Men punch NCAA return ticket

ASHLEY BURNS
Managing Editor

There was a feeling of deja vu at the UCF Arena Saturday night. The men's basketball team ranked in the top three teams in the nation as they headed to Nashville to take on West Virginia Saturday night. The scene was similar to last year's triumph, as the Knights punched their ticket to the NCAA Tournament after a 63-54 win over Gardner-Webb Saturday in Nashville.

"I'm very proud of this group of guys," said Spencer, who led his team to their second NCAA Tournament appearance. "They've overcome a lot of adversity over the season and they've had a lot of ups and downs. We rededicated ourselves with nine games to go in the regular season and since then they've been very focused and locked in. These three games in a row, I've never had a group with the defensive intensity and focus this team has had. The return to the Big Dance makes the fourth time in UCF history the Knights will play in the national postseason, and it's the first time the men have done it back-to-back. It's also a special feeling for the seniors who didn't get the chance last year."

Store manager: ‘It won’t be the same college atmosphere’

don’t have more student housing on campus.*

If the idea became a reality, Koller said he would like to use space in the new building:

“This is a good location,” he said. “If they had more students right here, I think it would be a good business opportunity. This place here, we have no walk-in traffic.”

Koller said that although lunch business is good, Broadway Pizza depends on delivery.

“If we signed the lease, we told them they were doing this high-rise project, they said, ‘no, they weren’t going to do it.’

“When we signed the lease, they told us they were doing this high-rise thing,” she said.

“The college is doing nothing but growing,” Griswold added. “By being over here we will be able to secure these services.”

“My main fear is what’s going to happen to my rent,” she said. Griswold was only allowed to sign a two-year lease but she was told her rent may triple.

“We would have to consider signing a new lease with the option to sign a new lease in the future, but she was told her rent may triple. With $60,000 worth of equipment and merchandise invested, Griswold is determined to keep her business. ‘We’ll manage,’ she said. ‘My investment is serious.’

Karen Sgambati, Web site manager for the off-campus bookstore Knight’s Corner, is more skeptical. Sgambati said rumors like these have been circulating around for the six years she’s worked at Knight’s Corner. “They’ve been talking about it for five years,” she said. “When I hear something get done, I’ll believe it.”

Sgambati said the new project is potentially a good change, describing the plaza as ‘kind of run down.’ If the high-rise is built, Knight’s Corner will probably stay, she said. “We’ll probably just move,” she added. “I don’t see our company wanting to back out.”

Many employees of the Liquid Cellar, a college sports bar, are against the idea entirely. "I hope it doesn’t happen," Liquid Cellar server Pat Tiscornia said. "It won’t have the same traditional, college atmosphere if it does.

Miguel Carbonetti, a cook at the Liquid Cellar, said rumors of this sort circulate all the time. "We hear stories all the time," Nelleson Ticehorn said. "They’ve been talking about it for years," Carbonetti added. "It’s not the first time they said we’re going to do it. We hear stories all the time."

Higher Education

What’s the news at colleges around the country.

Two U.S. colleges, and study abroad programs in Spain.

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. — Leaders of two community colleges in southern California have ended their schools’ study abroad programs in Spain, citing the country’s troop withdrawal from Iraq.

The trustees of the South Orange Community College District, comprising Irvine Valley College and Saddleback College, voted 5-2 last week to cancel the 16-year-old summer program.

“Spain has abandoned our fighting men and women, withdrawing their support,” said trustee Teri Fortney, “so no reason to send students of our college to Spain at this point in history.”

Trustees also cited the program’s expense and potential liability to the school district, though they approved a trip in Italy with higher daily costs.

Why to make League education more affordable.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Graduate students at Yale University have vastly increased his financial aid for low-income families.

Thursday, the latest move by the Yale Law to attract students who have seen the school’s financial aid package fall.

Beginning this year, families making less than $45,000 will no longer have to pay tuition, and families earning between $45,000 and $65,000 will see their in-state contributions cut by an average of 50%, Yale said.

Yale’s tuition, including room, board and fees, is about $44,000. About 40 percent of undergraduate students receive financial aid, with an average award this year of $20,000.

The change follows similar moves at other Ivy League schools, which have pushed in recent years not just to make tuition more affordable to more students, but also to make their images remain.

Yale made a similar move last year, saying families making less than $40,000 no longer have to pay tuition.

Don't lick the silverware or your fingers, no picking teeth

During a four-course meal, including beef barley soup, chicken, mandola, and raspberry cake for dessert.

"Etiquette is making other people feel comfortable," Demi explained throughout the night. In order to feel comfortable, you must practice etiquette at all meals, Demi said.

She explained the difference between dining American style, which calls for placing your silverware slightly apart at a 90-degree angle (clock position 6 and 2 when sitting and dining), and continental style—placing your silverware in an X position when sitting.

During World War I, German officers used continental style dining habits, Demi told students. One common mistake often overlooked, according to Demi, is keeping your silverware in the pillow. Probably all of our parents taught us not to do it, but now we often forget the rule, she said.

Always passing "My Salt and Mr. Pepper" together, even if only asked for one, is a must for proper dining, Demi said. If they become separated, the person who wants to use both must ask the guests to exchange. It is okay to use both together, Demi told students.

While salting your food below passing it is one rule to watch for. Watching for the wrong expression, Dr. Young, director of the Sigma Epsillog Academy, said to women, "Interviewers might think you had it before you try something else," she explained.

For women, etiquette has changed throughout the years. In the past, it was appropriate for women to "provision their nose," but today in the comfort, they tend to over tip vendor's," said Young. "You don't see men doing that."

When asked by a man on her Web site, "In this age of political correctness, how do I know if I should and how I should, shake a woman's hand?" Dr. Young replied, "Oh, that's an important one! How many times have you been to a formal dinner, and the hostess is full of herself?"

The room filled with quiet discussions when Demi told the woman, "Ladies, if you want the guy to pay for you on a second date, it's a good idea not to order anything more expensive than he does." She added, "If he pays, you are going to get a lot, but if you do, you can expect to be paying for yourself next time."

Demi also included some etiquette history during her instruction. "Only Americans use formal American style dining today," she said. "All of Europe used to dine American style until the 1880s when an English magazine stated it was more fashionable to dine continental style."

Following the meal, ballroom dance instructors Phillip and Erin Carden took the floor to dance etiquette. Before the couple demonstrated their dance moves, Mr. Carden told students, "I always have a right to ask a lady to dance and a lady should say yes." But the man should only dance one song with a woman before leading her back to her seat, he added.

Program aims to increase donation

To do it.

Blood donor John Bac, a U.S. government professor, believes setting a good example is the best way to encourage students to donate.

"I encourage students to donates," he said. "I tell them that I have donated and then encourage them to do so, I think [the faculty] can play a positive role, sharing their experience and encouraging their students to do the same."

According to the American Red Cross, at all times its blood banks need 170 new donors to replace those that are no longer eligible to donate due to age, weight, or change in health. If 9 percent of Americans are eligible to donate, then 3 percent participate.

Since blood lasts only a little more than a month before spelling, new supplies are always in constant demand. In fact, since its peak after Sept. 11, 2001, when a record-breaking 500,000 people donated blood, donations have been on the decline. The percentage of Americans who donate, 10 percent of those who are college students. That number could rise even higher with the startup of programs like Please for Flora.

What are black box warnings and why was Depo-Provera given a black box warning?

Prescription drugs are usually divided into several categories. The black box warning is a signal to the prescriber that there is important information about the drug that is not included in the ordinary prescribing information. The black box warning is displayed in a high-risk format on the label of a drug.

Senior Gary Johnson was named the Atlantic Sun Conference tournament MVP with 16 points and 8 rebounds in Saturday’s win over Gardner-Webb.

According to coach Donnie Speraw, "Gary has been a leader in all aspects of the game. His presence on our team has been a positive one. He has improved every facet of his game, and he has become more of a leader in all phases of the game. He has been a key player in our success this season."

Tradtition runs deep in the Cellar

By ROBERTO MORENTIN

Who knows what the University Shoppes plaza, the University Plaza’s apartment and retail complex, is going to look like tomorrow or even next year. But one thing is certain—part of the plaza will look a little bit different, even if only in name.

On Monday, the UCF Senate voted to alter the name of Liquid Cellar, a bar that has served students here much longer than most of us have been alive. We voted against the proposal, which was passed by the Senate last week. Now the plan is to move forward with it, and the students are keeping an eye on the Senate's decision in the coming days.

In the unlikely event that the Senate passes the proposal, it is important to remember that the changes would only affect the name of the bar, not its operations or services. The Cellar is still a popular spot for students to socialize and unwind, and we hope that it will continue to be so.

Our vote was based on the idea that the Cellar is an integral part of the student experience at UCF, and that changing its name would send a negative message to students and alumni. We also believe that the Cellar is a valuable resource for students, and that it should be protected from unnecessary changes.

As we move forward with this issue, we urge the Senate to consider the implications of its decision carefully. We believe that the Cellar is a unique and valuable part of our campus, and that it should be respected and protected.

Thank you to those who voted against the proposal. We appreciate your support in this matter.

Baseball pitches fit to Siena
UCF takes three of four in exciting series

Jeff Shuren / staff reporter

It was a different story, every night for the Knights this weekend against Siena. UCF improved its record to 5-6 in the four-game series against the Saints, their second MAAC opponent this season.

UCF came out strongly in Friday’s game, Matt Hettich led the way by going two-for-three at the plate driving in a run that allowed the Knights to pull within 6-5 of the Saints in the fifth inning. Hettich helped to ignite a Knights rally that took UCF’s lead to 7-5 and 20 minutes.

Danny Puello got the win for the Knights as they kept up the pressure on themselves the last three runs on seven hits in a career-high eight innings of work. He struck out a career-high 10 batters, advancing his career record to a perfect 1-0.

After the Saints opened the scoring in the first inning, UCF responded with a three-run second inning to take a 3-1 lead. In the third, with the score tied at 3-3, the Knights picked up the lead in the third on a two-run double by Howorth. Siena’s late mistake of the night, a two-run jack by Kyle Selker, gave the Saints a 5-3 lead in the fourth.

Then, the Knights broke through for another run in the fifth and had a three-run lead in the fifth inning on a two-run single by Marshall Bernard (one of his two hits on the day) and a two-run home run to left by Nick Rausa. It was Rausa’s first home run of the season, and it gave UCF a 9-3 lead. With Howorth added an RBI double to the inning, the score was 12-6 in the Knights’ favor. The first game of Saturday’s doubleheader was highlighted by the Saints, as Siena swept Kent Grant down. But the Knights didn’t let that get to them, finishing out the remaining games 5-4, 5-3 and 12-2 in a perfect weekend.

Thank you, my friends
We’re going dancing again and I want OK St.

MOUTHING OFF
Aldhii Burns

Gary Johnson told me one week ago that I hadn’t seen the real Gary Johnson yet this year.

I had to think back, 24 points against Missouri-Kansas City on Dec. 4, still points against Texas on Jan. 20, 20 points against South Dakota State on Senior Night. All in those of double-digit games this season.

All of that and I haven’t seen the real Gary Johnson yet! That’s a scary thought. Well, it’s scary for two reasons. First, he could blow up and demand to be handled. On the other hand, he could put too much pressure on himself and choke in the Atlantic Sun tournament.

I was worried about both. But he proved me wrong. Big, big, even. Johnson ended up playing in the tournament MVP and led the Knights out a championship game win 50 points in Saturday’s championship game.

The men are dancing again. I don’t know why, but this time it’s even more special than last year. That’s a tough thing to say considering last year we had better players, better Bodden and Roberts. These were three guys who gave it their all day in and day out. These were three guys who were truly special student-athletes. But the same can be said about this year’s team.

The thing about being a sports...
Defense anchors men's victory

Speraw usually doesn't speak about his players until the season is over. If he were to do so now, he'd probably be talking about Joey and Steven Graham, two 6-foot-9 forwards who are in the process of breaking the Knights' scoring record.

Speraw said the two freshmen have shown a lot of promise and have been a big boost to the team's offense.

"They're not playing for your team, they're playing for their families," Speraw said. "They're playing for their scholarships to play here, and they're doing a great job of that."

The Knights' defense has been the key to their success this season, holding opponents to an average of 61 points per game. The team has not allowed a single opponent to score more than 70 points in any of their 32 games.

"We have the right mentality and the right attitude going into this tournament," Speraw said. "We can carry on any amount of defense we need and it will be there."
Cobb makes appearance for first time in over a year

Saints blank the Knights, 6-0. Grant was in complete control of the game from the start, striking out three UCF batters.

On the other side of the ledger, the Knights wasted a career-high 12 strikeouts by Mike Billek, who gave up four runs on seven hits, taking his first loss of the year.

UCF still remained within reach at 3-4 into the seventh, when Glen broke the game open with three hits in a row. A two-RBI single by Ryan King and an 0-0 double by Pete Perez put the game out of reach.

And Grant slammed the door and the Saints' first win over the Knights in 30 games between the two schools, and ended the Knights' nine-game win streak.

UCF got right after that evening, powering its way to a 9-7 victory. The story of the day was Mike Billek, who gave up four runs on seven hits, taking his first loss of the year.

UCF: Grant was in complete control of the game from the start, striking out three UCF batters.

Bergman said, "He came out a little sluggish, and then got on such a roll, I was concerned about his pitch count in the late innings, but when you close to a school record, you can't deny a player the opportunity to make history."

Sanilac actually got on the board with a run in the first, but the Knights scored one in the first, two in the second, one in the fifth, three in the seventh, and two in the ninth to seal the win.

Sima actually got on the board with a run in the first, but the Knights scored three in the fifth, three in the seventh, and two in the ninth to seal the win.

The highlight hit came in the seventh, on a Jonathan-Kenn turn by John-Michael Howell, his team-leading third shot of the year. UCF also added runs on the bases, with three Knights (Ryan King, Craig, and Kevin Richardson) combining to steal five bases in the inning.

man said. "I was supposed to find him before he hit two runs in the fourth instead of three and we'll have a chance to run out the clock. But he called the first pitch when he was hitting. Luckily, I missed the first strike and got the last one."

Saints Coach Rich Barnes said he thought Rockland had hit in the box before he was in the act of striking.

"I looked at coach free and I was like, 'Wow,' what's happening?" Creede said.

After missing the second of the two, Rockland said he "hit the first shot at a 90-degree angle. In 2013, he hit the last hit at a 90-degree angle. In 2013, he hit the last hit at a 90-degree angle. In 2013, he hit the last hit at a 90-degree angle.
