The measure was introduced to lower violent crime. But many gun supporters believe this has not happened as a result of the ban.

The number of victims of violent crime is down, falling from about 30,000 in 1994 to more than 20,000 in 2003, according to the National Crime Victimization Survey from the Bureau of Justice Statistics. Violent crimes included in the survey were rape, robbery, assault and homicide. The crime rate in 2002 was at the lowest level ever recorded. Violent crimes decreased by 8 percent from 2001 to 2002, according to the Uniform Crime Reports.

Pennsylvania considers new community college

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Vocational school district officials are considering a plan to open a new community college in several areas of central and western Pennsylvania, including Harrisburg and Johnstown. The districts would be charged with overseeing the operation of the college, which would be located in a former junior high school building in Harrisburg. The proposal would also involve the formation of a community college board to oversee the operation of the new college.

Rhode Island College drops complaint against professor

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Rhode Island College has dropped a discrimination complaint against a professor who refused to discipline students who allegedly violated school rules.

The discrimination complaint stems from an incident on Feb. 19, when two students were punched by children in Rhode Island's preschool allegedly made for the pregnant woman. The two students, who had previously been suspended, were subsequently expelled from the school and ordered to pay $500 for the damage caused. The college has since announced plans to build a new school for the two students.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — A Harvard student who got into a fight with another student was arrested for assault. The student is accused of punching another student in the head and then punching the police officer who arrived on the scene.

Fees for student government meetings rise

BOSTON — Fees for student government meetings at Boston University have risen by nearly 50 percent. The increase is due to the university's decision to fund the meeting rooms, which are currently not paid for, according to BU spokesperson Mary Davis.

Meeting with players and T-shirts cause frenzy

Others were not so happy. The main activity for the participants was going onto the field and greeting players. All of the freshmen were given white T-shirts, but were never told to hang on to them. When the time came, those who did not have their shirts were not allowed to participate in the on-field greeting.

“I don’t think the money was worth it really because of how they would have us get in the field unless we had the freshmen shirt on, especially when they didn’t mention we needed the shirt to get on the field,” said Christopher Brookart, an 18-year-old biology major.

“I feel like I wasted my money, actually, because of how until it was. They could have at least told us something that 30 bucks were the strain ruined the whole experience. I could have done everything I did for free. They should have given us a warning prior to the game, especially when they told us we could leave our stuff on the buses,” he said.

Keeping some freshmen off the field was not the only unfair play. Some found the experience very unenjoyable. No water was distributed and the tailgate consisted of the freshmen sitting in the Tinker Field stands. Waiting for pizza, unable to participate in the pre-game activities on the field.

“We could have really gone anywhere if they would have told us we were just sitting in one spot,” Brookart said.

“I also think water should have been provided along with the pizza and soda since it was so hot out, and there was no water for the game. I also really had wished they could have told us the timetable and told us where to go after the game,” he added.

Another problem was the hurricane threat. Some freshmen were obligated to leave for the hurricane, none of whom were able to get a refund. Instead they were told they could stay in the student section until the game started.

“Just don’t let us be stranded, don’t let us get a refund at all,” Brookart said. “That was one thing they did tell us through the e-mails.”

He added: “I had a lot of fun and I know they meant well. Hopefully it can be better next year.”

WEST VIRGINIA 45, UCF 20

Alex Haynes posts career rushing numbers, despite UCF's sixth-straight loss

ASHLEY BURNS
Sports Editor

For the second consecutive week, UCF football fell victim to a high-powered rushing offense.

The Knights suffered a 45-20 defeat at the hands of No. 11 West Virginia Saturday. Despite gaining more than 200 yards on the ground, the Knights again took another huge step in the team's rebuilding process.

"We played a very good West Virginia team, but I think we improved in many areas," UCF Coach George O'Leary said. "I thought our defense played well today. We got a lot of pressure today, but we didn't know how to handle it."

O'Leary said that his guys were not prepared for the ground game, and that is something you can't control as a team.

"We had a few sloppy mistakes today," Haynes said. "I can't have any of those and expect to beat a top-10 team like West Virginia."

Senior tailback Alex Haynes rushed for 179 yards on 34 carries against the Mountaineers, earning WVU's top honors just seven hours, who rushed for 508 yards Haynes moved into second place on UCF's all-time rushing list.

"He is a really good running back," O'Leary said of Haynes. "But I am more pleased about the way the defenders have played. If they tackle like that, we will have good backs."

The Mountaineers were equally as dominant in the air against UCF. WVU quarterback Rich Rodriguez passed for 239 yards, Marshall threw three touchdown passes and ran another in.

While WVU dominated the possession game, UCF was merely trying to wind the losses out of their own team. Last week sophomore quarterback Steven Moffett threw for 227 yards against Wisconsin, but didn't have a chance to impress upon that as he was benched for UCF's home opener. Brandon Sumner started for the Knights, and showed considerable amounts of run right away.

"We had some competition this week in practice and I think that is something you need to stand as a team," O'Leary said. "What I did was open it up all over the place and said, 'the guy who practices best will play.' No one has really taken it and separated themselves," he said. "But what I will say is that our defense is going to win. I think we shut them down."

Sumner finished the day with only nine completions out of 22 passes for only 66 yards. The senior did complete the first UCF touchdown pass of the season, a 10-yarder to senior wideout Tavaris Capers. Sumner started for the Knights and showed considerable amounts of run right away.

MAC woes continue to pile up

Marshall gives Ohio State some heat in loss to Gators

Kris Hopkins / JEFF SHARONE

It was another forgettable weekend for the MAC with only three wins out of 42 contests. One of those wins came on Friday night as the Bobcats beat the Eastern Michigan Eagles 20-17. The Eagles scored the game's final three points of the contest, but the Bobcats were able to maintain the lead in the final two minutes of the game. Two of those points came on free kicks from the point after, and the third came on a field goal by Alex Fison. The Bobcats were unable to find the end zone, but they were able to hold the Eagles to just 17 points on the night.

For the Gators, they improved to 4-0 on the season with the win. They are now 1-0 in conference play and remain in contention for the SEC East title. Next week they face the Florida Gators in Gainesville.

UCF Edits to 0-6 after losses to Utah Valley State and Memphis

Kris Hopkins / JEFF SHARONE

The UCF volleyball team lost their third consecutive match on Friday night as they fell to the Utah Valley State Wolverines 3-0 in the Purcell Pavilion at the Kimberley on the campus of the University of Notre Dame. The match was the first of a home-and-home series between the two teams.

For the Knights, it was another tough night on the court. They are now 1-4 on the season and have lost 10 of their last 11 matches. Next week they face the Georgia Tech Yellowjackets in their final home game of the season.

After getting blasted by Wisconsin, UCF stepped up in a huge challenge at home against the third-ranked West Virginia Mountaineers. Although the Knights suffered a 45-20 setback, there were a few bright spots that Coach George O’Leary could take away from his team’s effort.

In many ways, the game was closer than the score indicated. Here’s the breakdown.

West Virginia vs. UCF

The Mountaineers moved the ball well at the start, scoring 10 points, but the Knights, who didn’t look like the team that scored 45 points in all of November. They tied West Virginia at 7 in the first quarter, and both of those were in the first 30 seconds of the game.

Turning point

Following a 77-yard touchdown run by Kyle Israel, the Mountaineers were up 14-7. Kyle Israel marched down the field 65 yards on 12 plays in 5:38, and scored a 9-yard touchdown run.

Rusher for the game

Kyle Israel had two key carries, one for 21 yards and another for 9 yards, with a total 14 carries, 65 yards, 1 touchdown rush. The Mountaineers gained 408 yards of offense, and scored four touchdowns.

Ads, not platforms, will decide election

P olitical advertisements are a staple of the political campaign process. They are used by candidates to shape public opinion and to reach voters. The results of these advertisements can be measured by increased voter turnout and support for a candidate.

However, the role of advertisements in the election process has been questioned. Some argue that advertisements are a form of advertising that does not contribute to the democratic process. Others argue that advertisements are necessary for a fair and free election.

Regardless of the merits of these arguments, it is clear that advertisements play an important role in shaping public opinion and influencing votes. As such, it is important to consider the impact of advertisements on the election process.

One way to approach this issue is to look at the impact of advertisements on voter behavior. For instance, a study by the University of California at Berkeley found that political advertisements were effective in influencing votes in both the 2000 and 2004 elections. The study found that political advertisements were more effective than campaign speeches in changing voters' opinions.

Another way to consider the impact of advertisements on the election process is to look at the impact of advertisements on voter turnout. A study by the University of Virginia found that political advertisements were effective in increasing voter turnout in the 2000 election. The study found that political advertisements were more effective in increasing voter turnout than campaign speeches.

These studies suggest that political advertisements are an important part of the election process. However, it is important to consider the potential negative effects of advertisements as well. For instance, some argue that advertisements can create a 'culture of浅薄', in which political discussions are reduced to simplistic slogans and sound bites.

It is clear that political advertisements play an important role in shaping public opinion and influencing votes. However, it is also important to consider the potential negative effects of advertisements as well. As such, it is important to continue to study the impact of advertisements on the election process.
