Two fraternities still homeless
Pi Kappa Alpha and Sigma Phi Epsilon await fire-code repairs

Members of two UCF fraternities are still counting the days until they can return to their homes - although in one case, the members for their home may be bodily breached.

The houses of both Sigma Phi Epsilon and Pi Kappa Alpha were shut down last month prior to the start of the spring semester. The houses were shut voluntarily in an effort to keep the fraternity communities clean and safe.

By Feb. voluntarily closed and moved its 39 members out while the fraternity awaits fire-code upgrades and construction impacts in the wake of damage from last summer’s Hurricane Charley. The fire-code violations turned up in an inspection last month, and were related to the removal of firewalls and partitions with a multifunctioning fire panel, said Patrick Fageol, assistant head, of volunteer housing for the fraternity.

The leg of the house is to reopen no later than Aug. 1, Fageol said. “It will be a brand new house by the time it reopens,” he said. “We’re doing as much to it.”

Pi Kappa Alpha also was forced to shut down after being found to violate of Orange County fire mandates.

According to Fageol, Pi Kappa members had already built their own spaces above bedrooms to house clandestine activities, which was a requisite to put a mattress in there,” he said.

Fr. Dario Evans came from Douglass College religion class, students become members of a sect of Judaism, including its core beliefs and the interfaith movements. The group of more than 110 students — and keep­ ing up to 20 or more — was led by Douglass Evans, 46, who said that enthusiasm and support make the sect a lot of drama and comedy. He's not to be confused with the famous actor. He had to make a decision: I had to read that story of David and Goliath and make a new reality. They said, "That is why I love humanities, I am all over the planet, I feel it in my soul for these conclusions. Churches teach good manners, knowledge, metaphor and justice isn't easy. They had no funny bone. I left them.

Not his time to expose ethics in teaching at UCF, he enjoys playing golf, doing and surpris­ ingly enough, Latin dance. I'm not Hispanic, but I love the music. It's on a four­ semester system, but I don't like it.

Evans also enjoys reading, with science fiction being his favorite genre. He is an expert in the Lord of the Rings series, both the books and the movies. His favorite book is "Dans that I like the books" he added.

More recently, he has enjoyed several travels. I try to have a room. The firm class is going to be boring.

Evans, an animated speaker, teaches about how to use developing gestural and facial languages. He spent years in the church. If he stayed in this church, he would leave. He is actually a Preacher in him. Hopefully enough, Latin dance. I'm not Hispanic, but I love the music. It's on a four­ semester system, but I don't like it.

Sick? The doctor's internet

Get online, not in line, for help 24/7 from WebMed

VANESSA FERNANDEZ Staff Writer

The UCF students who find they have a disturbing cough on a late Saturday night and have no idea what to do about it, they have a place to turn to - the Internet.

Student Health Services has a free online program called 24/7 WebMed that is dedicated to serving UCF students around the clock with any health advice they may need.

The 24/7 WebMed allows students to go online and enter their symptoms to receive medical advice 24 hours a day, seven days a week, so students don't have to wait for an appointment at the Student Health Center or during times when the center may be closed.

To access 24/7 WebMed, students should go to MyUCF at https://my.ucf.edu and log in, then click on "Health" and then on "24/7 Healthy UCF." Students are redirected to a new site where they can specify their medical condition.

For example, if you have a disturbing cough, you would look under the section entitled "head and neck" and then click on "cough." The program will ask you a few questions, including how long you've had the symptoms and if you have any other pains associated with the cough.

It will also ask for some of your medical history and will then proceed to make its diagnosis. The process should not take more than five to 10 minutes.

Students who have an extremely serious condition are advised to seek other medical assistance in addition to WebMed. If it deems the condition dangerous to your health, the program will advise you to head to the nearest hospital.

The 24/7 WebMed will not prescribe any medications, but it is not a substitute for seeing a professional healthcare provider.

The Student Health Center was first approach two years ago by UCF’s campus-based fire inspector, Paul Tinker, who specializes in building codes.

Dr. Michael Deichen, the associate director of clinical services for the Student Health Center, said, “We wanted to use the product with direct appointment, but only about 2% of these were seen, and Deichen said.

Deichen encourages all students to check out this interactive, automated program available in UCF libraries. This program found nowhere else in the country.

In both cases UCF officials assisted fraternity members in their search for housing.

Even the Vice President Tem Mangar vocalized his unhappiness at having to find another place to live on short notice.

"I’ve been catching up with a lot of friends," the sophomore nursing major said. "I was awakened at 6 a.m., and had to leave the house just four days prior to the starting semester.

But now the university also is helping fraternity members find a place to host chapter meetings. Sig Ep has been holding weekly chapter meetings inside the Communications building.

Mangar said he was disappointed that the university didn’t help the fraternity in its search for a new place. "We’re finding that the fraternity doesn’t seem to have any contact on the fire code violations."

In a separate incident, fraternity members received a letter from a local police department informing them of a fire code violation.

The program is being made available, free of charge, from DHS for another year. We are studying the product and in the process of applying for grants and publishing articles. If the relationship is mutually beneficial, DHS had indicated it would continue to supply the product.

Deichen said he considers the product a success, but not enough small number of students actually use the program. About 20% of students have made use of 24/7 WebMed. Of those number, only 10 percent requested an appointment, but only about 32 percent of those were seen.

Current vice president is mum on candidacy

DENNIS MAYO, ARNP

I recently watched a news program and heard the term "drug-food interactions." What does this mean? Should I worry if I am currently on medication?

Medications can cause many health problems, but they can be taken properly to alleviate the greatest benefit. A drug-food interaction occurs when the food you eat affects the effectiveness, the safest and/or worst actions in a medicine you're taking so the medicine can't work as it should.

The optimal effect of a drug may not be achieved and could result in an under-treater or overdose. Furthermore, because these problems can impact you from receiving the intended dosage of which is needed, your fitness may be produced if it's important to review that drug-food interactions can occur with prescription medications, non-prescription or overthe-counter medications, vitamins, minerals and herbal products.

What actions can you take?

No all medications are affected by the food, but many can be affected by what you eat and when you take them. The many medications, when taken with a meal, may not be absorbed as necessary, so they are absorbed in the stomach and inappropriately absorbed.

The food delays or changes the absorption. On the other hand, some medications are best absorbed with food, so they should be taken with a meal or snack, rather than on an empty stomach.

How to stop interactions?

It's important to read the label on the container. If you have confusion, ask your pharmacist. Know all directions, warnings and interactions precautions related to the medications and ask questions. On the label. Remember, everyone experiences medication in different ways. In some cases, it may be worse due to cause problems.

Food may change the way it should work your medication. For example, some antacids can decrease the absorption of some drugs.

Side effects are the most common reasons for taking medications. Some of these issues can cause problems if medication not taken.

Ask your pharmacist about the interaction and how to avoid it. Some medications may require taking the medication at a different time.

Antacids and calcium may interact with some medications. The interaction may cause problems with the medication or the antacid. Ask your pharmacist about the interaction and how to avoid it.

Some medications may require taking the medication at a different time.

If you have problems or experience side effects related to medications, call your health care provider immediately. It is also important to realize that many drugs may cause serious medical conditions when used with other drugs.

Are beverages a problem?

Some beverages in combine-with certain medications can cause problems and can cause addiction. So be sure to check the labels of the medications prior to combining the two. Some medications have a complete list of contraindica-tions. It's best to take most medications with water. Some in addition, alcohol should always be avoided. Alcohol actually acts as a drug. Look at the risks and benefits of taking these medications together. Sometimes, the medications may not be effective if taken with food. Seems a bit extreme, but while taking certain medications, it is usually most harmless. There are many "contraindica-tions" of alcoholic beverages such as red wine, beer and mixed drinks. A good rule is to avoid alcohol while taking any medication, unless your pharmacist or prescription tells you that the combination is acceptable. Caffeine, found in coffee, tea, cola and some other beverages, can also affect the action of some medications.

Sierra and Rosen taking it to court

Men's tennis seniors lead a veteran squad into Atlantic Sun battle

ASLEY BURK
Sports Editor

Men's tennis is playing with an advantage. Actually, this year's team is playing with four advantages.

Seniors are the key to the Knights' run at one last Atlantic Sun Conference title. And leading the way are Antonio Sierra and Rhett Rosen, two of the team's five senior leaders.

But while the doubles partners are both excelling, they're playing the same role as mentor to the younger players and leaders on the court, they're getting their jobs done in completely different fashions.

Sierra is the team's No. 1 singles competitor and was an example with his racket, quickly doing his job. Rosen, however, sets an example for his teammates not only by performing well, but by speaking his mind, too.

Regardless of their opposing natures, they are forming well, but by speaking his mind, too. That doesn't make us weaker, only stronger, and sets an example with his racket, quickly doing his job. Rosen, however, sets an example for his teammates not only by performing well, but by speaking his mind, too.

In the A-Sun, dropped the Knights to a tie for ninth in the conference, 3-4 A-Sun. Eric York, whose last-minute conference win over Belmont would have given the Knights a chance to win the conference, missed a 3-pointer at the buzzer. Anthony Williams continued his solid play with 14 blocks. Josh Peppers had 12 assists.

The Knights' next game is against Georgia State last Saturday. Against the Lady Panthers, the Knights started slow, but late in the game, Tater Allen, who had been struggling, found her stride, finishing with 11 points and a team-high 10 rebounds. The Knights, who are still not certain, will return to action at 7 p.m. Saturday to face the Dolphins in a conference preview. The game will take place at Allen Arena.

The Knights are still not certain, but Striegler knows that every game is important. "Our success has been running down around the defense, and we've been working on that for the last couple of games," he said. "That leads to transition baskets, and we need to make sure UCF basketball is all about defense.

The Knights know that the A-Sun is a defense-holding opportunity, but they also know that they need to make sure their conference play is solid. According to Striegler, "The defense is just as important in conference play as it is in conference previews. That's one of the things we've been working on.

Gators start Knights' season on sour note

While the team is already playing on sites after a string of five losses, UCF is returning to its former perch as the No. 2 team in the country. For a 10-match winning streak, the Knights have dominated the field with ease. This year, they've regained their form and confidence. The Knights' hopes to repeat are a testament to their resilience and determination.

Professors must speak properly

Our Stance

W hat is the number one problem with writing classes at UCF? Partaking, overcrowded classrooms are all major problems. If you can spell the word correctly, you think you are set for the rest of the semester. Sometimes you can understand the professor. The material isn’t too heavy, you can read the book but the class has no clue what the professor is saying due to thick accent or old pronunciation.

With this being said, aren’t we just confined at UCF. They are expecting nationwide. Every student would be in agreement that if you can’t understand what the professor is saying, you should get their money back. Why should students pay for something that they are not learning properly because of the professors. This is a serious problem.

Rep. Betty Gruen of North Dakota wants to pass a bill that does not speak English clearly. It would also punish those students who don’t learn properly. The new policy would also change priority of higher education. is the thing that is flowing correctly.” said Gruen.

Remembering Nader again

In 1988, Ralph Nader was in the political scene most definitely not the most successful. However he ran a campaign that made him famous. Nader then ran a successful campaign in 1996. The reason why Nader ran for president each time was that he found a space to talk about the issues that concern him. It was a system that didn’t come to any major

Don't rate my professors if you're a lazy student

COMMENTS

Oh, how I remember those days. Being at a new school and not really knowing which professors to take for certain classes. At first, I thought I would just use deductive reasoning. Any professor who had a last name like Xi or Suraya-zanana, I would try to avoid. Chose taught by professors with "friendly" names like Johnson or White were the ones I wanted to take.

After my first semester at the University of Kansas, I stumbled onto the Web site http://www.crowdprofessors.com. It was an open forum for students to rate their professors on different attributes such as easiness, helpfulness and even hotness. The site appeared to be an answer to my prayers. Some professors took, according to the site, were good picks. Some were not.

My next semester, I was trapped into taking a professor for business ethics who received a bad rating on the site. Yes, the class was difficult. The professor, however, was extremely helpful and great about working with you outside of class. She replied to every e-mail I sent her within hours. After that semester, I decided not to look at the site in future for help anymore. I just took classes that fit my schedule best.

Once the semester was over, I decided to go back to the site and post good feedback for my professor. I was shocked to see that many reviews of the same class had been taken down, and a lot were given bad ratings.

A lot of the responses said things such as, "His tests are not easy. You really have to know the information inside and out." Or, "You have to go to class every time to get an A."

Let's think about these statements for a second. Why would you think that you don't need to know all the information covered in class? Also, what is the point of paying more than $2,000 a semester and not going to class?

The rankings on this site moved two types of students. Students who give good reviews are students who study, go to class and probably contact the professor more than once throughout the semester outside of class. The other type are students who expect to not study or do homework and hope that professors help them in order to pass the course.

Welcome to college. Learn to study from time to time. If not, start getting used to taking notes and drinking lots of Red Bull and coffee before a test.
