Link between obesity, overeating and addiction found

Mounting evidence suggests chronic overeating can be a form of addiction, according to researchers at University of California, San Diego.

The researchers have found that obese mice use behaviors that engage pathways associated with cocaine and the enjoyment of pleasurable food. Even if obese mice suggest a link between overeating, obesity and addiction and could lead to treatments for people struggling with weight problems, alcohol or drug addiction.

Obesity is the second leading cause of death in the United States and is predicted to surpass smoking as the No. 1 cause within a few years.

New method developed to fight SARS

A new method to thwart the SARS virus in mice has been developed quickly using a new laboratory technique that could help international research team collaborating with the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

The new technique could help develop SARS-specific antibodies that antibodies that would help people recently exposed to the SARS virus. It can also make possible the development of a similar approach to prevent or treat other illnesses such as HIV/AIDS and hepatitis C.

Antibodies are made by special immune system cells called B cells. They are turned on by encounters to a new or repeated foreign "invader."

Mutant strain not out of preiphery

A fast-spreading mutant strain of the SARS virus has grown resistant to the antibiotics commonly used by patients. Researchers at the University of Washington School of Medicine have found at least 10 percent of the patients at sexually transmitted disease clinics in four cities had a strain resistant to the antibiotic azithromycin.

Experts say doctors should switch to penicillin or other antibiotics instead. But some of these antibiotic can cause nausea and other undesirable side effects and must be taken for a longer period of time.

SARS decreased in the United States through the 1990s, then increased 10 percent from 2000 to 2003 according to the Centers for Disease Control. Scientists still are uncertain about how mutant strain arose.

Allergic to pets? It may be your neighbor's fault

Unlikely levels of dog and cat allergens are universally present in U.S. homes, according to scientists at the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences. Their study found that although allergen levels were considerably higher in homes with an indoor dog or cat, levels associated with an increased risk of allergic sensitization were only found in homes without pets. In the homes where researchers found that dog and cat allergen levels were more prevalent, residents with dog or cat ownership was more prevalent, regardless of whether or not the household had all indoor pets. Hence, avoiding allergens by pets allergic patients in communities with high levels of allergen exposure may not be easy.

Visa restrictions decrease international science enrollment

A new study from Montana State University says tightening of visa restrictions has decreased international science enrollment in U.S. universities nationwide.

The study found that international students were the first to take a massive hit. According to MSU School of Economics, 2003 saw a decrease of 25 percent in international students compared to 2002.

Prospective international students are requested to interview at a U.S. embassy, creating a major backlog, Peterson said. Malts from Malaysian and African countries almost automatically face extra scrutiny.

The visa process is particularly acute in science and technical fields, because federal officials worry such students might gain knowledge and skills that could be used against this country.

Dishing up anti-drinking campaign for incoming freshmen

Boulder, Colo. - Freshmen at the University of Colorado this fall are getting a stiff anti-alcohol message as the school tries to crack down on binge drinking and shed its image as a party school.

After a year-and-half alcohol crisis that led to a full-blown campus rebellion and a ranking as the nation's No. 1 party school by the independent Princeton Review, campus officials are targeting drinking policies and stepped up anti-alcohol messages.

This year's freshmen will be the first to take a mandatory Web-based alcohol course that also will be the target of a $20,000 marketing campaign intended to show that binge drinking is not "normal" behavior.

Jentsch and his team also presented their findings to International Civil Aviation Organization, which is dealing with similar problems. "I am very hopeful about the outcome of this research," FAA has really taken it to hear," Jentsch said. He pointed out that NOTAMs are critical information that pilots need to be aware of. Lack of such awareness not only puts the pilots and their passengers at risk, but also can cause them to lose their license. FAA has already made progress in finding this problem. A prototype, made by a company whose name was not mentioned, actually separates the data into categories. Different government or commercial agencies will also be working on developing the tools and technology to improve the system.

"With today's technology, we don't have to use the old systems. This is in FAA agencies and...are moving in the right direction," Jentsch said. He hopes that the Team Performance Laboratory, which is ranked among the best in the world, will be asked to evaluate the new replacement technologies.

Rollover Minutes amending. "They considerately let us keep the minutes we've already paid for," she said sarcastically. "How nice of them. Soon the gas companies will be bringing about letting us keep the gas we bought past the end of the month."

Students can also make use of independent phone sim cards to weed out the best deal among different providers. Independent sim cards can often be found along major highways, just look for signs advertising generic cell phones. Jeremy Ingram works at one such shop, Hopkins and Phonics, 100 E. Almanzor. "We carry Sprint, T-Mobile and AT&T phones," he said. "This is good because if you're rejected from one you can always have run more to apply to. Also, we can make deals on the phones and beat the prices on company-controlled phones."

He also recommended the plan he uses for himself. "I've been through several and right now I like T-Mobile." he explained. "With 600 minutes for $40, free long distance, free roaming and free nights and weekends, you get the most for your moving. Also, it's an [international] company, so if you want to call, say to Czechoslovakia, you can. This is good because college students like to travel."

The price can be widely different, depending on the size and location. Generally though, renters can expect to pay anywhere from $600 to more than $3,000 a month. Still, houses have yards, and living in a house often gives the tenants more freedom — as their landlord won’t constantly be nearly like an apartment manager.

Perhaps as a result, house tenants are known to be a bit more readily, resulting in less restrictions. Orlando and several communities near UCF have instituted a two-family household ordinance. Though, this law and others like it aim to discourage large amounts of college students from renting a place and traﬃc. Still, many owners will ignore this policy as long as their ten-ants behave.

On the other hand student, some students are choosing not to rent, and renters often get more home for less money as a mortgage usually isn’t any higher than paying the monthly rent.

UCF is coming off its first-ever appearance in the second round of the NCAA tournament, and the 2004 schedule promises one of the most challenging slates in the program’s history.

"You can see that in our schedule," Colaco said. "Out of conference we play a lot of big-name programs."

The Knights open the season at home with LSU Sept. 3 in the first leg of the UCF Fall Classic. Cleveland State (Sept. 4) and IPFW (Sept. 4) round out the first three games.

UCF heads west for the second weekend of action when it plays the Knights in the BYU Soccer Classic. The University of Utah Volleyball Team will be in town Sept. 11.

Over the past few weeks, ESPN has floated hundreds of thousands of ideas with its list of the 25 greatest sports movies of the past 25 years. From iconic films to cult classics, fans and critics alike have weighed in on the top films and why they belong on such a prestigious list.

While everyone continues to argue about the greatest sports movies, there are a few sports movies that are simply so bad, that just in the midst of these sports movies that are so bad, people can’t help but laugh at the absurdity.

Watch out Canes, Fl is gunning for the top

For my part, I’ve always figured that since I grew up watching the Florida Gators, then Florida is my fan share of visibility.

The majority of my friends were Miami Hurricanes fans, so I’m pretty familiar with vivid recounts of their college football talent as well.

But when Florida International University football players were arrested last week for resembling armed robbers and paint-spraying a student dorm, it was somewhat bizarre, as absurd as reading that one of them was arrested for stealing overpriced chocolate with a teddy bear.

I know that UCF and USF are each trying to establish itself as the No. 4 football school in Florida, and I know that Florida Atlantic University is even making a little push for national attention as well.

So when Florida International . arrested a student dorm, the news hit me. It’s like its UCF’s day to go.

This is the whole flamboyant angle last year and that didn’t get a second thought.

A good football program starts with a dedicated coach, hard-working athletes and brilliant coaches together to form a team that can compete.

Then there are those who don’t work, the team should resign to the NCAA, violations and other schools.

All kidding aside, we see professional athletes get in trouble for the most minor offenses. I mean, when one-down NFL teams.

But I will never understand why these college athletes choose to throw away their God-given talent for some other drug or alcohol. There are hundreds of thousands of kids on college campuses who will never get a chance to fulfill their dreams of being professional athletes because they’ll never give themselves a chance to fulfill their dreams.

If that’s what you’re going to do, you have to be held accountable too. I mean, you’re not just doing it for the sake of your team, you’re doing it for the sake of your dreams.

What’s even sadder is the case of Vircenjo Williams, a former quarterback, Marcus Vick, who got his college career away for a few weeks with cocaine and a few other drugs.

world-champion grappler was thrown into a violent competition in order to stop an evil network and save Denver’s cross-eyed nemesis. Despite a climactic encounter that saw Kip turn away with a ringside microphone broadcasting the network from Jax 300 and receiving no Autumn Award nominations.

2. Over the Edge (1988)

Kip successfully tackled the struts of a father/son relationship. Sylvester Stallone handles the historically underrepresented sport of arm wrestling on the map. Stallone plays Lincoln High School’s wide receiver who must win his son back from the evil father who has only recourse? Win an arm wrestling tournament in Las Vegas. Some classics never need to be rewatched.

3. Teen Wolf (1985)

Rarely does a movie perfectly capture the line between teen sports while dealing with horror. Teen Wolf didn’t even try. It literally was the time period when a werewolf played basketball and worked in a car wash. Michael J. Fox played Michaelangelo Horwitz, a high school loser who grows to new heights of popularity after he becomes a werewolf. The film captured the hearts of millions with its message that people need to be accepted for who they are.

It was a year when movie studios were pumping out his best three songs: “Ain’t Misbehavin’,” “The Boy From New York,” and “God’s Gonna Cut You Down.” The funny tale of the manager who has to deal with the team’s new manager, who happens to be a washed-up detective. A star-studded cast that is a must watch. It’s a baseball movie for baseball fans and non-fans alike. A must-watch classic.

5. Flutter (1992)

Chirping at 30,000 feet is an iniquity-eying performance as a saber-toothed tiger that dreams of being a baseball player. The story follows a saber-toothed tiger named Mittens, who is an aspiring baseball player. Mittens is always daydreaming about becoming a baseball player, but in reality, he is a saber-toothed tiger. The movie captures the spirit of determination and the love of baseball.

6. The Last Boy Scout (1991)

Bruce Willis plays a washed-up detective. Damon Wayans plays a washed-up quarterback. Halfway Bally plays a broadside. This movie holds the record for greatest use of the 3-word in the 90s. It’s a fun watch.

A high school coach joins an underdog boxing world to help save the school’s football program. This movie is a must-watch for football fans.

Final Atlantic Sun season features tough non-conference opponents on day one whereas future Conference USA foe Memphis (Sept. 10) and national power BYU (Sept. 10) loom on day two. The Cougars have won at least 20 matches in 29 of the last 30 seasons.

The Knights return 'Our "season," Colado said. "There are some very new faces, and the "x" on our back will be even bigger this season."

During the conference season, the Knights will step out of the league play going on the road to face ACC opponents Florida State (Oct. 12) and Georgia Tech (Nov. 3). The Noles defeated UCF in four games last season, while the Yellow Jackets are coming off their best year in school history with an NCAA Elite Eight appearance.

In-state rival IPFW (Oct. 9) and Florida A&M (Nov. 3) will be tough opponents as the Noles have won at least 15 of the last 19 matches in A-Sun action.

In its final season in the ASun, UCF will be looking for its fourth straight title. The Knights have won 19 straight, and 29 of its last 30 matches in conference play.

Return to the schedule after an absence in 2003 is the UCF Thanksgiving Classic as future Conference USA foe UAB (Nov. 26) and in-state rival FAU (Nov. 27) battle the Knights.

Trustees wise to put student needs first

By ANNE FLEISCHMANN

The Student Weekly, Nov. 26, 1999

President Bush is not a unifying figure. The discussion of his policies is taking all of us in different directions. Whether we support his initiatives or not, we should be thinking critically about how we define our principles. What is it that we are trying to accomplish by his actions?

In his re-election campaign, Bush is promoting the theme of national unity. However, his policies are being interpreted differently by various groups. Some see his programs as promoting the common good, while others view them as benefiting only a privileged few.

The media have been quick to label Bush as a divider. His policies have led to increased polarization among the American public. The debate over the war in Iraq is one example of this division. While some support the war, others question its validity and morality.

It is important for us to critically evaluate the actions of our elected officials. By doing so, we can ensure that our voices are heard and that our concerns are addressed. We must continue to challenge the status quo and demand accountability from those in power.

The election results will provide an opportunity to assess the effectiveness of Bush's policies. If his actions are perceived as divisive, we should hold him accountable for his failures. If, on the other hand, we believe that he is acting in the best interests of the country, we should support him in his efforts.

Let us take this opportunity to engage in meaningful dialogue and work towards a more united and progressive future.
