The Student Paper with the Idea

SPORTS

THE UCF football team has been wildly successful this season, winning their first six games.

NCAA rule change allows UCF to recruit 2 more basketball players

GREG GUDEN

UCF will be able to add two more "big-time" basketball recruits under new NCAA decisions to reform the controversial "one-and-done" scholarship rule. The new rule, presented during Student Senate's 10th annual Scholarship Day on Wednesday, permits the recruitment of former college basketball players with at least one year of eligibility remaining.

The new rule would allow UCF to bring in two more big-time basketball recruits for their 2023-2024 season, significantly improving the team's chances of reaching the NCAA tournament.

The shift in NCAA regulations has also prompted discussions among college basketball programs across the country, with many institutions assessing how they can capitalize on the new opportunity to secure top talent.
Florida’s universities gathered 8.2 billion in research funds last year. Of that figure, UCF raised $899.5 million, placing it second in the state in its history and three times the amount raised just three years ago.

“We’re still in the beginning stages, and we’re younger than a lot of people, but we’re growing fast,” said Tom O’Neal, the associate vice president of research at UCF.

He added that research growth is paying huge dividends to the university’s bottom line. It helps attract better faculty and students; it helps the community.

Florida’s three highest-ranked university research programs — at the University of Florida, Florida State University and the University of South Florida — all have medical programs. Somehow, UCF’s research program has had success.

“Try to be at a good few things rather than one everything,” O’Neal said.

That story is beginning to pay off.

Last year, UCF earned the state’s prestigious Center of Excellence for its photonics research, which includes a $1.2 million grant with a number of universities, applied that center’s work. UCF and the state are each expected to reap millions more toward the creation of the center.

UCF had to hope the award meant additional funding for future centers and also trimmed from the state budget.

Still, UCF’s continued research interest will generate about $25 million this year, according to Dean Nola Solomon, vice president for research.

“It’s our most mature area of research,” he said. “The second

Plato’s research has been the most significant.”

UCF researchers have noted that most people don’t realize that “almost all of the research we do is done by the students, supervised by the faculty,” O’Neal said.

Another major part of UCF’s research is conducted by the Center for Research and Education in Optics and Lasers (CREOL) — which hosts a number of corporate sponsors. CREOL is one of the top ten centers in the world.

UCF’s Solar Energy Center also works as a research center by providing solar energy for the buildings on campus.

Some research is also done by the university’s biology department as well as the chemistry department.

Said O’Neal, “We really focus on creating world-class expertise in these key areas.”

He added that any area of research is crucial to the growth of the university and needs to be supported.

“It’s going to be between the sciences [and] the humanities, I think,” O’Neal said. “I think that’s the one that’s growing the most.”

As a result, O’Neal said, “we don’t have a single area. I don’t think you can’t succeed in the future without having different kinds of programs.”

A new center at the University of Florida, for example, which is the center for cancer research.

O’Neal said that research is not just about satisfying the public or the state, but also about creating a partnership with some of the best researchers in the world and then being able to contribute to our community and our needs as a society.”

“We want to stay current,” he said.

For instance, simulation and research on the human brain is also an area where UCF chooses to broaden its focus.

“Some of the locomotor’s primary goals is to diversify Floridians,” O’Neal said, “not so dependent on tourism and industry and the technology and larger base of technology here. We want a balance.”

O’Neal said, “It helps attract better people to the university who would have otherwise never thought about coming to Florida.”

Part of the research done by the university is in the field of technology incubator.

To enhance the work of the incubator, the University of Florida has also established a technology incubator.

The incubator provides one-on-one counseling and education through various seminars.

Another way to think about funding is through licensing and patents.

As of 2004, the University of Florida has licensed 150 patents and is one of the top 10 universities in the nation for licensing and patents.

Avoiding sexual battery and what to do

NASEN SOWT
Staff Writer

On a recent Sunday morning, a UCF student reported an alleged sexual battery that occurred on her off-campus apartments. On the same night, Wednesday, another woman reported a sexual assault that occurred in a different part of the campus. The National Victim Center reports that 300,000 women say they had an alleged sexual assault, while 14 to 22 percent of college women say they had a forcible rape. In his dormitory at Notre Dame University, Australian Prime Minister John Howard has apologized for the alleged prisoner abuse scandal in Iraq. The officers allegedly forced a prisoner to kneel, raise his hands above his head, and be made to face the wall for the entire night. The National Crime Victimization Survey produced by Bureau of Justice Statistics

UCF police have added this to the list of places they monitor for the many assaults that have occurred there. Many rape cases have been turned down by the district attorney's office due to a lack of evidence. In 2001, the university either made no decision on the cases within its jurisdiction or granted them to the Free Appeal Commission.

UCF officials say that almost all college students the offender has been involved in a fight with. They say that they are doing the best they can. Two former residents of the main Bagram facility, north of Kabul, in December 2002, said they had been held there for almost two years. The top general in Afghanistan, Lin Huff-Corzine, has moved to better protect the troops entered the harem. Said William Olney, the university's president and president of the student association, "Surely the complaint is the first of the hearing officer's jurisdiction. [They] have no choice but to submit. Do not attend the trial, please."

State trying to lower gas costs

In the meantime, Crist's state-issued oil companies have until June 30 to respond to the subpoena. They must supply records regarding the cost of acquisition, production, inventory, and the wholesale and retail pricing of gasoline.

Crist met with representatives of seven major oil companies in March to debate the issue. Crist later signed the Legislature to repeal a 1985 anti-competitive gas law in hopes of increasing gas-price competition in Florida.

Five/ eight rule meant to protect players

Auburn recently had two men's basketball scholarships taken away as a term of their probation, but the repeal of the "five and eight" rule lessens the impact of those scholarship losses since there is no longer a limit to the number of awards a State University may award. College basketball scouting services said they were pleased about the demise of the "five and eight" rule. Though it was created in an effort to free up scholarship slots, still, several instances seemed to demonstrate the demise of the "five and eight" rule. While it was created to protect players, many coaches and players felt that it hurt more than it helped.

"I don't think it was accomplishing what it was attempting to accomplish," Ron Wellman told the Greensboro News & Record. Wellman is the athletics director at Wake Forest University and sits on the NCAA's management council, which proposed the rule's elimination. The rule, which went into effect in August of 2001, was created to prevent players who were transferring schools from stepping into a scholarship slot when a player left. Some instances seemed to demonstrate the demise of the "five and eight" rule, such as Appalachian State University losing a scholarship slot when a player left for the NFL. Still, several instances seemed to demonstrate the value of the rule, such as Appalachian State University losing a scholarship slot when a player left for the NFL.

"What if a player leaves because he's homesick or because he's not playing time or... he deserves?" asked Fran McCaffery, basketball coach at University of North Carolina at Greensboro, in the Greensboro News & Record. Baseball receives at-large bid from UConn as well

Matt Danko • Sports Editor

The Knights go back to Tallahassee for sixth time

Central Florida's baseball team will be in Tallahassee this weekend for the sixth straight time for its season finale.

The end of the season is now just a matter of time as the Knights will be playing an at-large bid from the Atlantic Sun Conference.

When the Knights get to Tallahassee this weekend they will face their old rivals, Florida State, in the third round of the NCAA Regional.

The 2001 UConn baseball team was eliminated from the NCAA playoffs by the Florida State Seminoles in the third round, which was held in Tallahassee.

The upset loss was seen as a_devicesome Florida State fans_ to Tallahassee.

The Knights are now in the same position as the 2001 UConn baseball team and could suffer the same fate.

The connecting question is this: Will the Knights make it to Omaha in 2003 like UConn did in 2001?

The Knights have to win three straight games against Florida State in Tallahassee to make it to Omaha.

The team will have to be able to hold off Florida State, who has been dominating the state the last few years, and get past a Florida State team that is looking to get back to the College World Series.

The Knights are now at 27-25 with one regular season game left to play.

The team needs to win two of the three games coming up against Florida State to make it to the NCAA Regional.

The team had three basemen named to the All-Conference team for the third time in four years.

The coaches have to decide who will start at shortstop, third, and second base with Matt Fox and Kyle Bono becoming dominating stars.

Fox and Bono are two of the best in the conference, and the Knights will be looking to get past the Seminoles this weekend.

The team needs to win the series to make it to the NCAA Regional and the chance is there if the Knights can hold off Florida State.

The Knights have a 27-25 record on the season and need to win two more games to make it to the NCAA Regional.

OU won Big XII Tournament last weekend

The Sooners clinched their second conference title in three years by defeating Texas Tech, 6-3, on Sunday to claim their first-ever Big 12 title. Oklahoma State ended their season with a 2-1 victory over Kansas State to take third place.

Knights respond right away against Gardner-Webb

Matt Fox finished six innings of work with seven strikeouts. Fox picked up his 1st win of the season, and became only the third Knight to reach that plateau. Justin Pope and Ben Cowley are the only other UNF pitchers to have won more games in a season than Fox.

OU will face off against the Knights in the next round of the NCAA tournament, after defeating Florida Atlantic, 4-3, on Saturday.

Intelligence of UCF students

On April 13, the Future published a letter I wrote about "Afrohate," the controversy in which UCF Board of Trustees Chair Dick Muskin and President John Hitt dismissed Afrohraign as support of one basketball player, Dwyane Wade. My letter referred to an editorial by Professor Keith Martin, who was concerned actions like "Afrohate" might encourage others to make "UCF more diverse, inclusive, and culturally sensitive.

Seven letter writers then alleged Martin "acetified" history of racism. Since these accusations missed Martin's point, I supposed these writers "should sign up for one of Oklahomas classes to improve their reading comprehension." One of those writers, Chris Bradley, took umbrage with this suggestion. Grandly confounding himself with the entire student body, Buckley, in a May 1st letter, characterized my suggestion to these few writers as a "pervasive generalization" which implied all students are "unconcerned about racism." To the contrary, my impression is most UCF students are highly intelligent and comprehend what they read better than Buckley has displayed himself as able to.

In addition to the reading course, Buckleytree wishes to consider placing philosophy and methodology classes in basic logic and gen-

Weber's neoclassical economic thought has been criticized for its neglect of social, cultural, and institutional factors. While Weberian economics emphasize the role of human agency in economic decision-making, his analysis has been criticized for its neglect of the role of historical and institutional contexts in shaping economic behavior. Weber's concept of rationality has been widely debated, with some arguing that it is too narrow and fails to account for the complexity of human decision-making. Others have suggested that Weber's concept of rationality can be expanded to include different forms of rationality, such as collective or cultural rationality. Weber's ideas have been applied to various economic contexts, including the study of firms, markets, and institutions. Despite its limitations, Weber's economic thought has had a significant impact on the development of economic theory and policy.
