Not everyone is giddy with romance on Valentine's Day. You don't need to look far to find someone who at some point has been disillusioned with the holiday. Journalist Brad Shapiro still remembers a bad high school experience. "I got stood up," he said. "She canceled an hour before the Valentine's Day banquet, on account of a rumor." His date, liberal studies major Vanessa Morabito, stands by her rationale. "I had to cancel," she explained. "I was home sick. There was no way I could have put on a dress." Ironically, Shapiro didn't even have to go to the tasting bad to get burned. Radio/television major Jason Ceballos is someone who normally enjoys Valentine's Day but has also gotten a bad taste of the occasion. "It comes to a point where you can't move. There was no way I could have put on a dress." However, there are those who revel in the holiday—lovers and, of course, retailers. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, jewelry stores sold $2.4 billion worth of merchandise just during the month of February in 2004, more than any other time of the year. That doesn't even include candy or candy sales.

The question is, if you aren't a Hallmark store and you don't engage in frequent "I love you much," how do you meet other," said history major Josslyn Stiner. "It's great for people who simply think the whole mushy aspect of Valentine's Day is just plain weird."

A day meant for love leaves singles down in the dumps.

The UCF Creed, a resound- ing reminder of the school's viSions and values, is distributed to freshmen during orientation, which gives them a sense of belonging and purpose when attending college.

On the flipside, the Creed is a fact for the new univeristy student, reminding them of the number of elements students have been handcraftetd to give them a sense of personal identity.

The second sentence is an emphasis on excellence. "We will continue to serve the university with honor," which gives a sense of purpose and direction.

"Whatever a student decides to do at his university, each should be right or not right at a time and there's no one of us," the official goal of the Creed is to promote a sense of community between students and the university.

Michigan is now offering prenatal care to all students who become pregnant, regardless of their insurance status. This includes those who are eligible for Medicaid, those who are not eligible for Medicaid, and those who are uninsured. The university has partnered with local clinics to provide care, and has also set up a dedicated hotline for students to receive support. The program is part of a broader effort to improve access to healthcare for students.

NASEM SOWT conference

Reducing tooth decay may significantly decrease the risk of cardiovascular disease, according to a new study at Columbia University. The study is the first to positively connect the microbiology of periodontal infections to atherosclerosis, a narrowing of blood vessels that can lead to heart attack and stroke.

Researchers speculate that the bacteria that cause gum disease may stimulate the immune system by migrating throughout the body via the bloodstream, causing inflammation that can clog arteries. And because gum infections are preventable and treatable, reducing them could help lower the risk of cardiovascular disease, the study found.

Milk, fruits and vegetables may help postpone disability

The company is also seeking approval from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to market its cannabis-based mouth spray as a treatment for neuropathic pain. The product is intended to relieve pain in patients with chronic pain conditions, such as spinal cord injury, multiple sclerosis, and HIV-related neuropathy. The company has already received approval from Health Canada to market its product for this indication.

Military dollar expansion

The study, which is the first of its kind, found that women who consumed the highest amounts of dietary products, fruits and vegetables had at least a 30 percent lower risk of disability than the ones who didn’t.

ACADEMIC FREEDOM

Academic freedom has never ironically been threatened more than at the University of Colorado Boulder, where the chancellor and other administrators have been accused of trying to silence conservative voices on campus.

The most recent example is the University of Colorado Boulder, where a student-run newspaper recently published an op-ed that was critical of President Trump. The op-ed was removed from the website and the students who wrote it were placed on probation.

The lawsuit was filed by the American Center for Law and Justice, a conservative advocacy group, and alleges that Wal-Mart has violated the religious freedom of its employees by requiring them to work on days that conflict with their religious beliefs.

The Senate unanimously rejected a vote of no confidence, which would have removed Speaker Sean Lavin if the motion had passed.

The motion was initiated by Sen. Kallie Shrum, after a series of contended bills debated that turned the Senate floor into a shouting match several times Thursday night. In an effort to calm impulses, Shrum suggested a vote of no confidence for Lavin’s failure to rein in the Senate’s actions, but his proposal failed to pass muster as reflected by the 5-5 vote. Even Shrum didn’t vote for his own motion.

Sen. Darrah Winkler felt the motion was inappropriate. “It was just because all of the Senate was getting frustrated,” Winkler said. “They want to blame someone when the Senate has a hard time. It obviously wasn’t the right thing to do.”

Lavin said he believes the motions of no confidence was fueled by the Senate’s unwillingness to decide on the fate of a school for an engineering club.

The Senate also unanimously passed a resolution to honor Jessica Johnson, a UCF student who was killed earlier this month by a drunken driver. The resolution, titled “Resolution in Loving Memory of Jessica Lauren Johnson,” refers to Johnson as “an unusually committed, passionate woman” and described her death as a “tragic loss to — suffered by Jessica’s family, friends and UCF.”

Winkler said the resolution highlighted the Senate’s concern for the student body. “Resolutions such as these show that UCF cares about more than just a student’s education,” she said.

The resolution originally said “the University of Central Florida condemns the gradual discipline while under the influence of alcohol due to the harmful consequences that result.” But it was revised to exclude any reference. Certain senators believed it would be wrong to take a stance on drunken driving because it was not official Senate business. The accident occurred the morning of Feb. 4.

Johnson and several other businesses were returning from a downtown internship when the unlicensed driver of an SUV closed on the median striking the rear passenger side of their vehicle. All of the students were wearing seat belts. While the other passengers did not suffer serious injuries, Johnson’s injuries were fatal.

The resolution was passed the same day it was introduced. It is one of many actions being taken to honor Johnson after her death. Johnson’s family has also raised a memorial scholarship fund in her name for students at the high school she graduated from last year.
Those with (and without) dates can hook up at charity auctions

Aaron Dawson stood on a chair as Megan Williams stood beside him and yelled into the noisy crowd, jammed into booths, tables and chairs.

"Come, do I hear $40 for dinner and a movie?"

She motioned with her hands, as if to display Dawson for potential bidders.

"Do you really get a good guy, too," she said.

"Yes!" A woman in a booth called out.

"Do I hear $45?" Williams yelled out. The crowd was a few seconds before calling out the last bid, "Forty-five once... twice... three times... sold!"

UCF students had been told on dates in just time for Valentine's Day. Finding love wasn't the goal of Thursday night's charity auction, but students were able to support a charity and win a date in the process.

Dance Marathon, a UCF organization that raises money for Children's Miracle Network, hosted the date auction at Gates Gym to help students get ready for the traditional Valentine's Day.

"If you're interested in presenting their interests and abilities while calling upon the crowd for more money," before starting the bid, Williams described each person, playing up his or her personality.

"This love gives to those they are meeting new friends, hanging out with friends," Williams said of one date up for bid.

"In all, 17 double dates were auctioned off. Each date involved an activity ranging from free martial arts lessons to twilight zone tickets, which were all donated by local businesses.

Dance Marathon director Alice Bandy said the organization raised $300. This is the second-year DMA has put on a date auction - it raised about $300 last year, she said.

Dawson, a 23-year-old non-UCF student, said he works with the crowd for more money.

"I'm getting a good dinner," he said.

But it wasn't only students trying for a date - men and women string around the bar occasionally called out joints, although only students were allowed to bid. Three hundred dollars sold one man to one student.

The highest date sold was for Vass O'Keeffe, DMA director. Vass, who is on the Campus Activities Board, bid $25 for his Disco date. He said he has a girlfriend, but wanted to support the in-demand service.

Hillel, the Jewish student organization on campus, had a date auction on Thursday.

The bloody origin of St. Valentine's

COURTNEY SUTTON

It is this day in history that the patron saint of love was sent the very Valentine. A debonair champion of romance, he placed an unerring devotion to his sweetheart. This noble act isSan Valentino, Feb. 14, 1929, seven powerful Chicago gangsters made their escape disguised as police officers.

Saint Valentine's Day has remained an exceptionally bloody holiday until the present. Valentine's Day gets some of its roots from a Roman fertility festival called Lupercalia. On Feb. 1, every year, priests would throw a man into chains and sacrifice two goats and a dog. Afterward, they smeared the blood all over two young men.

As a final touch, the blood-stained youth would run through town wounding nothing but buttocks and everyone they met with strips of goat skin. Women lined up to be attacked in the face with the animal remains because it was seen as good luck for fertility and children.

For a more modern example of Valentine's violence, look no farther than the Valentine's Day Massacre. On Feb. 13, 1929, seven bodies of mobster George "Bugs" Moran's men were found riddled with bullets in Chicago. The shooters made their escape disguised as police officers.

This is a free workshop. You must register by February 21st at the UCF Counseling Center (SRC 203) to participate.

Keith Rea, a longstanding SGA senator, is an enthusiastic advocate for the campus bar. Not only does he say the system is "gold," he says it offers "affordable asthma and brings another aspect of community to the UCF campus." More information added that the team would "continue to work on parking."

According to Bentley, the plan, which is in the process of finalizing final plans, will allow students to receive dental care at a discounted price that would be paid per visit. He said he wanted to ensure students that compared to other dental offices, "the quality of care will be the same or better." He said because the University offers a form a flat fee, they "will not have any reason to not offer emergency work, which is an ongoing concern."

Mercer no match for Roberts and Co. as A-Sun lead now at three

MATT ORRINS Staff Writer

The Knights are now 5-2 in the Atlantic Sun, and they have won 10 of their last 12 games. "I starting to become routine for the UCF women's basketball team," head coach Dawn Spooner said. "We start to be upset," she added.

The first game of Saturday's doubleheader games.

Jacksonville Saturday to face Moyne tabbed single runs in the bottom third, respectively, the Knights winning streak while a three-game cushion atop the A-Sun standings. Came away with an 83-82 overtime win. Takira Allen, along with forward Shelby Roberts, and Ali Mouid.

Enders and Best pull off program's top victory

The UCF softball team knew it was going to be a tough test as they faced Beth and Lindsey Enders this year. The two seniors are the backbone of the Knights in almost four years. "I've felt for a long time, but it's just the second out of the way. . . . it's the end of the season," Spooner said.

It's the type of game one can dream about," Coach Laura Glasses said. "We know we can lose this game, and we proved it this afternoon against a strong rival program."

Enders wasn't alone in excellence on the mound Saturday as Washington pitcher Conlin Noble pitched a 1 -run no-hitter on three Knights. Baseball fans explode last inning when she left one hanging for the third strike by the Buckeye, with the two-hitter.

"It's the type of game one can dream about," Spooner said. "My defense did a fantastic job behind me, and that makes me a better pitcher."

Both teams' defense performed excellently behind their pitchers as the Knights and Huskies each committed only one error. "I was happy to step up for the team when we needed it," Best said. "I think we were better because we're a real team. That's the end of the season."

The Knights' 6-5 win over the Top 10 team marked the biggest win in the program's history.

It's not March yet, but the madness is here. If you're ready for some action, IM soccer, volleyball and dodgeball tournaments have arrived. Check the tournament schedule online for the dates and times of each tournament.

Recreation and Wellness Center says thanks to UCF basketball

Thursday night is the UCF Recreation and Wellness Center's appreciation night for UCF men's basketball and Coach Kirk Spew. The Intramural Sports program is asking its participants to attend the men's basketball game at 7:30 p.m. at the UCF Arena versus conference rival Mercer. The game is free for students.

In September of 2004, Hurricane Charley damaged the Recreation and Wellness Center building and the UCF intramural basketball leagues did not have a place to play. Coach Kirk Spew stepped forward and altered his team's practice schedule to accommodate other groups, which opened space for the IM Sports program in the College of Education Gym until repairs were completed.

IM Sports at the UCF Arena on Feb. 17 to help support the Knights as they defend their A-Sun championship and to give thanks to UCF basketball for its support of the intramural programs.

Don't let the rivalry end, UCF likes offing Stetson every time

Good Stetson fans take a step into the Edmunds Center and watch the Knights and Hatters meet up in the Atlantic Sun Conference tournament. If UCF and Stetson match up in the Atlantic Sun Conference tournament in March, if UCF and Stetson didn't meet up in the tournament the rivalry is finished with UCF holding the all-time advantage at 19-15.

Rivals never play the big game when the Travels will be off Thursday's issue for pre-game coverage of the UCF/Stetson A-Sun matchup with Mercer.

The Palestinian militant group Al Aqsa Martyrs' Brigades has reaffirmed their agreement to a cease-fire with Israel, but would not completely end the cross-fire that reached peak levels before the start of the Palestinian Authority. While it is a good sign for the peace that the group who opposes Israeli occupation are stepping aside, it is not the end of the conflict for it is just a setback.

The recognized leaders of both factions, Aziz Shari'ah and Malik Abbas, met at the Red Cross this week and agreed to stop the violence. They have also agreed to work towards a peaceful resolution to the conflict.

The next step is to ensure that all parties involved agree to the cease-fire and that it is not just a temporary measure. It is important that both sides work together to ensure a lasting peace.

The Palestinian Authority has stated that they will not recognize the cease-fire, and that they will continue to support the militant groups. However, the international community has urged both sides to adhere to the cease-fire agreement.

There are also concerns about the safety of the civilians involved in the conflict. It is important that all sides work towards a peaceful solution and that the civilians are protected.

The international community needs to work towards a lasting peace in the region. It is important that the Palestinian Authority recognizes the cease-fire agreement, and that the Israeli government agrees to a peaceful solution.

There are many challenges to achieving peace in the region, but it is crucial that all sides work together towards a lasting solution.

Bush gives budget new slim, sexy look for fiscal year

NATHAN POEKERT

The 2006 proposed budget for the United States was released on Monday. Much of America is outraged. Not me

President Bush trimmed a little off of the education budget, as well as health care and transportation, while increasing the budget for homeland security and the military.

Uninformed college students might not see a headline that states Bush is cutting the education budget as bad news. I disagree. Light up UCF. The budget cuts don't really affect us negatively; they actually help us. Prof. Grants to help poor students attend college would be increased by 45 percent. Veterans of the United States will also receive an increase in their medical care when Bush requests that veterans without services-related injuries pay more of their own health care.

With that behind us, let's talk about the big topics. First off, health care was cut by 1.2 percent. Bush has called for a study of agencies to trim waste in the health care industry.

In the 2006 presidential election, Kerry and company continued to say that his plans would lead to government controlled health care. This is bad. Why? With government controlled health care, the United States would save billions every year by avoiding unnecessary interventions by millions of Americans who own their own independent insurance plans. With government controlling the health care, there would be unified and equal terms and conditions set in place.

Obviously the war in Iraq is the most important issue on the Bush administration’s agenda right now. The war is slowly putting us in a record debt. Many people talk about the Clinton era when we were out of debt and life was hunky-dory. Let’s go back to the Clinton administration. Does anybody remember anything about his terms except for the fact that he had "sexual relations" with Monica Lewinsky? Not really. The reason nobody remembers anything major is because nothing really major happened during his administration.

The Clinton administration got in on its own. Let’s be raised taxes on the rich to finance the poor. While some may agree with the rich way it should be, I do not. Someone would like to be making a couple hundred thousand dollars per year. Would I enjoy having 40 percent of my paycheck taken away from me? If anyone can answer you to this, you might want to check how many brains are in your head with that crack you’ve been smoking.

It’s so frustrating seeing so many people talk about how important our president is. Why did all the election fever then?

If you are still so flustered on our national debt, underwrite your own country paid in back what is owed, we would be out of the red and into the green pastures of the all-mighty dollar.
