Fraternity caught in sticky situation

School investigating tree-tying incident

RACHEL BICK

UCF Police found a fraternity memberGnvested in plastic wrap and tied to a tree behind the Pi Beta Phi sorority house on Friday night.

Sean Pierce, the plastic-wrapped member of Pi Beta Phi, said he was not aware why he was tied up.

The victim of this theft, police said. The items were valued at

Rash of car burglaries has police puzzled

EDMUND CALHOUN

Twenty-two car burglaries were reported to UCF Police during January and February, with 10 occurring in January alone, according to a UCP bulletin.

In an e-mail alerting the UCF community of the high volume of burglaries and vehicle thefts, Sgt. Tom Williamson of UCP told the suspects are occurring in the apartment community of student housing complexes.

Included in the list of stolen items are laptops, personal electronics, cell phones and clothes.

Anyone who owns a computer, digital camera or cell phone is urged to contact the Police Department.

Former defense secretary says vigilance is key to preventing attacks

ALER BARBEE

Defense Secretary

Secretary of Defense Donald H. Rumsfeld announced yesterday that the United States is stepping up its military efforts in Afghanistan, where the Taliban have launched a major offensive.

President Bush has ordered the deployment of additional American troops to the region, and the United Nations has dispatched a team of military observers to monitor the situation.

Rumsfeld said the United States is taking the offensive against the Taliban, which he described as a "terrorist organization." He said the Taliban had used the city of Kandahar as a base for attacks on U.S. forces in the region.

The military operation is aimed at disrupting the Taliban’s supply lines and neutralizing its fighters, he said.

Rumsfeld also announced that the United States would begin air strikes against Taliban positions in western Afghanistan.

Film student wins big at a film festival

JESSICA LACOMBE

Aden Shoemaker’s four-minute film won honorable mention at the Central Florida Film Festival.

Shoemaker’s film, titled “The Way We Live,” was selected from among 100 entries and will now be shown at the festival’s Closing Night Gala.

The film, which Shoemaker wrote, directed and edited, tells the story of a young couple who must decide whether to stay in their small town or move to the city.

UCF could provide enough evidence of a Bush administration plan to cut the federal budget to avoid a government shutdown.

Mr. Hitt said he was not sure if the university would be able to meet the deadline to submit its budget, which is due on Oct. 15.

Hitt said he was concerned about the budget cuts, which he said would affect the university’s ability to provide quality education.

I have heard about West Nile virus and was wondering what are my chances of getting sick.

As we approach the warm months, it's important to be aware of protection from diseases that may be spread by mosquito bites. Around the world mosquitoes are responsible for numerous illnesses and deaths from yellow fever, malaria, dengue fever and others. Here in the United States we do not have these illnesses that are found in other parts of the world. West Nile virus is a disease that was first diagnosed in the United States in 1999. West Nile virus may be transmitted when an infected mosquito bites to transmit the virus in their blood. Mosquitoes become infected when they feed on infected birds, which may circulate the virus in their blood for a few days. In addition to transmission through infected organs and transfused blood, the recent introduction of routine WNV screening of blood donations and transfusion of WNV will greatly reduce the risk of spread of WNV through transfused blood.

 midfielder may be a sign that WNV is circulating between mosquitoes and humans in an area. Over 120 mosquito pools have been infected with WNV, though not all infected pools will die. It's important to remember that birds from many other causes besides WNV.

Only about one person out of five who are bitten by an infected mosquito will experience any illness. Although illness from WNV is usually mild, severe illness and death are possible, particularly for persons over the age of 60. Typical symptoms from mild illness include weakness, loss of appetite, seizures, vomiting, headaches, muscle aching, swollen glands and rashes. Symptoms generally start approximately three to four days after the mosquito bite and last from three to six days. Approximately one in 200 cases will develop a more severe form of the disease. In recent outbreaks, symptoms occurring among patients hospitalized with the severe disease include fever, weakness, gastrointestinal symptoms and confusion. Severe neurological disease has occurred in patients of all ages. Your round transmission is possible in some areas. Treatment of mild cases usually only requires rest, symptom treatment for fever and finish. Severe cases often require hospitalization, intravenous fluids, respiratory support and prevention of other infections.

Three simple actions can help prevent infection: Avoid mosquito bites by using insect repellants with DEET and wearing light, long-sleeved clothing; mosquito-proof your home by emptying standing water and installing screens; and help your community by reporting dead birds to local health authorities. Also limit your exposure to mosquitoes during high risk dusk and nighttime.

Extensive studies have found DEET products to be effective and safe, even for children, if applied properly. Apply only to exposed skin; spray can damage clothing.

Products containing 30–50 percent DEET are most effective. Effectiveness plateaus at 40 percent. Use only outdoors and after coming indoors. Do not breathe in, swallow or get into the eyes. Do not put on wounds or broken skin.

Non-DEET repellents do not provide significant protection. A study in the New England Journal of Medicine revealed the effectiveness of botanical insecticide to be less than 20 minutes, insecticide-imregnated wrist bands to be one that celled a day and mosquito bandage to repel effective for less than 10 minutes. This is in comparison to five hours of protection from DEET products.

There is no vaccine available, so prevention is the only way to avoid the illness.

Sawyer burns with anger and hot bat

The bright spotlight on the squad's pitcher, Lipscomb's 17-9 sophomore, is already shining. The left-hander has helped the Bisons to a 7-3 record to date. Sawyer is a key part of this success. He has pitched four complete games, allowing only 19 hits and striking out 39 batters. His 2.78 earned run average is tops among the team.

Off the field, Sawyer remains a dedicated student, maintaining a 3.0 GPA while balancing his studies and pitching responsibilities. He credits his success to the support of his teammates and the guidance of his coaches. "I couldn't do it without them," he says. "They push me to work hard and never give up."
White House attacks one of its own

The Bush administration has found itself in the uncomfortable position of having a partisan agenda. Consider, for example, the administration's stance on the Iraq War.

If you're either with or against the war, the administration's story is, by and large, the same: one of the facts, it seems, is that the president is right, and the congressmen are wrong.

In the case of the Iraq War, the administration has been able to present a coherent narrative that is consistent with the president's foreign policy strategy. By framing the debate in terms of national security, the administration has been able to paint a picture of the president as a strong leader who is committed to protecting the country.

The administration's narrative has been bolstered by the fact that the president has been able to present a coherent plan for the war. The administration's plan, which is rooted in the belief that military force is the best way to achieve its goals, has been able to win support from both within the administration and from the public.

In the face of criticism, the administration has been able to present a powerful argument that the president's plan is the best way to achieve its goals. By focusing on the need for a strong leader who is able to make tough decisions, the administration has been able to present a narrative that is consistent with the president's foreign policy strategy.

Universal crisis

Once again, the Student Government Association is waging its tuition money on meeting with the administration to discuss the crisis that is ongoing.

My complaint comes back to me at a time when the economy is crumbling, when good-paying jobs are hard to come by and monthly payments are rising, working has become vital for surviving our college years.

I realize the free-campfire, free-pizza, free-food and tuition is hardly an easy task, so we have to work two jobs to find the necessary funding to simply keep on going. While we are struggling to make ends meet, some public figures at the university will decide that a tuition increase will be necessary for our own good to fund events that most of us will not be able to attend, or a new gym with a price tag that we can only see in our dreams while we drive to classes or work. I do not need a gym or dates at Universal Studios with my fellow UCF students, and most of all I do not need a new tuition increase. If people want those things, let them do so in small groups or personally.

Why should our collective tuition, money that I earned working between classes, be wasted on a few lucky ones who have the luxury of not having to work? While I balance my budget at the end of every month, I will once again ask that I do not have any money left to lose, I know somebody who does' cause I've been a registered Republican. I don't have any money left to lose, I know somebody who does' cause I've been a registered Republican.

Darkest Light

Mohamed el Baradei said it best when he replied to Dick Cheney’s negative comments toward the attack Iraq because of anti-terror adviser, who said Bush wanted to appease Al Qaeda threats before Sept. 11 and tried to create a link between the two, adding, he [the president] had the chance to take Osama Bin Laden out. Unfortunatly, most people still believe Saddam Hussein attacked us on Sept. 11. We’ve got to much faith in Bush now as we are much in error, it’s time to stand up for what we feel is right. Scriver reporter will tell the truth. I think Mohamed al Baradei said it best when he replied to Cheney. The writer appears to be one of the most shocking of all are the recent comments from Richard Clarke, the ex-White House anti-terror adviser, who said Bush wanted to concentrate on the terrorist threat and not Iraq, which he believed was a distraction from the true threat of Al Qaeda posed.

Only idle will tell if Zapatero is serious about this issue in Europe and not in this country.

The writer then ends his letter on this statement: “We have to ask ourselves if Al Qaeda would like to see a regime change in America this coming election.”

Since John Kerry has already stated that he would not stay the course in Iraq, are the voters in the United States supposed to expect Bush to just stop Al Qaeda? This notion is ridiculous and a rejection of our long-standing democratic principles.

I think the writer is going to be the judge. Is it true or false? Is it true or false? Or is it true or false? Or is it true or false?

Light before election day

This is a letter in response to the letter titled “Darkest before dawn” [Reader Views, March 22]. I believe the writer is not giving the votes of Spain enough credit for electing the Socialist Party. The writer believes somehow that José María Aznar’s Popular Party was a show in before the bombings. It was only just before the bombings that the Popular Party enjoyed a 5 percent lead in the polls in what was otherwise a split electorate.

The writer concludes that the newly elected Socialist government “wishes to give Al Qaeda its nastiest victory on a silver platter by assassinating that Spain will be abandoning its allies and rolling out its troopers from Iraq.”

However, the Socialist Party campaigned on this time throughout the election and the new prime minister, José Luis Rodríguez Zapatero, has remarked that he wanted to concentrate on the terrorist threat and not Iraq, which he believed was a distraction from the true threat that Al Qaeda posed.

Only idle will tell if Zapatero is serious about this change in policy or if he is attempting to appease Al Qaeda. This idea that the war and terrorism are two separate things is a serious issue in Europe and not in this country.

The writer then ends his letter on this statement: “We have to ask ourselves if Al Qaeda would like to see a regime change in America this coming election.”

From all,

No, it can’t be. I love not having to think. I love listening to Bush and believing everything he says, without question or regard for facts.

Lastly, everything I believed was once questioned and disproved as lies, though. Could those accusations be coming from an extreme-left-wing group run by Hillary Clinton? It appears these accusations have come from top-level persons such as David Kay, the former U.S. National chief weapons inspector, who said, “There were, and am no WMDs in Iraq.” Former Treasury Secretary Paul O’Neill came out publically saying the Bush administration planned to attack Iraq even before Sept. 11, 2001. Mohammed al Baradei, head of the International Atomic Energy Agency publicly came out and said that he was pretty convinced that Iraq had not resumed its nuclear weapons program.

Director interview — sort of

A minute and six seconds with Kevin Smith

Bonowicz shocks us all by not asking an Affleck question

BRETT RYAN BONOWICZ

In promotion for his new film, Jersey Girl, filmmaker Kevin Smith participated in a college conference call at 2 p.m. March 28.

Thomason: I’m fond of Ben Affleck, I know he’s going to be at the conference and so forth, but I didn’t know whether to bring it up or not.

Then there was the real question which was, "Workaholic Dean, what’s your favorite film?"

The University of Cincinnati’s film professor, Ryan Bonowicz, was_sequences that set up a controversy with

Kevin, definitely. While he was not present at the conference, his attitude is clear. He is happy and unafraid to reveal his heart. While not as comedic as his character in Clerks, he is one of the best indie film makers of our time. His film, Jersey Girl, is a remake of a 1955 movie by the same name, the movie has changed with the release of his sixth film, Jersey Girl; Bonowicz shocks us all by not asking an Affleck question.

If you’re reading this, you probably already know the plot, so I don’t have to say much about that except that it was good, or even decent for that matter. If you’ve seen one, you’ve seen them all and you’ll probably like this one just as much as the last one. I’m not saying that because I’m a workaholic, but because I am.

Jersey Girl is in many ways the anti-Clint Eastwood. This is the film where the hero is an undercover cop, the bad guy is a cop, and the plot is a crime story. This is not the film for those who prefer their movie stars to be heroes. It is the film for those who enjoy watching a story unfold without having to care about the characters.

There is only one word for Ben’s performance in this film — affable. He is a man who can be an extraordinary actor if he’s given the right material, which Smith did for him. He is the perfect director holding the reigns. As Affleck, Smith shows a man broken on the inside with a deadpan style of humor. His performance in this film is one of his best to date.

The gang, which included George Clooney, Morgan Freeman, and the ever-present John Travolta, is surrounded by the people that have been his trusted posse. He’s just another man coping with the loss of a loved one, and without a heart, a beating one, he’ll have a heart, a beating one, and a whole new way of looking at the world.

Dear Kevin, How are you?

Kevin, how are you?"— Ramona Flowers

Trite plot drags Jersey

Film: Jersey

Criticism: The trite plot drags Jersey. Its story is predictably predictable, yet the layered complexity of Chasing Amy or even the brush Catholicism innuendos of Dogma.

Jersey's biggest flaw is its simplicity in execution. While I'm in favor of Smith's debut film, its forte is clearly comedic, and the majority of Jersey's jokes fall flat. Sorry to bring it up again, but Chasing Amy is an emotionally exhausting drama and an uproarious comedy at the same time, weaving the two elements perfectly without overshadowing Smith's talents as a comedic actress.

But Smith has lost that edge with Jersey Girl. There are some gems here and there—certainly by Jason Lee. Matt Damon and a surprise Hollywood superstar show Smith, Jennifer Lopez ("Gobble gobble"...somewhat here's a fan-tastic in her small role, displaying more range in her 15 minutes than in her entire body of previous work. But if this is Smith's "mature" film, I'll take the "dick and fart jokes" and constant stream of fresh humor in Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back over this feel-good pap any day.

Smith's personal story

Film: Jersey

Criticism: Just characters poking at the mishmash of pop culture, these are real people dealing with real issues like parenthood, life, death, and love.

For the first time in his career, Smith has enacted an American-jugger Wimoz Zsigmond. Here, Zsigmond has created the most consistently entertaining images in a Smith film. Simple setups have a new energy, and the script has not failed Smith before. The camera work is not distracting, and its format actually enhances the narrative instead of hindering it. Though the film is not peppered with his usual obscurities, Smith proves here that his wit was never too far from his foot mouth. His wordplay is just as sharp here, if not sharper than in her entire body of previous work.

Jersey Girl will ultimately be remembered as something of an oddity in the career of Kevin Smith. A bridge between his acknowledged and his Horrible Bosses film next film in the comic book adaptation The Green Hornet. Jersey Girl is an alcohol and a half-mark for great acting, sharp dialogue and a story as simple as you'd think you'd heard it before, only a time from a slightly skewed angle.

2 questions for Smith

Film: Jersey

KS: Uh huh.

RRR: Who's going to be producing The Green Hornet? KS: I'm not sure yet. I met with a guy over in Los Angeles, who I know who I like quite a bit, and we sat down to talk about it. Might be him. I'm not sure.

RRR: All right. Great.

Thank you.

KS: Thanks man.

And that was it, literally thirty minutes and six seconds of time. It was likely the year before I have the chance of ever let alone to speak with Kevin Smith again. This was a unique experience in that 1 was able to meet an idol of mine. I could have asked if Al Pacino is well-endowed. I could've asked if Smith felt the digital revolution has created opportunities unavailable to his generation of filmmakers. Better still, I could have asked him if he liked Punch-Drunk Love after the Magnolia hatred he so publicly displayed. Also, there's a newer film to be found in Jersey Girl, a simple story with a big heart. It's now being done over a month later to the interview, in the wife that made him a better man and the daughter he loves more than anything in the world.

THE GREAT CATHOLIC MINDS OF AMERICA FIGHT AGAINST A FEMALE INFLUENCER... A SWEET LITTLE GEM AND A HALLMARK OF KURTZ'S CINEMA TALENT.

In Theaters March 26
After nine years without a reunion effort, Mat Kearney is finally back on the road, having reunited with beloved band mate Jordan Johnson. Their new single, "What the Water Gave Me," is a powerful reminder of the band's musical prowess and the chemistry that has kept them together for nearly two decades. In an interview with Billboard, Mat Kearney spoke about the inspiration behind the song and the band's return to the stage. "This song is about finding your way back to yourself," Kearney explained. "It's about the journey and the challenges you face along the way. But in the end, you come out stronger and more resilient than ever before." The band's return is a welcome sight for fans who have been eagerly awaiting their comeback. Mat Kearney and Jordan Johnson are set to hit the road for a series of concerts, bringing their unique brand of alternative rock to eager audiences across the country. With the release of their new album and the success of "What the Water Gave Me," it seems that the band's impact on the music scene is stronger than ever. Bonnie 'Prince' Billy • Sings Greatest Palace Music

Unique Orlando band a cornucopia of rock

RICKY SURILLO Staff Writer

As a way to reconnect old material into a new context and provide recently converted fans with a summation of an artist's work, the greatest hits album has long been a staple of rock history. But since "this" usually applies to commercially successful music, few indie bands have been in this position to release one that they want to employ.

Bonnie "Prince" Billy is one of the paradoxes of the iconoclastic Will Oldham, who also records under the alias Palace Music and his own name. The multi-millennial master of melancholy has always been regarded with the same critical fervor as a Neil Young or Leonard Cohen, but his million-selling albums have earned Oldham's status as merely a cult icon. Unfortunately, it's hard ignoring an artist such as Oldham would give (himself and his fans) a more substantial way, however, to provide liner notes and filing purposes. How ever, their dominant use is to provide a reference for an artist's catalog, so overwhelmed new fans have a comfortable starting place. It should be unfortunate and downright daunting to a group of Nashville session musicians.

With all these different sounds, styles and influences, it would seem impossible to incorporate them all into one stream and make it flow seamlessly but Mor gen Music Wedding pulls it off. Not, however, without having difficulty describing its new sound together. What better way to solve this problem than by creating a sub genre, which the band members call "post-cool."

They will run into some problems with their name, since another band wants to claim it for themselves. "Okay, just call them to a Wild West duel. You Faces and everything." Cookie said. "The band recently released a new five-song EP, which should be out this summer. If it even recorded a music video-""The Final Lines." If you catch them playing this summer, you will feeling them without their regular drummer, because Wiencek is looking for the wake. Of course, this is only temporary, but in the meantime, Shotgun Wedding hopes to get some advisable fill ins.

"We have about four drummers lined up, and they are all going to play at once." Bisas said. It may not have the same Shotgun Wedding sound, but it will still have its incredible sound. If you want to catch them live and experience the new emotion that is packed into the band's music, you can see them Saturday at a benefit show for cancer at Pandora's on the corner of University Boulevard and Deep Road. Starting at 8:00 PM. You can find out more on Shotgun Wedding at www.shotgunwedding3000.com.

Oneldrawing • The Volunteers EP

CHRISTOPHER SCHWARZ

Everybody loves the song "Everybody Loves Amazing Grace." People are asking, "Hey, isn't this a cover of Amazing Grace?" Here's what's really going on with the song. The first time we heard the song, we thought it was a completely original piece, so we decided to record it for our album. After listening to the song a few times, we realized that it was actually a cover of an older song, so we decided to recreate it. We also added some personal touches to the song, like the harmonica and the banjo, to give it our own unique spin. The song has been very well received, and we hope it will continue to be a fan favorite for many years to come.

Tears for Fears • Everybody Loves a Happy Ending

The title track from the band's upcoming album, "Everybody Loves a Happy Ending," is a nostalgic love song that reflects on the ups and downs of a relationship. The song begins with a gentle acoustic guitar melody, building to a full band sound with a catchy chorus. The lyrics are a mix of past and present, as the singer reflects on past memories and hopes for a happy ending in the future. The song has been praised for its emotional depth and relatable subject matter, and is expected to be a fan favorite.

A mission to Mars that is worth taking

Mars ILL presents positive messages about Back Booth

NICKO SCHAEFFER

The "Science and Gen "Treat" presented by Incomin Magazine and the Florida State University. Two weekends, featuring the underground hip-hop trio Mars ILL, Binkis and local DJ Captain Cooley. The Atlanta-based duo Mars ILL, featuring masCHILL on the mic and DJ producer Dan on the drums, have been embracing their artistic expressions through hip-hop for several years. They are "one of the purest hip-hop groups in the genre today," and Incomin Magazine editor Sarah Vaquero. "Their music, lyrics and stage shows are perfect examples of what quality hip-hop is all about." Never willing to be presumed by the industry, Mars ILL stays true to their origin, revolutionizing rap with simplicity, passion and a progressive sound. "Our sounds honestly reflect what our fans are too, and people appear to show that," said masCHILL. Releasing their first album, Material in 2008 broke them into the world of underground hip-hop, landing them on the cover of Southeast Conference Magazine and print in the publications Incomin Magazine, Mixtape and hip-hop. Their next album, Binkis, released last year, The Bog Blue Collar Sessions, set yet another example of a fresh and hip-hop sound opening with a rock-inspired electric guitar and symbols. ILL's latest album Black Breakthroughs features positive messages that engage the audience with lyrical expressions of the Christian faith rather than preaching. The show also features the sounds of respected Atlanta based progressive hip-hop group Rippin' Riddler, which released the well-received The Johns Begin in late 2003. Also performing will be local artists Northstar and Xiana, whose self-released project Hypothesis Photobooth Project made waves with the Orlando hip-hop fans. Local DJ Captain Cooley will be on the wheels of steel. The "Science and Gen "Treat" is being brought to Orlando in honor of the Incomin Magazine 7th Year Anniversary. Visit the web site www.incominmagazine.com to meet the group and an original hip-hop artist from The Bronx, is also known for hosting Orlando's first and longest-running underground hip-hop show, Darkside Radio, on WTKR. He started Incomin Magazine to promote quality hip-hop music and informed readers of artists that he feels should receive recognition for staying true to the roots of the culture. The magazine has become important not only in the Orlando hip-hop scene but also throughout the country. Copies of the nationally-circulated magazine will be available at the venue.

Doors will be opening at 8 p.m. Back Booth, 37 N Pine. Admission is only $8. For more information, visit www.incominmagazine.com.
The excitement of...farming brought to life in all its glory

CHRISTOPHER SCHWARZ

Relaxed March 18. Harvest Moon. A Wonderful Life is another game concept that falls into the category of ideas that sound absolutely terrible on paper. As fans of any of the previous seven games would know, Harvest Moon is a quirky series that combined all the boredom of being a farmer with the sexual desire of a Japanese dating-simulator audience. Anthropomorphic farms and sex? Whatever. Ok, so I was off to Dr. Villar’s surgery.
Cooking with Foreman

Boxer’s grill invention is better than his career in the ring.

DUFFY HERD

Before Muhammad Ali, there were other heavyweight champions, and one such champion was a man named George Foreman. His grilling skills were just as impressive as his boxing prowess.

However, before George Foreman, there was John Foreman, and he was the founder of the George Foreman Grill. The grill was originally introduced on television, and over time, it became a household name.

The George Foreman Grill was not just for cooking meat. It was a versatile appliance that could be used for a variety of cooking tasks. People loved it for its ease of use and effectiveness. It truly was the epitome of quality on television.

The basic premise of the show was simple. We would see a celebrity standing in the kitchen, cooking a meal using the George Foreman Grill. We would see the process from start to finish, and then the dish would be served. It was a perfect example of how the grill could be used to make delicious meals.

The show was not just about cooking. It was also a platform for the celebrities to share their personal stories. Many of them would talk about their families, their childhoods, or their favorite recipes.

The show was a hit, and it continued for many years. People continued to tune in to watch the celebrities grill up some delicious meals.

In conclusion, the George Foreman Grill is a testament to the power of innovation and the ability of a great product to change the way we cook. It is a reminder that sometimes, the most unexpected things can become our favorites.

In this case outrage could have just fueled the product's viability. Despite the boycott, Pimp Juice went on to sell 1 million units in its first three months on the market, an impressive figure by industry standards.

The success of products like Pimp Juice raises concerns for some fans. "Some hip-hop artists are using capitalization and consumption to reach the American Dream," said Troy Snoddy, webmaster for UCAP's hip-hop club The Elements. "And in the process, they are, in some people's opinions, turning down hip-hop and making it seem like a fad."
