Okay, it's really more of a copy than a clone. And it's a copy of a document not you. But wouldn't it be cool if it was a clone? Yeah, we thought so, too.

In the meantime, we've made it easy to make copies anywhere on campus.

A medical school student who jumped to his death after apparently apologizing for his perceived failings has been named as Robert Howard, 28, leaving behind a note that contained no clue to his motive. The suicide comes in the wake of a recent spate of tragic deaths among students who have struggled with depression and other mental health issues.

The student, a second-year medical student at the University of California, San Francisco, was found dead on a rooftop late Monday night. The medical school has not released the name of the student or any details about the suicide. However, a source familiar with the situation said that the student had been struggling with depression and other mental health issues.

The suicide is the latest in a series of tragic deaths among medical students who have struggled with depression and other mental health issues. In recent months, several students have died by suicide, including a medical student at the University of California, San Francisco, who was found dead in her dorm room earlier this month.

The student’s family has not yet released a statement about the suicide. However, a source close to the family said that they were devastated by the news and were struggling to come to terms with the loss.

The University of California, San Francisco, has launched a crisis intervention program for students who are struggling with mental health issues. The program provides counseling and other support services to students who are in crisis.

In addition to the University of California, San Francisco, several other medical schools have launched crisis intervention programs for students who are struggling with mental health issues. These programs are designed to help students who are in crisis and to prevent future tragedies.

It is not clear what precipitated the student’s suicide. However, the medical school has indicated that the student had been struggling with depression and other mental health issues. The school has also indicated that the student had been receiving counseling and other support services.

The student’s family has requested privacy and has asked that the media respect their privacy. The family has also asked that the media not publish information about the student’s identity or any details about the suicide.

The University of California, San Francisco, has indicated that it will continue to provide support services to students who are struggling with mental health issues. The school has also indicated that it will continue to monitor the situation and to provide support to students who are in crisis.

The student’s family has indicated that they are seeking answers and that they will continue to seek justice for their loved one. The family has also indicated that they will continue to fight for change and to raise awareness about the issues that led to the student’s suicide.

universities have an agreement that their students can check out books from any university in the system.

Hundreds use this service each year at UCF, Scharf said. Student enrollment was about 23,000. Scharf said she did not know how many students were fined library late fees.

Some students have tried to spread the system by registering for summer classes they didn’t intend to take and dropping them during the Add/Drop period. Scharf said the library has caught on to this play and has begun checking the list of enrolled students each week during the summer. They frequently update the list, she added, to catch those attempting to “beat the system.”

University lawyers actually looked through the contracts to see if the library would be able to proceed against students who aren’t currently enrolled. However, the lawyers determined that to provide the access would be in violation of the contracts.

“The contract is based on exact enrollment figures,” Scharf said. “So if you’re in a business, downtown, our contracts don’t allow people to use our databases for non-educational use.”

The library doesn’t review items over the phone either. To maintain the integrity of the contract and the correct title, it’s easier to get the student to do it online or if we have the book in front of us,” Scharf said.

“People think it’s the library’s responsibility to find the book. We just want the book back,” Scharf said. “We really don’t want the fine, we want the book back. We’re not in the business of collecting money.”

The library fine fee of $0.25 per late item was set by state laws more than 10 years ago. Since the school has a list of Trustees, the library has had the opportunity to recommend a change to the fee. However, no state university has yet changed its library fee. “We really don’t want the fine, we want the book back,” Scharf said. “We’re not in the business of collecting money.”

The library fees aren’t even collected, she said. If not returned or late, they are paid to the Cashier’s Office. Lost book fees, on the other hand, are collected and the library can use its databases for non-educational use.

“We really don’t want the fine, we want the book back. We’re not in the business of collecting money.”

Scharf said the library performs the book to the money fulfillment. “To process it and everything is lost time and that’s lost opportunity,” Scharf said. “That’s the real cost, the loss of opportunity.”

Charley elicits homesickness

Arts Simmons is one of seven UCF graduates given the opportunity to put his recently earned degree to the test in Athens, Greece, where he is a part of the hospitality team serving Olympic guests.

As I write this diary entry, it has been one week since the Opening Ceremonies and each day gets more exciting. The main draw of the Olympic Village is warming with the world's best athletes, and I'm lucky enough to be rubbing elbows with them.

There have been some celebrity sightings, I've been quoted in the New York Times to congratulate Michael Phelps on a job well done, and we are happy to know that story about what that person did for hospitality or where they were last sighted is the Olympic Village.

Still, nothing compares to being a spectator at such an event. I was able to tell a story about what that best athlete in the world's arms looked like. I was able to rub elbows with them.

The commentary is in Greek so we have to pay close attention to what's going on and try to decide what is being said. Still, I got chills the first time I saw an American win the gold and the national anthem.

Another fun part about watching the Games is that every couple of minutes someone shouts, "Oh, recognize that?" — and proceeds to tell a story about what that person did for hospitality or where they were last sighted in the Olympic Village.

Unfortunately, among all of the excitement of the games, this past week was a hard one for me. Last Saturday afternoon, the seven alumni were informed of the severity of the destruction Hurricane Charley caused. It was a wake-up call to the world's west coast and the greater Orlando area.

Hearing this news made me feel very disconnected from my family and friends. I was informed early on that the hurricane caused mostly physical changes. It was hard to digest that such a large event occurred in my hometown only two months after I left the country.

My parents moved my sister, an incoming freshman at UCF, up to Orange County on Saturday — only two days after the storm hit. I was able to talk to them on the phone and they told me of the sad, almost unreal, state of UCF's campus.

I've spent some time over the last week checking in with UCF's housing Web site and was able to see some pictures of campus after the storm. It's hard to believe that our beautiful Recreation and Wellness Center has been so severely damaged. After spending four years in a city, it's hard to imagine what it would look like after the wake of a hurricane.

I wish Orlando and UCF a quick recovery. Still, nothing compares to UCF even though I'm an American.

My time in Europe is more than halfway over and I still feel like I have a lot to do and see here. Living in another country has made me appreciate the American way and at the same time it taught me the value of having another perspective.

In one week I will only be more about myself and the world.

Burnettes fund biomedical school because the money could be matched by the state, doubling what UCF might bring in to build the center. That portion is most likely to be equally matched.

$3 million would be needed to build the original building, so the additional funds would let them significantly expand their plans.

Any creation of this new facility in biomedical sciences is a very large laboratory-intensive effort. Said Dan Holstein, vice president for University Advancement,

"This will allow us to do the following:"

Holsenbeck said the other $3 million that Little Church has raised will be used to hire faculty and buy equipment.

"He added that the exact use of how the money will be decided by the Board of Governors. University spokesman Fred Siremblie said that the board will be allocated in four annual installments of $1 million.

Holsenbeck said the new $1 million is already available and could open as soon as 2007, but will more likely be completed in four years. The site has not yet been determined.

UCF will still need to seek approval to name the college "the幸小" according to Holstein, a university needs to get approval from the state Legislature to name a college after a living person.

Though he added that this should not be a problem.

"The Legislature has never really questioned the naming of a building," Holstein said. "They really love it up to the individual university."

However, he said that naming a building sometimes get rejected due to political or personal reasons.

Still, because of new state rules, UCF can't even meet legislative approval. It may only offer suggestions to the Board of Governors.

The Board of Governors is suggesting that the state legislature pass a new law that allows CUF to name buildings.

The Burnettes gift is the second and largest one-time gift UCF has received. An additional $2 million has been donated by Board of Trustees member Karen Etz, who owns Trista, allowed UCF to build the Rosen School of Hospitality Management.

While donations like these help to fund new colleges at UCF they also bring in money from state.

The gift-matching programs might not be necessary in order to solicit donations, Holstein said.

Florida has two gift-matching programs. The Orange County facilities granting program is one.

The second program is a simple matching-gift program and is based on a graduated scale.

"For example," Holstein explained, "to get a $1 million endowed chair, you need a $4 million gift.

Bread for the hungry program is being generated by the Legislature recently funded another gift through the end of 2003.

During the board meeting, the Burnettes for their "remarkably generous gift.

"We are pleased to have great friends like the Burnettes and the program. They have had an iniv"dible impact," Holstein said.

Economy and health care or Iraq and United Nations policy?

J · should focus on getting our troops home and not sending any more.

Steven Campbell, an analyst for the Center for American Progress, said it is not clear which major, doesn’t quite agree. He describes himself as a pro-Democratic voter due to his upbringing, but still un until the presidential contest.

To be sure, according to a recent Pew Research Center survey of unconfirmed by the three-quarters of the economy now anything.

"Jobs and money equal more freedom for us, especially those of us not threatened by our parents," Campbell said. "I see a lot of talk on the issue from Kerry, about how a major part of his campaign includes dealing with that, so I’m inclined toward him for paying attention to it.

Rick agreed that the economy is crucial as well. The economy is definitely an issue, but his vote would not fall into that stuff that’s affecting us would probably won’t vote."

To him, security is the most important. That would be good for the president."

"Americans feel less secure due to the Bush administration’s foreign policy and Iraq," Oliver said. "I can’t get out of college right now."

Eck would not fall into that group this year. "I have no idea what’s going on in the world that the American people are currently concerned about. I think the war in Iraq is no idea."

George Jewett does not doubt the 55 percent bare, stating that 55 percent of Americans feel less safe since the war in Iraq."

"I don’t think we’re going to happen," Jewett said. "But I have some things that’s affecting us would probably won’t vote."

Campbell believes the lack of voting by those in his college-age group isn’t a matter of digital or issues but a matter of time and priorities.

"If I wasn’t inclined to at least have a say, I would be adding to that percentage of nonvoters," he said. "I’m very deeply involved with the petty problems in my life, and I’m not going to be worrying about my age does, and we lose focus, so we don’t know the issues, and that’s usually where the rates drop," he said.

Head, however, remains stubbornly optimistic. "Younger voters say it all in the matter of time and learning toward the Democratic party. Young people have views and the issues are sufficiently important."

"Jobs and money equal more freedom for us." — STEVEN CAMPBELL, CENTER FOR AMERICAN PROGRESS

Raising the bars

UCF's biggest rivalry is with the town around it

UCF and Marshall have only played two times in football. That even makes it twice too many.

UCF and USF have never faced off on the gridiron. That rivalry needs a lot of time.

But sometimes rivalries don't happen on the field. They stem from opposition and constant battles. It's a lot like the battle UCF football is having in its own hometown.

The city of Orlando has never had a great sports city. It can't hold a minor league baseball team, it's professional basketball franchise is inelegant at best, Sonic's fish in the middle of it all is a giant state university that only a small percentage of the student body cares about.

Orlando is like the ballyhoo table at Thanksgiving. The adults (Gator, Seminole and Hurricane fans) will smile and smile at the kids at the other table (UCF fans), but they end up ignoring them and praying for them to go away.

It's fun to be the underdog, but at some point UCF fans will have to say, "Hey this is our town. Love us or leave us."

That's the message that George O'Leary is trying to convey. It's also the message that's being delivered for the Citrus Castle to be sold out for the Sunshine Showdown.

UCF is the home opponent against West Virginia. It very well could be.

O'Leary also said that he hopes UCF fans will travel to Coral Gables to see the first two away games to get a feel of what it's like playing football fans are like.

Finally, our fun best bar talk is on the likes of Wisconsin and Penn State football ideas. These are two strong football schools with great history and tradition. Old-school UCF fans (yes, there are quite a few of them) are doing a pretty good job of trying to create tradition for UCF.

But sometimes a town's football tradition is stilldiaper-clad and crowd-sung around bars.

So what's a DCF fan supposed to do?

How about taking it to the streets! USC, UCLA, Southern California, Arizona State, Arizona, Colorado, Stanford, all of them can't take a rocket scientist to realize that there's about as much black and gold feathering local bars as Brittle India in Jessica Simpson's head.

UCF fans have a choice: They can continue to play the role of Sneaky Pete, rolling the college football broadside up it and giving it a half roll back down. On Knights could simply blow the roof in embarrassment and take the hill in the name of UCF.

There's no UCF fan in Orlando, and there's barely a flame in the area surrounding the school's back. Guarantee that when the Sept. 4 game at Wisconsin rolls around, it'll be the sad same picture every bar in the area blue and orange glistening and gold, that dreadful orange and green. Some people can't afford to go away games. That's Fine. Last time I checked, going to a bar and watching a football game on ESPN is pretty cheap. Imagine if every UCF fan in the campus area spanned were transporting bars and demanded the UCW:Wisconsin game on every TV.

Is that a far-out thought? Think about the thieves that would cause. Better yet, think about the look on all of the Steve Spurrier wet-dreaming Gator fans when they become the poor whose souls saddled around the smallest TVs in the house.

Sounds good, but it's really not that easy.

Just muster a few dozen fen from those who have been loyal to the local watering hole and tell the bar owners you want your black and gold back.

Then try the quagmires. They're delicious.

Cross country will make one last run

Men could be nice surprise in final Atlantic Sun season

ASHLEY SUNT ( Correspondent) Women’s cross country has seen its share of trials this summer.

Despite losing last year’s runner Asha Dillman to graduation, the team entered the season ranked and contended for success after finishing fourth at the Atlantic Sun Championship and fifteenth at the NCAA Regionals.

At stake in the next few weeks is another title, and the women’s cross country team is ready to take on the challenge.

Intramurals resume as planned

Charley's damage has rec services moving some sports

ANDY VASQUEZ

Mena Mansur-Wentworth, the director of Recreational and Wellness Center, said that the damage it caused will cost $2 million to $5 million and additional funds will be needed to repair the state of the art facility which opened in Janu­ary 2004.

Mansur-Wentworth says it is too early to tell, but may not be ready for the season.

"We are not sure yet if we will have the Rec Center open by the start of the Fall semester," said Mansur-Wentworth.

The Rec Center was des­tructed by Junior Donny Cook last season where he has been working and will not be ready. Mansur-Wentworth said that he will have a large pack and everyone is working together to get the Rec Center ready and meet the building's needs.

Despite Charley's impact, Mansur-Wentworth said he will have a large pack and everyone is working together to get the Rec Center ready and meet the building's needs.

"We are not sure yet if we will have the Rec Center open by the start of the Fall semester," said Mansur-Wentworth.

Intramurals resume as planned on September 8.

Mansur-Wentworth said that they will have a large pack which was also damaged in the storm.

Despite the setback in operations, all intramural and recreational activities will continue as scheduled.

The outdoor intramural activities will remain in their originally planned locations, and the indoor sports planned to take place in the Recreation Center will be relocated.

"We are working to get the Rec Center ready to have a full slate of sports," said Mansur-Wentworth.

Lee not concerned with wide receiver additions in Tampa Bay

"Hopefully they'll notice the talent starting job," knows his solid work ethic and three games, but we feel like we have a couple guys who are adequate," Pittman said in the backfield as he possess and hands.

Lee's not concerned with just hope for the best. "It's important because we..." he said.

Lee doesn't want anyone..."I'm..." Lee said.

Lee's not concerned with the additions, though, as he knows his solid work ethic and intensity on the position will be more than enough to earn him a starting job. "You just have to be..." just like being a fireman. "You got to have a little..."

The foreman Knight has not seen any action in Tampa Bay's four pre-season games this year. Lee is currently nursing a hamstring injury, adding to the depth of the Bucs' long list of..."It seems to be going in a positive direction," Lee said. "I'm ready to see what's going to happen."

Haynes needs 630 yards for record yards and eight touchdowns in 2002, Haynes gained just 774 yards and scored five times in 2003. The most impressive season yet of last season were possibly related to his enthusiasm for the Knights' offense.

"Practically the offense cut our way a lot," Haynes said. "Maybe we're a little more prepared going in knowing we were going to try and take the momentum out of the other team so we made us throw the ball to us/"

Haynes said he worked especially hard this offseason to prepare for what should be his best season yet. Haynes said he has worked hard throughout the summer and has been working out more than ever, even on his off-days.

"I'll come in and try and do stuff on the side," he said. "I'll go out to the backyard, do some get my playbook, learn it and be a technician. I push myself everyday so the gains will be easier." Leadership is also something that is being expected out of Haynes, especially from Coach C. Larry. The senior said he has no position backing, so the ball it will be done mostly by example.

"If I feel if I go out and make plays and practice everyday, then that's enough, it speaks for itself." Haynes said. "I'm not really a team player, but when I have to speak, I will." Haynes said he believed Haynes can lead the other players in not only being the leader on the field, but also being the leader in the practice room. Haynes can lead the other players in the classroom or on the practice field, and that's excellent to have.

"I'll talk coaching well and I'm ready to move out of the backfield." Haynes said. "When you're ready, the motivation does that, it was the example the last year. The games, in the classroom or on the practice field.

"There's no doubt that you have to work it out. If you're running backing backs that are ready to play and are already gone ready that your team can trust go out there," Pollard said. "I believe the best is that we are going ready and ready to go!"

An item of importance that Pollard has emphasized every day to the running backs is ball security. In 2002, the Knights offense turned the ball over to the opponent 23 times. Pollard said the running backs were part of the problem because they finished the ball 28 times, including 15 that resulted in turnovers.

As the season is right around the corner both the players and the coaches are optimistic that the Knights' running game will reach the next level. Because they are including multiple extra this year instead of the basic single back formations they used in the past, the Knights believe in offensive should be able to find different ways to get the running backs to the ball.

"We'll do a job better than we did last year," Wilcox said. "We should get more carries, as we should produce more yards, and that should make our offense a lot better and therefore, allow us to win more games off the ground."

MOVING IN? SECURE YOUR DEPOSIT!

Loosing your security deposit or being overcharged for damages at rentals around UCF is quite common. Here are 6 steps to help secure your chance of getting some or all of your deposit back and not being overcharged when you move out:

1. READ THE LEASE!
   - Look at your lease carefully. Most state that you must inspect the unit at the time of move-in.
   - If there is a deadline, do so before then.
   - Make sure you understand all of your responsibilities.

2. INSPECT EVERYTHING!
   - The landlord may provide you with a move-in inspection sheet.
   - If not, make your own list, stating existing problems within each room of the unit. Be very specific - note every major and minor, such as carpet stains or tears, condition of mattress, furniture, walls, blinds, countertops, EVERYTHING!

3. MAKE A COPY!
   - Make a copy of the completed inspection sheet.
   - Keep it safe in the same place during the duration of your lease.

4. TAKE PICTURES!
   - To further protect yourself from being charged for damages excluding those you move in, take photos of all common areas, your room, and bathroom. Photograph any current problems with the condition of the flooring, carpeting, furniture, and the lawn/Landscaping (if you are responsible for lawn upkeep). Take more pictures when you move out. Print the photos with dates!

5. INCREASE YOUR CHANCES!
   - By taking these steps, you should not be charged for pre-existing damage when you move out. And you will be able to prove which damages were there at the time you moved in, if the damages claimed against your deposit are disputed.
