The UCF SmartCard is now accepted at the McDonald's and Domino's Pizza outlets at Athens Place and University Boulevard, and may be coming to more locations soon. We're in the early stages of expanding out of the Student Union and into residence halls, said Terry Hickey, the assistant director of the Student Union.

"We're working with a new bank to get more ATM machines," said Hickey. "As soon as we can get enough of them on campus, we should have one in every residence hall.

The UCF SmartCard is a debit card similar to those used at hospital campuses, which are accepted at most vending machines and stores. At UCF, it will be accepted at all residence halls, the Student Union and the Marketplace, and eventually at every location on campus that takes credit cards.

"This is just the beginning," said Hickey. "We hope to expand the availability as soon as possible, but we need the universities to help us.

The SmartCard works like a debit card. "The money goes straight from your account to the card," said Hickey. "You can use it as many times as you want, but if you use it more than you have in your account, it will be charged back to your account.

"The SmartCard is also accepted at the Student Union and Residence Halls," said Hickey. "You can use it to pay for meals, pay for classes, or pay for books. It's a great way to keep track of your finances.

Presidential Power

Political prowess can be found in issues and speeches, also in hairstyles and dress.

WHO'S HOT, WHO'S NOT?

The recent avalanche of books and articles about Michelle Obama has led to much discussion about the politics of appearance. The first lady has had a significant impact on the way women dress and style their hair, and many women are eager to follow her lead. However, not everyone agrees on the role that appearance should play in politics.

HEIDI A. DE VRIES

Since the advent of television, political attractiveness has been a factor in shaping the public's perception of candidates. However, the role of appearance in modern politics is more complex than ever before. The rise of social media has made it easier for candidates to control their image, while the impact of appearance on voters' decisions is becoming harder to quantify.

The trend of focusing on candidates' looks is not new. In the past, women in politics often found themselves under pressure to conform to traditional gender roles. However, the rise of female candidates like Michelle Obama has challenged these expectations and opened up new possibilities for women in politics. While some may see Michelle Obama's success as evidence of the growing acceptance of women in politics, others may view her as a symbol of the ongoing struggle for gender equality.

The role of appearance in modern politics is complex and multifaceted. It is shaped by cultural and social factors, as well as by the strategies of individual candidates. Ultimately, the impact of appearance on voters' decisions is a matter of ongoing debate and discussion.

Elvis may be dead, but that doesn't mean he can't help stop heart disease.

Twenty-four UCF teams are raising money for the American Heart Association Heart
Walk to fight heart disease and stroke in Central Florida.

Though many of the teams were holding bake sales or col­ cecting spare change to meet their fundraising goals, the UCF Marketing Department has assigned the goal of The King. Two interns have been putting Elvis to make the cash.

"We kind of go a little loop sometime," advertising-public relation major Amy Schwartz said. She and digital media/graphic design major Jim Sickles have been changing people $10 cents for a photo with a cardboard cutout of Elvis himself. With a sign that hang­s around Kim Alford's wife, who works at the office, which already was home to the life-size cutout of Elvis, Schwartz said.

"They became accustomed to occa­ cional computer problems that were holding Elvis to make the cash.

"We kinda go a little loopy sometimes," Sickles joked.

That's when they pasted a picture of Alford over Elvis's face. Amused by their ingenuty, the two women decided to drag the cutout across campus to show their handiwork with Alford's wife, who works in another department.

"Along the way, however, they encountered people who stopped employees leaving for the Heart Walk.

"We've been raising for a month, and we have until September to turn in the money, so I think we're going to make the gains," Hoffman said. The team plan to continue its bake sales and shirt sales and already has

For this summer, Greece is the word

Graduate dishes on working at Olympics.

Arin Sugarman is one of seven UCF students given the opportunity to put their recently earned degree to the test in Athens, Greece, where they will be part of the hospitality team serving Olympic athletes. This is the first part of her running diary from the Games.

When an American girl first sets foot on foreign soil, she can be scared, excited and unsure of what to expect. When I arrived in Genova, Italy, I realized that everything present from my dad and which were constructed when I arrived in Genova, is the first part of her running diary from the Games.

I was also surprised to find some buildings on the outside of historic residences and government buildings, many of which were constructed before modern electricity. I also found out that the cobblestone streets run in many different directions, which is very different than the grid system we have come to appreciate in America. Greek history is found on almost every corner of any large city and are often ornate and filled with beautiful works of art.

Even the pace of life is different. The first-person world we have come to expect in America is very different from the slow, leisurely pace of Europe. Most Europeans will take breaks in the middle of the day to enjoy a nice lunch or rest before returning to work. Even major businesses, banks and stores close so the locals can enjoy this tradition, which might shock the average American who is accustomed to businesses following strict work hours.

The only Europeans I have found to be in a hurry are the cab drivers who roam the winding alleys and narrow streets. Many times I held on to the side of a car beaches and crystal-clear water.

Nevertheless, the accommodations to the food I was used to were significant. Even the pace of life is different. Dare I dream?
How I've longed to be ESPN's Ron Burgundy
I've never been a big fan of reality television.

In fact, I downright loathe it. The Steve Irwin Spinoff and Blow Out are just three of the shows I hate most. They are the filmic musical, Ali and Steve Urkel. They might have been characters on incredibly cloying sitcoms, but at least they were not created.

That's why ESPN has always been my service. The only reality it offers is sports. But then a year ago ESPN threw me into the marvel and lost a huge chunk of its network's integrity when itเปลоed an American Dream Job.

The promises, much like every other piece of reality nonsense on TV, is to find a few discounted unemployed crotchety old men for an anchor spot on SportsCenter, and a brand new Manhattan.

I admit I watched every episode last season. The comedy was amazing.

Watching these losers politely battle their way into the stratosphere, like they were friends was almost as entertaining as when they display their enormous lack of talent.

I'll also admit a few times I had a bit of a chip on my shoulder when it comes to Miami. Last year the Hurricanes lost to Tampa on Oct. 4, causing for the show's premiere season. When people I was watching UCF football barely — and I mean barely — pull off a win over Buffalo.

Basically, I chose to stay in Orlando and watch my Knights beat the worst team in the nation in the ugliest game I've ever seen instead of chasing a chance to fulfill my sports anchor dreams.

If my name is Ashley and I'm a complete moron.

But now the chance is back. This Friday at MGM Studios in Orlando, ESPN is casting for the second reason of Dream Job. Thousands of Central Florida hopefuls will be auditioning horribly contrived sports clichés.

"I know I'm a complete moron," joked Bowden, "I'm not the only one to make it, I guess."

The crop of losers that went to the coast included some hilariously ridiculous characters.

Anchorman was one ridiculous story. The movie and it only came out a few weeks ago, but I think Ferrell might have found his inspiration watching some of the DMV's cast members. Who are the kids? Put me in that same situation and I'll probably come off looking like a complete moron, too. If I'm going to do it in Florida, though, I'd rather do it with some flair.

Maybe I'll grow a porn-star mustache or I'll wear a pair of khaki chaps. Maybe I'll talk the entire time with a horrible German accent or maybe I'll mimic my parts. Maybe I'll bring a true sweater vest and hammer down on my speech, or maybe I'll just recite lines from Anchorman the entire time.

Maybe I'll grow a porn-star mustache or I'll wear a pair of khaki chaps. Maybe I'll talk the entire time with a horrible German accent or maybe I'll mimic my parts. Maybe I'll bring a true sweater vest and hammer down on my speech, or maybe I'll just recite lines from Anchorman the entire time.

If you're a big fan of reality shows, this might be your chance. Maybe I'll do it, and I'll probably come off looking like a complete moron, too. If I'm going to do it in Florida, though, I'd rather do it with some flair.

Miami enrolls a felon while Florida suspends scullers

Conference with Miami to join the ACC.
North Carolina State was picked seventh, with Georgia Tech, Wake Forest, North Carolina and Duke rounding out the field.
Miami and Virginia Tech officially joined the ACC on July 1, leaving the Big East Conference in a contentious process that ended last summer. Boston College will become the ACC’s 12th member next year, giving the league the number of teams required for a lucrative conference title game.

The ambitious plan by ACC commissioner John Swofford was designed to make the league — once known as a basketball conference — the nation’s best in football. At the very least, it has created an interesting race for the title and bowl berths this year.

The league gets two of the nation’s most successful programs in the past five years in Georgia Tech — coming off two-team races for the title and bowl victories. Each plea resulted in a different and unique case.

In addition to Florida State, the new additions will face a league with five other teams — Virginia, Clemson, Maryland, N.C. State and Georgia Tech — coming off good seasons.

I’m not looking forward to your being a hero because it’s not the right time to be a hero. — Coach Larry Coker

Several coaches have said Florida State’s arrival in the ACC before the 1992 season forced the rest of the league to improve to bridge the gap between the programs. This year’s expansion could produce a similar result, they said.

“I think everybody in the conference will get better because everybody will want to be better,” Virginia Tech Coach Frank Beamer said.

If the end you’ve just got to be able to beat Florida State and Miami,” I think we’re probably getting closer all the time ... But if you don’t tell you, when you line up against Miami, you’ve got work to do.

This year, competition for bowl berths will be intense.

Fortunately, adding two more teams, the league still has only six bowl bids.

Last year, Georgia Tech earned a bowl invitation in 2003, while Virginia and N.C. State earned invitations at No. 54. Those records probably won’t be good enough to make it to a bid in 2004.

“Big, like the Kentucky Derby” Maryland Coach Ralph Friedgen said. “There’s a lot of good horses in this race. That’s what it makes it such a good race.”

Cram criminal will enroll

Miami — Miami will admit top recruit Willie Williams, but will impose tough conditions on the star line backer who has a lengthy arrest record the school was unaware of when it offered him a scholarship.

In a letter announcing the decision, university president Donna Shalala said the school has “placed the bar high” for Williams, considered the top high-school line backer by many recruiting services.

“There will be academic conditions that he must meet to play football at Miami,” Shalala wrote in the letter refused to the campus community Tuesday. Additionally, he will participate in a program that he provides for all athletes that offers mentoring, constructive counseling and monitoring of their behavior — both on and off campus.

Williams’ attorney, Paul Lazarus, said he is “thrilled” over Miami’s acceptance of his client and agrees with the conditions the school imposed.

“I think that will be the best thing for him,” Lazarus said. “I expect him to fulfill all of his obligations to all segments of society.”

Athletic Director Paul Dee and Coach Larry Coker scheduled a news conference later Tuesday, with Williams expected to attend.

Capers led UCF in receiving in 2003

Winning coach. He did a good job, and now it's my job to make sure that I can continue the way he left off and try to take them to another level.

The Knights plan to go with senior Chris Capers and Huggins as the team's starting tandem for the second straight year. In 2003, both were asked to take on the huge job of replacing former starting receivers Doug Gaber and Jimmy Fryzel. As both receivers soon learned, replacing them was not going to be simple.

As it turned out, neither receiver had a great 2003 season due to the inconsistencies of the Knights' offense, namely the quarterback position. This year, Capers and Huggins are both eager to get cut on the field and prove to everyone what they are truly capable of.

After leading the team in both receptions (67) and yards (1080) and touchdowns (7) in 2003, Capers is being looked upon to play a huge role in the offense since, in contrast to last season, the Knights hope to see Capers use his deep speed more often and make bigger plays. Last year he averaged 4.7 yards per catch, the lowest average of any current wide receiver or who caught more than 10 receptions.

Huggins is another player expected to make a step forward. After catching only 26 passes for 357 yards and no touchdowns last year, he will be looked upon to play a more significant role on offense and, according to him, dominate the No. 2 receiver position.

With both Huggins and Capers playing together for so long and having spent the majority of their football lives playing on the field, Huggins says it is only natural for them to do well together.

"We just know everything about each other since we've been together for so long," Huggins said. "We're always trying to encourage each other. If we make good plays, we congratulate each other. We make each other feel good, and then when we're down, we try to pick each other up. We're out there for each other."

Another receiver who excites the coaches is junior Brandon Marshall. In 2003, he showed signs of potential, finishing the season with 26 receptions for 377 yards, along with a pair of touchdowns. In the game against FAU, Marshall showed his capabilities by compiling 104 yards on five receptions, including a 79-yard touchdown catch in the second quarter.

The Knights believe running a balanced offense will provide the passing game with more opportunities for big plays. However, they know it won't be easy without the area of former UCF quarterback Ryan Schmidlen.

"You can't replace a Ryan Schmidlen," Huggins said. "I mean, he was like one of the greatest quarterbacks other than Daunte [Culpepper], to come through Central Florida. But I think our offense this year complements our quarterbacks, because it mixes in the run and the pass. We have mobile quarterbacks this year, and that's a big plus we didn't have last year."

Also looking to contribute to the offense in 2004 is sophomore receiver Mike Walker. As a freshman he caught 21 receptions for 377 yards. According to the coaching staff, Walker has the potential to be one of the best receivers on the team when all is said and done.

Andre Sumpter, who is coming off a season-ending knee injury, will also play a larger role in the passing game. He is considered to be very talented, but how well he recovers from his injury is the big question. The answer will determine just how much he plays.

Sophomore Brooks Turner and senior Al Peterson are also on the WR depth chart, and will compete for playing time. Freshman Sergio Jussian and Chris Nunez are also penciled in to see time.

The possibility of how good this receiving core can be in 2004 has become a pleasant distraction for McCarthy. He says just thinking about it causes him to get all wound up.

"I'm so excited about this group that I'm working with that it's hard for me to sleep at night," McCarthy said. "I like them because they want to be the best, they want to be together, they compete against each other and they push each other. They listen to what you tell them because they believe in what you're saying. It's just a pleasure to work with these guys."

Lance Armstrong: A true poster boy

It is a time when athletes are treated as gods and goddesses, and the modern-day heroes of society are athletes. Yet, few actually live up to the admiration their fans pour on them.

Most of these fans see their heroes as superstars. Their lives are different and so is their life. There is a lot more to be said about their lives.

I'm going to talk about Lance Armstrong. He is one of the most famous athletes in the world. He is a cancer survivor and has won several races. He is also known as a dedicated athlete.

Still, amidst the prima donnas, Armstrong has been able to reach the top of his game. He has won many races and has been a role model for others.

Lance Armstrong is a man who has overcome the odds and become one of the most famous athletes in the world. He is a man who has fought against cancer and has become a symbol of hope for others.

I disagree with the claims that Armstrong is not as good as he seems. He has worked hard to become one of the best athletes in the world.
