Peters triumphs in SGA runoff

Insurgent Talakala runs hard but short

Kevin Peters fell just shy of victory last week, but in a runoff yesterday finally gained the majority vote he worked so hard to obtain.

The final tally: 3,008 votes for Peters and Bentley, 2,702 for Talakala and his running mate, Alex Sigal.

The 3,008 votes cast in the runoff nearly matched the 3,027 total votes cast last week for Peters, Talakala and a third candidate, Gia Aduloju, who did not compete in the runoff.

"I'm calling my win," a worn-down Sigal said in the Student Union Pressbox Ballroom yesterday, where he and Bentley heard the results announced by Lake Bragard, SGA's supervisor of elections.

"Yes, it was that close," he said a short time later when he had heard the phone. "I can't believe it."

Talakala, who emerged from a five-candidate field just one year ago to lose that runoff as well, said this would be the last presidential campaign. Talakala had positioned himself as the outsider against Peters, who had the support of current SGA President Brian Battles and vowed to continue in the same manner.

"I'm going to spare - " said Talakala. "That's why the students voted, and that's what they get."

The win of campaigning for days, sleeping часов and enduring the recent chill that was followed by two straight days of rain showed on Peters' face - his otherwise blue eyes run red.

Candidate breaks with Bush on gay marriage

Constitutional rule not needed, Keyman says

ALEX BARDOCK
U.S. Senate candidate Lake Butler is holding a press conference today that he's break his campaign in order to protest the Republican party's opposition to a constitutional ban on gay marriage.

"What we have here is a fundamental question of human rights against religious rights," Keyman said.

President George W. Bush has repeatedly made it clear that he supports a constitutional ban on gay marriage.

Opposition to such a ban would effectively write marriage out of the Constitution,while supporters have said it will save the sanctity of marriage as a union solely between a man and a woman.

"The candidate, a lawyer who is from a five-candidate field last month, is up for re-election and is an item I plan to review but not to spare," said Keyman.

Dyer: Don't expect decision on bar hours for a year

JESSICA LACOMBE
Senior Staff Writer

Orlando residents will have to wait at least one more year before any decision is made to extend bar hours past 2 a.m. in the downtown area, Orlando Mayor Buddy Dyer said.

Despite recent buzz that the Orlando nightlife is getting ready for a two-hour increase in downtown bar hours, the mayor's office has said this is a matter of putting the cart in front of the horse.

"This proposal was generated from my Strategic Downtown Transition Team and created a list of improvement strategies for the mayor and the city council to review but not necessarily accept," said Dyer.

"The bar hours extension, if accepted, is geared at raising the profile the entertainment district of Orlando. Based on the suggestion, Orlando would see its nightlife on weekends inside of downtown, which is by creating an environment for CityWalk or Downtown Disney, where night clubs and bars would be located to stay open later hours, more people would be drawn to downtown."

The downtown team's report was "a nearly a book of over 25 different things to do to enhance the downtown," said Dyer.

"This (the bar hours issue) was a mirror aspect of one that got the most attention," said Dyer.

Dyer also said that despite heated debate, it will require the mayor and the city council to make changes happen.

Because the mayor and city council can change what suggestions will be put into place, more time is needed to make a decision.

"We need to work with the council and the mayor to make the decisions," said Dyer. "But we need more time to make the decisions."

Atkins' weight at death causes stir among dieters

The Atkins Diet controversy continues to this day. Last week, as it was revealed that its creator, Robert Atkins, weighed over 200 pounds at his death.

"We need to work with the council and the mayor to make the decisions," said Dyer. "But we need more time to make the decisions."

"The release of Atkins' weight at death causes stir among dieters. The Atkins Diet remains a controversial issue in the medical community, with some doctors fiercely opposing the high-fat, low-carbohydrate diet, while others believe it can be beneficial for certain patients."

Home drug-making labs rise in popularity

Small methamphetamine labs have become more popular as room and pop labs, and have increased in popularity in the Eastern United States. Job seekers, it's never too early to network

Mike Regal

For job seekers, it's never too early to network. The Federal Bureau of Labor says only a small percentage of job advertisements are open to local newspapers and only a small percentage of people get job advertisements from networking opportunities.

Most people who look for work do so through the advertised opportunities.

A study of recent labor studies has shown that the majority of people don't find what they're looking for in the classifieds. Nearly 70 percent of job hunters find these jobs through the help of friends, family members or their own networks.

"If you plan on getting a job when you graduate, you have to get started networking," said Dr. Tim Darby, professor of management at UCF. "Networking is an essential part of job searching. It's important to not only try to network, but to actually do it.

"Believe it or not, networking at the college level is important, even if you're not trying to network," said Darby.

Networking can be as easy as remembering anyone you've met. Any time you meet someone new, you should consider that person as a potential contact. The University of Florida has a strong networking culture.

Another hurdle new employees face in the job market is the job interview. Darby recommends that new employees attend job interviews, practice answering questions carefully and be punctual.

Darby suggests spending some time volunteering for local organizations. This will help develop your skills and also help you make new contacts. Darby also recommends volunteering as a way to help people and make a positive difference.

Darby said this would "offer a lot of opportunities to learn and grow."

The Italian program in Bergamo, Italy, is also planning to find a new location this summer. The program director, Dr. Lee Fert, chose Bergamo because it is closer to some of the larger cities in Italy. Students will be able to visit cities such as Milan, Verona and Venice during a day trip, returning home at night — thereby saving money.

Students will be studing at the University of Bergamo. Fert said, "The university has been offically a very good opportunity."

Another program that is planning to find a new location is the German program traveling to Munster, Germany. This is the first year the German program is visiting Munster. The students will be studying at the Bergamo University.

Ferryl Taylor, the professor for Munster director said, "he is interested about the new location because they will offer students more hours than they have in the previous programs. Also, the program in the German Language School works better during semester break because of the German summer break and the German school." Taylor also added that the German school is helpful for students who seek to learn a foreign language.

Talakala cited for two violations

Talakala said there will have a year to work on some of their loftier platform goals, such as an on-campus dental clinic, a regulated textbook exchange and a student traffic court. Peters said he has been talking to Bob Faust, director of the Student Health Center, about putting a dental clinic in the planned three-story health center expansion.

Though the textbook exchange would be based upon students' initiative, Peters would like to make sure the exchange is supervised. "It's hard enough being a student without paying a fortune for books," he said. Peters was a member of the bookstore committee in his sophomore year, and thinks that most plans to lower textbook prices are feasible. "It's not really an scope," he said of controlling textbook costs. However, he said a textbook exchange would allow students to get some of their books without having to pay up in dollar in the bookstores.

Peters also envisions a student traffic court that would have more students sitting on it. "Everywhere else, you get a jury of your peers - why shouldn't you when you get a traffic violation?" Peters asked.

"Hope to help increase pride and tradition... and student involvement in campus activities," he said. He would allow campus programs if the subject was one he cared strongly about, and one that most of the students cared for.

The Talakala-favored ticket was cited by the SGA with two minor elections violations during the runoff campaign. Both involved an unauthorized e-mail sent out to students of the Graduate Student Association, of which Talakala is a member. The e-mail erroneously said that it had been approved by Partridge. SGA's supervisor of elections. The GSA's vice president, Rebecca Fiedler, was one of those who brought the matter to the attention of Partridge. Fiedler said thebsticket e-mail indicated that GSA had endorsed Talakala when it did not endorse any candidate.

Networking skills land good jobs

Networking is a way to meet people who can help you advance in your career. Several UCF programs aim to facilitate networking.

One program is the Career Center's Career & Networking Center, which offers workshops, networking events, and resources to help students build their professional networks.

Another program is the Office of Alumni Relations, which organizes events and initiatives to connect alumni with current students.

A third program is the Office of Professional Services, which provides career counseling and resources to help students find internships and jobs.

Study Abroad plans eight trips this year

UCF offers a variety of study abroad programs for students to explore different cultures and gain international experience.

Some of the upcoming study abroad trips include trips to Japan, Australia, and South Africa. Students can apply for these programs through the Office of International Programs and Services.

UCF also offers programs in countries like China, India, and Spain, which provide students with opportunities to study and live abroad.

The Office of Study Abroad encourages students to apply for these programs and to include them on their résumés to enhance their career prospects.

Reserves find success in limited minutes this season

In UCF's first meetings with Georgia Tech and Lipscomb in January, Lindbeck led the reserves in minutes on the bench in both games. The junior college transfer averaged five minutes and scored nine points against the Yellow Jackets. He played four-for-four from three-point land and only committed one turnover in 17 minutes. The Navy game was the junior college transfer's big day, as he dropped the bench in minutes.

Sophomore guard Troy L'Youx had a great day announcing three-shot pointers, as he dropped 28 of his 32 points on three of those shots this season.

"I knew the game was going to be tough," Lindbeck said. "Coming off of last few games, we're not going to have a lot more and get a little more momentum. We need a little more easier for me to step in and start making some shots down there. I'm excited that I know what I'm doing and if in the future I know I'm going to play on the court and I'm going to be out shooting.

UCF bounced back in the second game against Georgia Tech on Feb. 7-8. The Knights were able to win that game by securing the game with a 3-15 conference record, and have won four of their last four on the road. The team has struggled all season, but the Knights are able to win with their depth.

Etendres' bomb ignites late rally

With just over two minutes left in the game, the University opened the scores with a 7-3 lead. The Knights are 5-2 on the road and have scored a season-high 29 points.

Georgia State also has two more points than UCF this season. The Panthers have scored 123 points in their last five games, while the Knights have only scored 37 points. The Knights are averaging 3.5 points per game and have scored 3.2 points per game in their last five games.

The Knights are averaging seven assists per game and have been held to just 13.5 points per game in their last five games. The Panthers are averaging 9.5 assists per game and have scored 12.5 points per game in their last five games.

UCF went on a 7-0 run in the first half and tied the game at 14-14 with 14 seconds left. The Panthers scored 74 points in the second half, while the Knights scored 74 points in the second half.

UCF went on to win the third game, 75-64, after scoring 14 points in the second half. The Panthers scored only 13 points in the second half.

Unplug events help students get natural

By a conscious choice, not a politician

In the wake of recent law- suits and improprieties in company and employee rights atrocity and antiracist training, the company knows its mission will not win any more and that political contributions are a functional part of government. A recent lawsuit from a back-door shenanigan has been filed against about 30 companies, and every one of them is hitting blank walls at the same time is bumping into these new markets.

The old route of saying "We're not a politician" is not working anymore. Communities are standing up against Wal-Mart's moves to drop jobs and creating non-unions so that money does not flow into their pocket money is already being spent on the political wheel for a new store. In light of statistics that show that a Wal-Mart moves into town, property values and crime goes up, it’s understandable that many people don’t want new stores in their neighborhood. It’s easy to fault Wal-Mart for taking the political route to make life a little easier, but it’s in the best interest of the company just fixed its problems instead of making it easier for the company to continue to make things worse.

Instead of giving $5,000,000 to the schools, Wal-Mart, who has a history of voting for businesses over the public and against corporations, and who only wants to continue to make things worse that would make it illegal to give soft money contributions to politicians, Wal-Mart could stop sponsoring companies and using the political route to take control of the world around them. No nososes were talking about political contributions.

For those who care about what went wrong, the Constitution is at once a tunnel of hope that Congress will come to order and Ted Kennedy will decide the question for democracy by appointing Pryor (even though Kennedy obviously knows that Pryor is totally independent) to an empty seat (Chappaquiddick), and the Senate will not confirm Pryor’s appointment. And spare us the trip that Congress is in this august political organ of democratic representation. Congress has the collective power to be just as powerful as the president—not that the president is vapor of course.

Perhaps, in the future, we will be accepted by a generation of young people, you would want to make a conservative statement on issues rather than wearing your heart on your sleeve and letting your jeans whiten black.

I’m attacking Canadian farmers with today’s bear trap picture.” Congratulations! You have succeeded in what everyone is watching. The Americans and other minorities haven’t had enough of a variety of this type of thing. Our feelings, opinions and concerns, you just added it to that matter with your comment. Get over it. If offended you want, it’s not that concerned because I use your reaction and many others just want to show this exists. There’s a reason for this because of all the letters and emails about this, it is not a lot of people really forget and maybe the next time around, instead of being so quick with your tiny comment, why don’t you try to understand that other people’s feelings are also as important as your own.

How about a history lesson while you’re at it? Maybe then you’ll understand simple images like this has been linked with horrific events of the past.

NOOSES WERE RACIST

(Regarding “Nooses were racist,” Reader Views, Feb. 23.) Who was the statute something so minute that it doesn’t matter in the scheme of your day, fit alone your life.

A few things you should note: Blacks were not the only people who were hung. Actually, there were more whites in the violent incidents in both local and national incidents that were hung than Blacks in the same area. There are no hard facts on this, it is just a common sense, even it was a frequently used method of correction.

You are one of the few people who look at a noose in a sports section and call a racist. Don’t stress— it’s a picture of a rope. For every knot laid? I am Jewish and you don’t see me breaking out every time I see an image on Passover!

Please just relax. The most ironic thing is that you calling Ashley Burns a racist is more offensive than the noose in the front page. Get it all and undo everything, and next time you feel cramped to complete about a sports writer being racist, do in all a favor and keep it to yourself.

Sign language faces barrier

I was shocked and embarrassed to read your front-page article on the possible adoption of American Sign Language as a foreign language (Feb. 16). Stoked, because I could not believe that Social Studies, who is the chair

The old route of saying “We’re not a politician” is not working anymore. Communities are standing up against Wal-Mart’s moves to drop jobs and creating non-unions so that money enters into politics instead of making things worse. The hope that they will let go of technology for a day, students face a fight for their neighborhoods. They need to be able to escape the company to continue to hurt Wal-Mart and employees. However, and leaving that behind, and take a look at the man-made lake. Gemini Boulevard, including a whole lot easier on your campus, you’re apt to find at UCF.

Students will stop to appreciate nature, and need to appreciate nature, and need to appreciate nature, and need to appreciate nature. No nososes were talking about political contributions. For those who care about what went wrong, the Constitution is at once a tunnel of hope that Congress will come to order and Ted Kennedy will decide the question for democracy by appointing Pryor (even though Kennedy obviously knows that Pryor is totally independent) to an empty seat (Chappaquiddick), and the Senate will not confirm Pryor’s appointment. And spare us the trip that Congress is in this august political organ of democratic representation. Congress has the collective power to be just as powerful as the president— not that the president is vapor of course.

Perhaps, in the future, we will be accepted by a generation of young people, you would want to make a conservative statement on issues rather than wearing your heart on your sleeve and letting your jeans whiten black.

The noose response
(In Sports Column, Ashley Shares regarding his column headlined, “Isn’t it strange?” Feb. 23rd.) By the noose to the reaction that the noose image on the sports front page publication should be an issue of being a racist. It’s fearful, strong allegation against a person.

However, your reaction was unfortunately insensitive and narrow-minded. Yet, even because an image of a noose means nothing to you, you should still take a deep breath and try to understand that yes, it is a fact that may have offended some people, even if it meant nothing to you.

You still could have defended your decision for using the noose. However, the burning question would have to acknowledge that while it may have offended some, it would be a strong statement for the future.

Instead, you chose to respond rather immorally with, “Next year you will see
The members have to vote. The Faculty Senate is supposed to be a forum for all kinds of views. It was inappropriate and irresponsible for students to influence the vote in this manner. However, it was further equally inappropriate and irresponsible for editors to print this biased and unrefined opinion without preventing the opposing viewpoint.

I am told that in 2004 there are still people in departments who do not understand the nature of American Sign Language. Modani said that he did not find that ASL offered the same benefits that other foreign languages do. I challenge Modani to specify any of these benefits.

Let me just state a few of the facts about American Sign Language to set the record straight. I feel compelled to speak on this issue, as my doctorate is in the discipline of linguistics. First, after more than two decades of scientific investigation, the current view on American Sign Language is that it is a "natural" language with its own distinct grammar, and that it is not associated with any other manual spoken languages. Professors Linda Bolhuis, Rogerwoman and William Sede are just a few of the eminent scholars whose research and expertise back up this statement. I should Modani or others at UCF care to consult them or that they qualify as a sign language, American Sign Language is not what linguists call a "new" language, American Sign Language is not the same as "English" and it is not the system of hand signs for spelling words called "Sign System."

If Modani would consider that learning a traditional foreign language opens opportunities to a new group of individuals with whom one could not formerly communicate, perhaps he would see the error of his manner. American Sign Language is the fourth most used language in North America. Thus, American Sign Language is right up there with English, Spanish and French. The fact of the matter is from a purely statistical perspective, American Sign Language is much more useful for "foreign" language in North America than it is in any other country.

There is a very rich literature and culture associated with American Sign Language. Yes, there are performances and performances in American Sign Language. ASL has rich cultural history. It is noteworthy in note in passing that middle-aged ASL can understand and be understood in France (because ASL is based on Gallaudet's system developed in France) but that unfortunately our society does not function this way. Instead, most cops are in their 20s and usually on a power trip every time they deal with them, so that we have one, we get nervous when I'm not doing anything to be nervous about. Looking back, if my right hand was across the street at a friend's house and I smoked some pot, then there's a policy officer over them. He had hobbies, and I only harass and intimidate the public. I was1880 at the time. When I see a cop, I want to say, "I'm safe."

I feel I should Modani or others at UCF care to consult the information available at http://www.augmentaldisabilities.org or http://www.unm.edu/~douglas/ASL.html or http://www.unm.edu/~douglas/ASL/ may 1993 published neurologist and author Oliver Sack's (author of The Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat and Bedazzled) words about the lack of any research into the effects of American Sign Language being used as a foreign language. The present discussion does not hold any significance and is not worth of games? Where the hell were they when people broke into my apartment and I got jumped while crossing the street? Where were they when I got arrested and had to pay a fine to obtain a conviction? Where were they when I was in prison? Where were they when I was in a motel in Volunteers and any other faculty members who would like to discuss the matter, so that they can understand the language from the inside.

Def and deaf around the world would be extremely hurt by Modani's ignorance, but that would probably not be enough for him. After all, he is only a hearing individual."

Christianity is now extreme

What's next, extreme dry cleaning?

EMILY SCOTT

We all know that traditional Christian faith in America is one of the driving forces in our current cultural and political landscape. However, in recent years, we have witnessed a growing number of extreme Christian groups and movements, each representing a particular interpretation of its conservative cultural standpoint. These groups have taken extreme measures to influence society, often involving controversial actions and ideologies. One such group is the Xtreme Church, which has gained significant attention.

The Xtreme Church is known for its extreme measures and tactics, often involving controversial actions and ideologies. The church is led by a pastor named John Mason, who is known for his extreme views and actions. The church has gained attention for its controversial practices and beliefs, which often involve extreme measures to influence society.

In recent years, many of these Xtreme ministries have sprung up across the country. The Xtreme Church is one such group, which is known for its极端 views and actions. The church has gained significant attention for its controversial practices and beliefs, which often involve extreme measures to influence society.

In this issue...

In this issue, we will be exploring the phenomenon of extreme Christianity and its impact on society. We will be discussing the various groups and movements that represent this perspective, as well as the controversy surrounding them. We will also be examining the role of extreme Christianity in the current cultural and political landscape.

This issue will feature articles by leading experts in the field, as well as interviews with key figures involved in the movement. We will also include a series of investigative pieces, which will delve into the inner workings of these extreme groups and the impact they have on society.

Stay tuned for a fascinating exploration of the phenomenon of extreme Christianity and its influence on our world.

ELIZABETH PALIK

Once again, the script of February marks the much-anticipated V-Day. First enacted by feminist activist at First Free in 2000 as a global movement to end violen against women and girls, V-Day has gone through four years of immense success worldwide through the organization and increasing awareness of violence committed against women.

Now the UCF is proud to participate in V-day’s collapse campaign. The V-Day College Campaign involves colleges of college and university communities around the world to “harness the positive production of ‘The Vaing Monologues” on their campuses or online V-day (Feb. 14) to raise money and awareness to stop violence against women and girls. I managed to glean a moment from diabetes researcher, Jauney, her hectic rehearsal schedule to find out more about this year’s V-Day production.

Jauney is a junior majoring in sociology and psychology, but her experience as a former theater major, as well as her passion for the stage led her to apply for the highly sought-after position as director of her very own V-Day production. Jauney spent two months restructuring with 12 amazing actresses, most who have never acted on stage before. As you can imagine, these ladies had been on one crazy rollercoaster ride full of tears and hard work. Jauney said that everyone learned a lot from the experience. “Not everyone was sure with what they’re getting into,” she said. “But they were appointments at least. A few were first-time actresses, and they really learned a lot from it.”

This time the big question that everyone (especially girls) wanted to know was but were afraid to ask. “What point are we trying to prove by pulling great stories out of the fog? And tackling tough subject matter? I just don’t know. Basically, my goal is to let the audience know that these women are trying to prove something.”

For more information on the production, visit http://www.victimservices.ucf.edu and more information on V-day visit http://www.vday.org.html.

Melodrama and realism merge in "Gloomy Sunday"

BRETT RYAN BONOWICH

CINESCENE

THE CINESCENE OF THE BRET

In a film that would make a solid film-based TV show, the film, "Gloomy Sunday," is a compelling portrait of the life of a woman that is both melodramatic and realistic. The performances are heartwarming all around, but it is the song title which ultimately leaves the most impact and provides the most inspiration. The story was so heartbreaking that it is hard to believe it's not a real event. The film's only fault lies in its grandiose orchestral score, intended to highlight the characters' despair but only drawing too much attention to itself. The movie is poignant and moving, and it is impactful. It is a must-see. But it's the film's only Hollywood-style conclusion, so we'll let it slide. Otherwise, Schulberg's film is nearly flawless. This movie took up to five years (depending on when you count its first release) to finally arrive in the states, so see it while you can.

GI9son.

During the production of "The Passion of the Christ," Gibson delved headfirst into controversial film territory. The film was a retelling of the last hours of Christ. After an aborted attempt to restore: Ray Harryhausen's Frankenstein, Gibson turned his attention to his third directorial effort. A screening of the last hours of Christ, the same title of the Passion of the Christ, was struck by lightning on one of the scenes. The film was the most controversial film of the year. After every studio passed on the project, the controversy followed. The Last Temptation of Christ, which he directed, was a film itself. It was a film that featured over $20 million of his own money, hardly a dent in Gibson's pocket. The scenes of the Passion of the Christ, the Soldiers and Signs were not as bad as some feared, making the film without a doubt a huge hit. The film opened to a huge backlash, but it is one of the most controversial films of the year. Gibson financed the film and was left with the decision to distribute the equally controversial film. His choice was made. If he distributed the film, it could never be done: It made him a hero to those who thought he had flaws, he had doubts and he had a problem with the 'film.' If he didn't, he would lose his credibility. He's dead wrong.

How would Jesus rock 'n' roll?

Based on these lyrics, God should sue for copyright infringement

Music doesn't save

Despite claims to the contrary, music doesn't save anyone. I'm not talking about the Masses of people who gather to sing along in a church, or the devout believer who has found solace in his faith. I'm talking about the unique contribution that Jesus could have made to the world of music. Just imagine a rock star with the voice of an angel, or a folk singer with the wisdom of a prophet. The possibilities are endless.

Music doesn't save

Throughout history, great music has been written as a combination of religion and politics. But what happens when rock and God meet? Is it possible for a Christian artist to make music that is both religious and commercially successful? The answer is yes, and throughout history, artists have achieved this goal.

Feel Good Lost (ressure)

There's no shortage of playlists to be found on music streaming services. But what about the first record, Feel Good Lost. In the world of modern music, there are so many songs that are the same. Imagine a world where music was original. Imagine a world where there were no songs that were the same. Imagine a world where music was unique. Imagine a world where music was different. Imagine a world where music was amazing. Imagine a world where music was incredible.
