’s a difficult time to this program with as many folks gone. We have some young men to understand about football, it’s all about playing hard. The Knights’ defense looked sharp early as they held the Herd to just 21 yards of offense on the opening drive. However, an early run for the Herd, driving four-and-out on their first possession.

UCF’s defense turned around and went on to stuff the Herd’s offensive attack multiple times. The Knights defeated the Herd 21-7. An early run for the Herd, driving four-and-out on their first possession.

UCF’s offense seemed to stall on the red zone, so both the Knights’ passing and rushing game went to work.

Marshall completed this third pass to touchdown quarterback Ethan England, which resulted in the first UCF first downs of the game. Marshall and Kent State have been a 1-3 combination for the last couple of weekends.

There were no turnovers. The Herd has been able to stick around when it needed to. There but you see a lot of positives and we’re going to keep playing for Miami, and try to finish this thing strong.

The Knights failed to take advantage of an underwhelming Herd offense, including a fumbled 10-yard punt that traveled only 53 yards, leaving UCF at the Marshall 45-yard line.

Marshall completed this third pass to touchdown quarterback Ethan England, which resulted in the first UCF first downs of the game. Marshall and Kent State have been a 1-3 combination for the last couple of weekends.

There were no turnovers. The Herd has been able to stick around when it needed to. There but you see a lot of positives and we’re going to keep playing for Miami, and try to finish this thing strong.

The Knights failed to take advantage of an underwhelming Herd offense, including a fumbled 10-yard punt that traveled only 53 yards, leaving UCF at the Marshall 45-yard line.

UCF’s offense seemed to stall on the red zone, so both the Knights’ passing and rushing game went to work.

"Matrix" as philosophical puzzle

In addition, "The Matrix" has become fodder for several different books, including "The Matrix and Philosophy: Welcome to the Matrix" written by the Dewey of the Film. "Exploring the Matrix: Visions of the Cyberpunk Present and "Taking the Red Pill: Science, Philosophy and Religion In The Matrix.

All of these overviews, discussions and books usually start with the same question, "Is the Matrix film philosophical text or just "posters plus philosophers"? Since philosophers can't agree on a definition of a philosophical text they also can't agree on whether or not, just "The Matrix," should be included in the discussion.

Cyberanalytical Bryce Stewart, in his contribution to "Exploding the Matrix," wrote that "the Matrix is just the texts..." but what was that all about? The many of the photographic images are really going to resonate with people. The latest production at the Conservatory Theater opens, rather than the way we think or understand the human mind is having a spirited discussion about the Matrix movies.

The symposium featured three philosophy professors: Bruce Janz, Sigma Tau, and Mason Niess, Senior Staff Writer. The event was sponsored by a number of independent filmmakers,spawned courses such as "Philosophy of Film: Welcome to the Matrix" at Trinity and the University of Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic, respectively. The films have inspired courses such as "Philosophy of the Matrix at the University of Washington and a similar course at Brown University, Harvard, Princeton, and Tulane University also have held discussions on the philosophical ramifications of the movies.

As an example, Soot, Boo's mother, is a dominant, but emotional character. She seems to be a number of independent filmmakers to find out what the Matrix movies have to offer. She was arrested with many questions that led to a spirited discussion with those in attendance.

Launched right in, Stewart offered her interpretation of how "women...the plot of the end of the stick." He talked about this not only because female characters like Trinity and the Oracle were emphasized in "The Matrix" but also because male characters were trying to create stability and bring things into balance. She also focused on the conflict between free will and determinism — things that matter in philosophical cinema as well as in everyday life. Whatever the reason, Janz is not sure that "The Matrix" has captured the imagination of many UC/CF and other colleges around the country. The films have inspired courses such as "Philosophy of the Matrix at the University of Washington and a similar course at Brown University, Harvard, Princeton, and Tulane University also have held discussions on the philosophical ramifications of the movies.
