Money for new school

Gifts of $24 million, $10 million continue to transform campus

ANDRES HEALY/UCF

Two major donations have put UCF in the money — by a combined $34 million.

In a demonstration of unprecedented size, Northrop Grumman Aerospace Systems gave UCF a donation worth $24 million to the Burnett Honors College. Off the gift, $3 million in potential and promised support in the coming five years is in equipment and cash. At the same time, donors of the Burnett Honors College have contributed $10 million to the design and construction of the Burnett’s new building, which will house the Burnett Honors College.

The Northrop Grumman patents and equipment are in the field of extreme ultraviolet lithography — a process expected to replace current, cost-prohibitive chip-making technology.

“This is a powerful platform to train the future scientists and engineers who are going to be at the forefront of chip-making technology,” said John Busbee, UCF’s associate vice president for marketing and university relations. “We’re thrilled to have Northrop Grumman join us.”

The school’s development efforts are expected to increase the size of chip companies’ support to 10 percent of their personnel — about a thousand of the 18,000 who work in the state.

UCF will license its technological breakthrough to individual companies that in turn will pay UCF royalty fees. Also, following the $8 million donation UCF announced the founding of the Burnett College of Biomedical Sciences during July’s Board of Trustees meeting.

The donation, made by Al and Mary Burnett of Winter Park, the benefactors whose names already grace the Burnett Honors College and the Burnett House, where the UCF president lives, will allow the school to execute its ambitious, planned life sciences building.

So many people have talked to UCF about the future that “there will be a transformational gift,” he said. It will allow us to continue to build on the momentum we have at UCF and those who will benefit from the momentum here.

“The gift is particularly valuable because the employees and the community will see the benefits here,” he said.

Late fees for absent students

HEIN A. DE VRIES/UCF

Summer reading turned into expensive business for some students who couldn’t renew their UCF Library books on time and were assessed late fees.

Students who weren’t registered for any classes during the summer semesters couldn’t access online services during the summer because their identification didn’t work for the online renewal system.

The reason for this is complex, said Meg Scharf, assistant director for Public Services at the Library.

The library renewal system is tied to research databases contracted by UCF. The contracts, Scharf said, are based on current enrollment figures.

“Just some people are really asking for it. They’re asking for it to make the process easier,” Scharf said.

Scharf said “We’re referring to the research databases like Academic Search Premier and Lexis-Nexis. These databases are provided to all students on campus and in enrolled students through an online proxy.

The databases are also required for UCF to remain an accredited institution.

Students who enrolled in classes during summer could renew books normally. “We’re even open during summer weekends,” Scharf said.

Those who didn’t take summer classes can renew their books by physically bringing the check-out form into the library — if they can prove that they are taking classes during the fall.

Students who aren’t in Orlando are out of luck and should mail their materials to the library to avoid the late fees.

There was a small amount of students who were enrolled in summer classes but weren’t in the area because they were taking remote classes.

For those students, Scharf’s recommendation is to check out library books and research materials through other public universities. All Florida state students can get check-outs from the library.

Undecideds gain clout

What matters more to swing voters: domestic or foreign?

KATE HAYWARD/UCF

Young and undecided voters may soon find themselves in the center stage in the political process, as many experts fear they will decide who becomes the next president.

That group comprises 30 million people in the electorate of the fall. Each person who is undecided is a potential swing vote.

The race across the country is very tight, and the outcome of the races across Florida is very tight,” said Audrey Jones, a UCF professor whose specialties include local politics, said “That X% or 12 percent will decide the election.

The chairman of the Orange County Republican Executive Committee, Lew Oliver, not only agrees but takes that statement very seriously.

“Every election for office every four years depends on the swing voters,” he said.

So what do swing voters ‘care’ about? That’s something some political experts don’t agree on.

Both Doug Head, a political science professor at the University of Central Florida, and Lew Oliver believe that Swing voters are focused on the same issues as the rest of the country.

Oliver strongly disagrees. “The nature of a swing voter is undecided,” he said. “They go with the winning side and make a conscious decision not to make up their minds until the last minute.”

However, all three agree that the economy and security will be the biggest issues in the upcoming presidential election.

“It is a very close election. It is a domestic election, usually the economy is the most important,” Scharf said. “This is not a foreign policy election. While I think the economy is the economy, I think this election is really about the war in Iraq and the war on terror, we think, ‘Who is the next president?’”

The former director of Homeland Security, a 19-year-old criminal justice student, believes that Swing voters are focused on the same issues as the rest of the country.

Undecideds need to mind their own business and stop small-minded people from taking the country away, she said. “We’re basically saying ‘Hey, be yourself, be who you are,’ she said. “Just don’t mess with my business and stop small-minded people from taking the country away.”

John Hitt spends his time divided between UCF and the state

STEVEN SALTOFF

Working as president of a university that’s not a state school, John Hitt’s job is always going to be a personal one. He is a university president, a legislator, a politician, and a member of the Florida state Senate. Hitt’s role as university president is to provide leadership, to set the direction of the university, and to make decisions that affect the university’s future. His role as a politician is to represent the interests of his constituents in the state legislature and to work with other elected officials to pass laws that benefit the university and the state of Florida.

Hitt is also the chairman of the Board of Regents of the University of Florida, a position that he has held since 2002. As chairman, Hitt is responsible for overseeing the university’s management and operations, and for ensuring that the university is meeting its goals.

Hitt has been a vocal advocate for the university and for higher education in Florida. He has worked closely with the state legislature to secure funding for the university, and he has been a strong supporter of initiatives to improve the quality of education in Florida.

Hoffman said that the college’s president, John Hitt, is the state’s most visible representative on the university system and the state of Florida. “President Hitt has worked with Hitt on many issues,” said Hoffman.

“President Hitt has been an active member of the Florida Board of Governors, and he has worked closely with the state legislature to secure funding for the university,” said Hoffman.

Check out books in other public university libraries; avoid fines

Over time, universities have an agreement that their students can check out books from any university in the system.

Students can use this service each year at UCF, Scharf said. Summer enrollment was about 23,000. Scharf said she did not know how many students were fined library late fees.

Some students have tried to beat the system by registering for summer classes they didn’t intend to take and dropping them during the Add/Drop period. Scharf said the library has caught on to this ploy and has begun checking the list of enrolled students each week during the summer. They frequently update the list, she added, to catch those attempting to “beat the system.”

University lawyers actually looked through the contracts to see if the library would be able to prevent students who aren’t currently enrolled from using the library. The library is planning on implementing a new system to shut down a ploy the school has had a interest. The library has put a contract in place that, if it isn’t signed, it’s easier to the student and to us if they do it online or if we have the book in front of us,” Scharf said.

The library fines fee of $20 a day per late item was set by the library. The library is planning to look through the contracts don’t allow people to use our databases for non-educational use. “We really don’t want the fine, we want the book back. We’re not in the business of collecting money,” Scharf said.

Indeed, library fines aren’t even collected, she said. “If they are paid to the Cashiers Office, Last book fines, as the other hand, are collected at the library. The library is planning for any system that would allow students requiring funds to pay late fees to buy one book from their UCF ID and not cash. Scharf said the library prefers the book to the money lost to the school has had a ID and not cash.

The library is planning to look through the contracts don’t allow people to use our databases for non-educational use. “We really don’t want the fine, we want the book back. We’re not in the business of collecting money,” Scharf said.

Indeed, library fines aren’t even collected, she said. “If they are paid to the Cashiers Office, Last book fines, as the other hand, are collected at the library. The library is planning on implementing a new system to shut down a ploy the school has had a interest. Charley elicits homesickness

Arvind Supramaniam is one of seven UCF graduates given the opportunity to put this unusually earned degree to the test in Athens, Greece, where they are part of the hospitality team serving Olympic guests.

As I write this diary entry, it has been one week since the Opening Ceremonies and each day gets more exciting. The main draw of the Olympic Village is warming with the world's best athletes, and I'm lucky enough to be rubbing shoulders with them.

There have been some celebrity sightings. I was fortunate to congratulate Michael Phelps on a job well done after he won his first gold medal. After our warmup shift, the team leaders who aren't actually attending events will get together and watch some of the Games on TV.

The commentary is in Greek so we have to pay close attention to what's going on and try to decide what is being said. Still, I got chills the first time I was an American in the gold and blue of our national anthem.

Another fun part about watching the Games is that every couple of minutes someone shouts, "Oi! Recognise me..." and proceeds to tell a story about what part of the world he or she is from while we are last sighted in the Olympic Village.

Still, no one can stop me from tuning into the Games in person. This past week I attended the women's volleyball preliminaries and it was a great feeling to be a spectator at such a world-famous event.

I wish Orlando and UCF a successful Olympics in 2008. UCF even though I'm an Engineering student.

My time in Europe is more than half over, but I will feel like I have a lot to do and see when I'm back. Living in another country has made me appreciate the American way of life, and at the same time it taught me patience and that things don't happen as quickly here. I hope that over the next six weeks I'll learn more about myself and the world.

Burnett's fund biomedical school

Because the money could be matched by the state, doubling what UCF would give, $15 million will be directed to UCF to build the college. That portion is likely to be enough to match the $30 million needed to build the building, but the additional funds will be needed to build the rest of the campus. The portion is likely to be enough to match the $30 million needed to build the building, but the additional funds will be needed to build the rest of the campus.

HGC Burnett, the university's executive director of external affairs, said he had heard from the board of UCF's Foundation only two months after the hurricane hit. I was able to talk to them on the phone and they told me of the sad, almost unreal, state of UCF's campus. I've spent some time over the last week checking in with UCF's housing Web site, and was able to see some pictures of campus after the storm. It's hard to believe that our beautiful Recreation and Wellness Center has been so severely damaged. After spending five years in a city, it's hard to imagine what it would look like after the wake of a hurricane.

Running back Alex Haynes is on pace to shatter UCF records

ASHLEY BURNS
Sports Editor

A major goal for the UCF Football team in 2006 is to become tougher and more physical. It's the concept that new Coach George O'Leary and his staff have been preaching to the players since arriving in December.

One area on the team that has been striving to become more physical during the off-season is the running back position. According to new running backs coach Brian Polian, the Knights are expecting to run the ball harder and make more yards after contact.

For the fourth straight season UCF will depend on senior tailback Alex Haynes to be its feature back, in each of his three seasons at UCF Haynes led the team in all rushing and yardage categories. Whatever the team, he always had his own becoming the school all-time leading rusher by the end of the year.

Two more exhibition games against Pennsylvania State and Palm Beach Atlantic.

John last season and traded a few parameters has changed. Bucs' Coach Jon Gruden benched Porter after Charles Lee was given a shot at the best wide receivers in the league and it's hard to deal with.

Formerly in the starting lineup at UCF, Lee has a shot to be the starting receiver with Keyshawn Johnson gone. Lee said of his new teammate.

"He did a great job for us the last couple of years. He's a very helpful, hard working, and practiced player. He was very helpful, very productive." Lee said of his new teammate.

The UCF offense has been a big contract and the bigger advantage it creates is the additional showcase for some of the more promising younger players on the team.

"That's the concept that we've been preaching to the players since the beginning of the season." Head Coach George O'Leary said. "It's to be the team of the future, and that's the way we're going to do it."
Men could be nice surprise in final Atlantic Sun season

By ASHLEY BURKS

Women's cross country has seen its share of drama this season. Despite losing last year's winner Sun Dinlima to graduation, the team headed by coach Keith McDougal has continued its success after finishing fourth at the Atlantic Sun Championship and eighth at the NCAA Regionals.

"We've had quite a bit to build on this season, especially with Sun Dinlima graduating. Although this leaves a huge void, the team has responded quite well to the challenge," McDougal said.

"We've had a lot of talent on this team this semester. The kids are very focused on the task at hand. They are working hard to achieve their goals and I'm quite confident in their ability to do so," McDougal added.

"We're very pleased with the way the season is going. We're one of the top teams in the NCAA Regionals and are looking forward to the upcoming national championships," McDougal concluded.

The 8K men's race was a close finish between a group of athletes. The next race, the 5K women's race, was won by the same athlete who finished first in the 8K.

"It was a great race. I'm happy with the outcome," McDougal said. "I think our top runners really stepped up today and we're looking forward to the upcoming season."

Intramural sports as planned

Charley's damage has rec services moving some sports

ANDY VASQUEZ

When Hurricane Charley ripped through Central Florida this summer, it's safe to say no one expected the activity centers at UCF to recover their pre-storm form so quickly.

In fact, when the storm hit, the Recreational and Wellness Center, that houses the Recreation Center, had lost $2 million to $3 million worth of equipment and was forced to repair the state-of-the-art fitness center which opened in January 2003.

Rec director Brett White and a two-man crew return to Central Florida after a week and a half virtually away from their families, which opened in January 2003.

White and the Recreation and Wellness Center staff are also looking for new locations for the fitness center, which was also damaged in the storm. While there will be a makeshift gym, it won't be as big as they have the same updated equipment.

To make up for the smaller space, they're working to find space for the next season. "Hopefully, we'll be able to work out a deal with the local gyms and the YMCA," White said. "We've fixed up and working together and this way we really can't fail.

Coach of the year and White are still going to be an impact," Gossage said. "Almost all three of the freshmen could be in the top five. We just have a lot of talent. There's no one that's on the way that's not going to be a star," Mansur-Wentworth said. "Hopefully no one is going to rush him to the conference.

The difference in last year's team and this year's young group is the depth and the surprise. We're not only number one in UCF but we were the leader as well. That year's team might come from an older year's school, but it might not come from the Class of 2004.

"Leadership doesn't always come from your best athletes," Butler said. "First year leader and he's an excellent team leader, but he's not likely to be No. 1 this year.

Butler and Gossage will most likely be the team leader. Butler will be the breaking on bigger numbers this year and White. "Brett is one of the leaders of this year's team. Look for him to be in the top five. We just have a lot of talent. There's no one that's on the way that's not going to be a star"

Lee not concerned with wide receiver additions in Tampa Bay

Tim Tebow. Also competing for spots at camp are former Detroit Linz Bill Schroeder and the Bucs’ 2006 draft round pick, Michael Clayton.

Another addition that could increase Lee’s participation in the passing game in running back Charlie Garner. Garner, who once Borough to Tampa Bay from Oakland, is a multiple threat in the backfield as he possesses the quick speed and big hands.

A few weeks ago, we saw offensive coordinator Mike Tice not use enough players at receiver in this game. But with most players would be worried about their job and the competition of the healthier wide receivers, Lee remains quietly confident that Gruden has praised the wide receiver and noted how important it is to him. “I think the most important because we would like to see these guys,” Gruden said. “In a bus game with no stress, we’ll keep it on our backs but not him.”

Lee has returned to individual work and practice and is currently nursing a hamstring injury, which is currently off 10 percent.

Haynes needs 630 yards for record

Haynes gained only 714 yards and scored just five times in 2002. The best season yet was possibly related to how others were being featured for the Knights' offense.

"People want to see me cut them up," Haynes said. "Maybe whenever they're going to try and take the momentum away from us, they're going to have to deal with us."

Haynes said he worked especially hard this offseason to prepare for what he views as his best season yet. Haynes said he has studied the NFL extensively and has been working out more than ever, even on his off-day.

"I'm going to do my best and do stuff on the kids' side. I'm going to do my best, learn it and be a technician. I push myself every day so the games will be easier."

Leadership is also something that is being expected out of Haynes, especially from Coach C. Learoy. The senior said he has no problem leading, but said it will be done mostly by example.

"If I tell them to go out and make plays and practice everyday, then that's enough, I speak for that," Haynes said. "I'm not really a mean­-type person, but when I have to speak, I will." Haynes said he believed Haynes can lead the other play­-ers just the same as he impresses on the "get out there,'' Haynes said.

As far as expectations on the field, Haynes said he has matured the past year. Haynes also said if he could do these three things which he has, things "will take care of themselves." Following Haynes on the run­ning back depth chart is under­-classman Dontavius Wil­liams. In 2003, Wil­liams finished second on the team in rushing yards (203) and rushing touchdowns (4). Because of his quick speed and still a Green: Player; Polian said he plans on using him often to spell Haynes for when he gets tired.

"Dontavius has got some abil­ity and experience, so that helps him," Polian said. "He needs to get a little better each year of all of us, but I would expect him to contribute this year. He's not going to be a drop off; he's going to have to play to have a spot on our team.

Polian has emphasized every day to the running backs in fall scrim­mages. In 2003, the Knight's offense turned the ball over to the oppo­nent 26 times. Polian said the run­ning backs were a part of the prob­lem because they fumbled the ball 29 times, including 2 that resulted in touchdowns.

As the season is right around the corner both the players and the coaches are optimistic that the Knights' running game will reach the next level. Because they are including multiple candidates this year instead of the basic single back formation they had used in the past, the Knights believe offensive backs should be able to find different ways to get the running backs the ball.

"We'll do a job better than we did last year," Wil­liams said. "We should get more carries, so we should produce more yards, and that should make us offensive all-star better and, therefore, allow us to win more games off the ground."

"Taking the ball back to the land­lord. Keep it in a safe place during the duration of your lease.

PUBLIC PRAISE AND PUBLIC MOCKERY

A s the world celebrates the 10th anniversary of September 11, it is not surprising to see the country hit harder by another terrorist attack. This time, the attacks were made on the United States and its military in Iraq and Afghanistan. The response from the American public seems to be one of unity and patriotism. However, some people are critical of the war and its impact on our lives.

One of the most notable reactions to the attacks was the public praise and public mockery of the candidates for the 2008 presidential election. Both John McCain and Barack Obama received widespread support and criticism from different groups.

The McCain campaign was praised for its positive message and its ability to unite the country. Many people saw him as a strong leader who could bring the country together. However, some people were critical of his war record and his support for the war in Iraq.

On the other hand, the Obama campaign was praised for its message of hope and change. People were drawn to his promise of a new era of hope and unity. However, some people were critical of his lack of experience in political matters.

The media played a large role in shaping public opinion of the candidates. Many news outlets praised both candidates for their ability to unite the country and to provide hope in a time of crisis. However, some outlets were critical of their policies and their ability to bring about change.

In the end, it is up to the American people to decide who they want to lead our country. While many people praised both candidates, some felt that neither offered enough change. The election results are still up in the air, but one thing is certain: the country is united in its desire for a new leader.
