If even acts of God to acts of trustees, the past academic year has seen its share of newsworthy events.

Launched with process and controversy, as well as high and lows for academia and athletics, this year tested the patience of many with startling and sometimes heart-rending events. Not only that, but a look in two semesters could be considered important by every student, faculty member and neighbor of the UCF community.

But three specific events have been most notable events affecting everyone at and around UCF.

 researching us like a hurricane

Residents of Florida have long known how devastating hurricanes could be. However, no one saw coming what took place during three weeks of last August. Three hurricanes roared across the state, killing residents and property throughout central Florida.

Students and faculty who lived in the area were on guard for days after Hurricane Charley swept through, and the Frasons later took care of them. Then, Hurricane Jeanne reared its ugly head.

As for the damage on campus, there were few instances of damage, but the $25 million in budgets for mission accomplishment.

They danced the Knights away

Helping to fill the athletic department of the $2 football season, UCF basketball has finally Atlantic Sun Conference and reality and made a return to the NCAA Tournament. As they open in a

The UCF athletics foundation showed projected net realized on an electronic football schedule for the Board of Trustees on March 5.

If you build it, they will come

There was probably no bigger news story of the year than1987 arrangement of a feasibility study on a possible football stadium on the UCF campus. Sports of fans, alumni and students celebrated the news that a new football home, as well as a $100 million athletic facility, would be included.

President John Thrasher and Athletic Director Dorsey Clinkscale said the students will help create a stadium that has never been seen before.

But for every person who praised the idea, there were those who had concerns. One individual wondered if UCF already had a solution.

As the funding is received, the stadium's design will be completed.

Wells don't come easy, or at all

Ask anyone to name the first thing that comes to his mind about UCF football, and they might say the perfect season.

The 2001 season was a first and, for many fans, hopefully the last, as the Knights finished (5-6) and were the only team in the nation with a winning season.

Named by ESPN's BTN as one of the worst teams in the nation, the Knights also were the longest losing streak in the country at 14 straight.

The liberal arts could lose a little of their luster as Florida's universities are molded to fulfill the state's workforce needs as defined in proposed plans working their way through that need via the Governor and the Florida Legislature.

Governors have long claimed that UCF could provide a significant workforce to Florida, and they said the plans would remain even if the state decided to scale back the workforce-related initiatives.

The Florida Board of Governors in September asked the director of the Florida's Governor's Office of Economic Opportunity to work with the Florida Legislature to develop a plan that would help meet the state's workforce needs.

The plan would take into account the state's workforce needs, as defined by the Florida Board of Governors.

The legislative agenda would be revised to meet the needs of Florida's workforce, as defined.

The Florida Board of Governors said the plan would be revised to meet the needs of Florida's workforce, as defined.

Victim unable to learn results of conduct hearing

For all blow in the mouth," she said. "The decision to keep quiet was no longer hers to make.

"She explained the need for an attorney," Morin said. "Police charges or paperwork, and go home. I didn't want to go home."

"Victim Services provides resources to help students or faculty. "We tell them their options," said LaShawn Ruffin, a Victim Services advocate. "We want to explain to them their rights and the legalities of them."

"Ruffin's advice "Before you do anything else, they need to make a decision to report or not."

After a police report is filed, the UCF Police will assign the case number, and the case will be reviewed.

"The Office of Student Conduct handles the initial case. A hearing or a chance for you to provide any information you may have about the alleged violation, " the Office of Student Conduct Web site states. "After the incident is discussed, a decision is made on whether or not a violation occurred."

"Hearings can be informal or formal, allowing victims the choice to question the accused individual, via phone or video feed to determine if the accused assailant has violated UCF's Golden Rule policies that define proper student conduct on campus.

"Most decided to face her accused assailant in person. She shared her story on campus for the first time, but the student-conduct hearing was different. Sitting four chairs away from him, she answered the board's intimate questions and defended her story when he was allowed to question her."

"At the hearing, the man denied many charges and said the sex was consensual, she said."

"Yet even Morin does not know whose version the board believed, or whether the man was judged to have violated UCF's rules and punished for it. That's because the Office of Student Conduct wouldn't tell her its findings unless she first signed a confidentiality agreement stating that she would not discuss the outcome."

"Dana Furniture, assistant director of the office, confirmed that victims can learn the outcome of a hearing only "after making a commitment to protect the confidentiality for all persons involved.""

"This role is part of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act."

"But there was no turning back for Morin — she had taken the leap and wanted to see what would happen, if only to stem other victims that they're not alone."

"Last fall semester, nine cases of sexual abuse were heard and ruled to be violations of the Golden Rule by the Office of Student Conduct Web site stated. In 2003, only four cases other than campus or on UCF-affiliated property were reported to UCF Police, according to the department's Web site. (Statistics for 2004 have not been released)

"Three of those were reported to other law enforcement agencies or UCF officials."

"When contacted by a victim, a UCF Police officer will write an incident report, and make an arrest, " Sig. Troy Willensson said. "If there's a crime, we refer them to Victim Services," Sig. Troy Willensson said. "It doesn't matter what the crime is.""

"In Morin's case, criminal charges subsequently were filed against the man on two counts: false imprisonment and battery. Danielle Devries, a speaker for the Orange/Osceola State Attorney's office, said an arrest was made earlier this month and an arraignment is scheduled for May 10."

"Realizing it isn't their fault will help victims find closure, Morin said. Rebuilding themselves is the first step."

"With the cases I've seen it's been consistent," Ruffin said. "Most point they blame themselves — guilt and blame on the biggest things."

"Support groups can bring healing, and although Victim Services does not hold support groups it can refer students to other organizations that do. It's a way to meet other people in similar situations, Ruffin said. "They start to feel like there's something wrong with me, and other legal professionals, expert in a conversation."

"When Morin looks at a photo of her younger sister and begins to cry, she says "They really look up to me," the school. "They say I'm gonna follow Alpaca's footsteps. I don't want them to run away from their problems."

"You have to find your own way of healing," Morin said. "Counseling lets me on my own without feeling ill in my way of healing."

"Because of the issue in different, she added, victims should also be able to "The important thing is that they don't hide from it. Don't be quiet out of fear!"

Event most likely to make someone transfer

With reality shows abound as breathing, it didn’t take too many people by surprise when the WB network was bringing a new series to the college scene, but one on Campus promised to be the college scene, but ended up being a cross between Elinor and a late-night Campus show. The show lasted only six episodes, but the haunting images have been burned into the minds of UCF into the minds of students — at least the years to come. The show, which aired on Wednesdays last fall, was a UCF seniors narrow a field of 12 full-time students to vote on. The show came about as episodes, but the final product showed the cutthroat environment everyone should have expected.

Yet despite the paint-by-numbers format, Big

Our school has more beds than your school does

In November, the Board of Trustees unanimously approved a Master Plan that added 1,000 more beds to campus housing. That means UCF will soon offer more student housing than any school in the state. For the people kept up late at night with concerns of parking and traffic, the Plan also included 5,000 more parking spaces, as well as a $70 million convocation center that will be used at the center for both men’s and women’s basketball, plus the big community center that currently lacks a suitable campus home. Still, much like the idea of a football stadium, the Master Plan was greeted with much opposition. Despite the Master Plan winning student Union to express their disapproval for Bush’s plan, though it could be replaced by the Police Academy, the measure for now has been taken off the ballot by the Florida Legislature.

Welcome to UCF! Now leave!

Black tuition, a plan proposed by Gov. Jeb Bush, received a grudging vote of the students through college in four years, the plan calls for 20 full-time and 10 part-time

Car accident ends in tragedy

Two children were struck and killed Oct. 27 as they crossed an intersection with their mother at Goldenrod and Burns roads. The vehicle, driven by former UCF student Ashley Townsend, crossed the road, striking the mother, and knocking her to the ground. Wrecks said Townsend appeared to be talking on her cell phone as she approached the intersection. The Honda SUV was charged on March 16, 2003, with two counts of vehicular homicide. If found guilty, the 22-year-old faces up to $8,000 in fines.

No reason to avoid the Noid

Last week, UCF student Camp Dunn and his girlfriend Kelly received a scholarship from Donald Trump at the University Shoppers Plaza for $300,000. The committee was formed to help students finish school in four years, but only 10% of the students receive the award. The award will be given to students who complete their degree in four years. The roommates ordered from Donald's 27 times this semester and spent more than $500 on the pizza, but there is no record of their use for gymnastics.

May...U Can Finish after all

Prior to the start of the school year, incoming freshmen were invited to take part in the new "Grad on Track" program. Along the same lines as block tuition, except not all incoming students are eligible. Grad on Track was created to help students finish school in four years. As a member of the "U Can't Finish" theory, Grad on Track, however, allows freshmen to sign on the dotted line and complete the curriculum in four years. The program is expected to save students $500,000 this year. So long as the students pass all classes and keep the same major, the academy will be fine.

Should they choose to change their major 34 times and take Composi­tion 4 ever twice, they're guaranteed to graduate in seven years like a normal UCF student.

Student's suicide invites allegations

John Yancy, 19, was found dead of an apparent suicide at his home Nov. 23.

Months later, the members of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity pledged to police the school. The fraternity house was broken into later on the day of his death, and drug paraphernalia was found throughout the house.

A friend of the Yancy family told the Future that Pi Kappa Alpha had allegedly base discrimination against an incoming student, including racist remarks, in their house. The Seminole County Sheriff's Office investigation is still open. Due to an unrelated event, the house was suspended at least until at least Aug. 1, 2006.

UCF will not comment on the investigation led the fraternity to allegedly base discrimination against an incoming student, including racist remarks, in their house. The Seminole County Sheriff's Office investigation is still open. Due to an unrelated event, the house was suspended at least until at least Aug. 1, 2006.

According to the investigation, members of the chapter have violated their house, while its fate and members continue to be uncertain.

Lavin resigns

Former SGA Senator Sean Lavin received a no-confidence vote at a March 10 Senate meeting and abruptly resigned after the vote was taken. Some members said they supported the no-confidence vote because they felt Lavin was not fulfilling his obligations. Lavin countered that he had been too involved in his duties and had forgotten other priorities such as family, friends and his education. He also conceded that he knew the vote was severe, but he didn't want to harm the chapter's reputation. It was another vote for the student government association.

Faculty gets a bargain

After 19 months of negotiations, the United Faculty of Florida and the university finally reached a collective bargaining agreement that gives faculty a 2 percent across-the-board raise and revised the anti-discrimination policy to address gay and lesbian employees. Also included was the promotion of academic freedom, which allows teachers to use any resources necessary in order to improve their curriculum in a manner they find acceptable. The Board of Trustees passed the agreement March 11. UFF and the university are now preparing for the next round of negotiations for the upcoming year. The contract lasts through 2007.

Graduating seniors aren’t the only thing to bid farewell.

It’s been fun taking shots at Stetson, but I have bigger fish to fry.

Boys II Men once sang, “If the end of the road,” and every time they did, I drew it up and slammed my fists in the air.

But now the members of that once-popular Boyband group are working on something, and we really have come to the end of the road. I have to throw it in the trash. To the轨迹 of Myglet Throwing class, but the sports columns have come to an end. Most of Off has seen its final issue and the final words.

Thursday trade is going the way of the dodo. I have loved hate given everyone a little warning, but we all know I’m soft on and sports are my life. I know my No. 1 fan, Contra, is going to miss his Thursday or two, but with a little optimism and maybe even a hot cup of coffee, he has made his final Betway Sports/timer pick soon. As Jerry would say, “I’m leaving you wanting more.”

We know the Myglet fans in Orlando do a great job of staying on top of things, and the Columns have the best record in baseball and own a record of 2nd place in the National League. Gillispie said, “I’m finished on this field with a comeback win gives us what we need heading into the conference tournament.”

MOUTHING OFF

The man for the moment this final Thursday trade ...

Paul Gilbert released a statement that she and Nicole Richie were no longer friends because “Nicole knows what she did.” Then Paris burned her bag on the exhaust of her very own Vespa. How do I know? Because according to every friend, family member, and magazine on this planet, this kind of friendship would be over. But I’m going to stick with my gut. And I’m going to let the volleyball team be torn with this, but not too much of a gut. What they want is to be in the conference tournament. The best is yet to come.

No UCF baseball player update this fourth weekend of the season after the weekend’s NFL Draft. Drafting your next No. 1 pick is in the ongoing saga of UCF Football. I feel bad for the draft safety former UCF player, and I wish them the best. The rest have to end up in college, they need a lot of respect for some quality players.

UCF baseball has had me in a week off since the team last played a game. Does anyone understand that UCF baseball is not to me what a 6-foot-5 man is to scratching my face or not feelings for me?

We’re 24 days into the Major League Baseball season, and we have had two amazing weeks and two Cardinals have had the best record in baseball and own a record of 2nd place in the National League Central. With that said, here’s my fantasy baseball update this fourth weekend of the season, and a good bet. My original statement was “I’m finishing the fourth like I’ve never finished before.” Of me, people. Not the man...

I’ve been admitted that I’ve been a failure at fantasy baseball, but I do know this now.

For the first time since 2002, no UCF football players were selected in the NFL Draft, but that didn’t keep two former standout Knights from finding a home in the NFL.

On Monday, less than 24 hours after the conclusion of the draft, running back Alex Haynes signed a free-agent contract with the Washington Redskins and wide receiver Torien Capers signed with the Pittsburgh Steelers, which makes five former standout Knights in the AFC North Division.

Haynes, a prolific runner in UCF history, received offers from five NFL teams after the end of the draft on June 3. He signed a free-agent contract, which was announced on Monday, and Haynes is expected to travel to Baltimore this weekend to join the team.

Softball avoids sweep with late comeback

Eight runs in the sixth inning push the Knights past Troy as softball splits

MATT DONAHUE

Sunday afternoon, in a span of 11 minutes, what looked like a sure sweep for conference-leading Troy turned into a hammer-beating loss at UCF Softball Complex.

UCF (34-9, 12-6 A-Sun) was down 3-1 entering the sixth inning, but the Knights didn’t give in, pushing across eight runs on six hits to take the victory, 9-3.

"The comeback is a huge shot in the arm for us right now," Coach Renee Luers-Gillispie said. "It finishes on this field with a comeback win gives us what we need heading into the conference tournament."

Sasha Shnitzer, Nikki Green and Cat Snapp started the frame picking up RBI singles as the Knights wiped away a deficit for the first time this season. They trailed after five innings.

"It was exciting to watch," Luers-Gillispie said, "I was so proud of how everyone, one through nine, stepped up and made it happen for themselves.

They had six hits in those deep down because they wanted it."

UCF also capitalized on a Troy throwing error throwing the catcher off the plate on a force play.

With the score 8-7, Ashley Van Voss ripped a double down the right field line to give the Knights a 9-8 lead. Nicole Badger, who started the rally with a walk, finished the job by blasting a double off the left field fence for the final margin of 9-8.

"When I first hit it, I was thinking, Oh great, it’s in the air again," Badger said. "But then I saw the ball..."

Men's tennis awarded for impressive spring season

Winning on top allows four to enjoy honors

BRIAN MURPHY

In sports, it's common knowledge that the achievements of the team overshadow any personal fear. No matter what, a single player's career accomplishments are diminished if the team is not successful. But off their thighed Atlantic Sun Champions, four players from the UCF men's tennis team were able to fully enjoy the honors bestowed upon them, as the Knights announced their All-Conference teams on Monday.

After both were named to the second team in 2004, seniors Joel Allen and junior Ener Gurey were named to the Atlantic Sun Conference First Team for 2005. Gurey was said in both doubles and singles but will be most remembered for his shining effort at the A-Sun semi-Finals. With Gurey and his opponent both battling cramps, he literally outlasted his opposition from Georgia State in an intense match that put the Knights into the finals.

His first-team selection marked the third time Gurey has received post-season honors. In addition, he was voted to the All-Freshman team, and he followed that up with the second-team honors this season.

Playing on the top two courts all season long, Allen posted a team-leading 16-7 record in singles. In his 189 matches, three of his singles tilts at the conference tournament, including the three-point clincher over Ener Gurey. Yet, the Haitian native is also a threat doubles player as he put up a 4-7 mark from Feb. 12 to April 3. Allen was recently named 34 of 46 doubles matches.

Many of Allen's triumphs in doubles have come with senior Anthony Sierra, who was named to the All-Conference Second Team. The senior has taken down 14 singles opponents, and in the last two months, he has been simply unstoppable, reaching in consecutive singles wins - only three of those matches needed a third set. Sierra, who is UCF's all-time leader in singles victories with 75, was a first-team pick in 2004. All three of these Knights also received Player of the Week honors at some point during the year.

Nowformer Surge Sadik became the third Knight in four years to be selected to the all-Freshman squad. In his first season in Orlando, Sadik won five singles matches with five more doubles appearance. The only thing Sadik will critical is if the Knights want to have any chance at four titles in a row.

But where would any good team be without a good racquet? UCF Coach Bobby Casals and nearly every doubles team put theirtrust in the hands of Allen.

The double by Bahall was the last hit at the present UCF Softball Complex. The Knights will move into a new facility next season. Jennifer Tomasetti picked up her fourth win of the season, throwing a complete game.

"It was great for her to go the full seven innings," Lovers Ralph said. "I was happy that the girls stepped up and gave one of our freshmen some run support."

Melina Best also knocked her NCAA-trending home run in the third inning.

"It was the first game 3-1, behind a one-hitter and 12 strikeouts from sophomore hurler Jocelyn McCallum."

The Knights managed a run in the first inning, opposed a three-bagger for Virginia, but Keyster was only in the game for four fourth of this season UCF just a game when scoring.

Tamas Howard's homer in the fourth inning signalled the end of the game. The go-ahead run came across in the ninth inning and the tying run, thrown away, is none other than Jeremy Ross, a senior second baseman.

The Trojans added an insurance run in the seventh on a sacrifice fly by Howard. UCF's final score was 6-2.

WOMEN WHO SCOUTS

MALACHI WIGGS

The Knights women's tennis team, ranked No. 80 in the nation earlier this season, was ranked No. 79 in the nation this weekend.

The Trojans finished the regular season against the University of Florida and Georgia Tech.

The Knights' (20-25, 12-6 A-Sun) are in a three-way tie for second place with Stetson (20-13, 12-6 A-Sun) and Florida Southern (19-16, 12-6 A-Sun) in the A-Sun Conference.

The Hampton upset FAU last weekend for the first time in school history. Danielle Ardila, ranked 46th in the nation, defeated the No. 15 Florida Southern player to give the Knights their first win of the season, earning 3-2 in doubles, including a two-run tune in the third, to pace the Stetson Top 20 victory.

Lipscomb (23-27, 10-6 A-Sun) lost 11-2 in the first game qualifiers for the conference tournament. The Titans split a year of seniors in the Peach State last weekend and returns to the City to face Campbell and Gardner-Webb. This weekend was a golden opportunity for Lipscomb to improve its seeding with four winnable games at home.

- The NFL season consists of 16 regular-season games, with teams playing a round-robin schedule.

- The team with the best record in each conference qualifies for the postseason playoffs, culminating in the Super Bowl.

- The NFL has a salary cap, which limits the amount of money that teams can spend on player salaries, in order to ensure competitive balance and financial stability within the league.

- The NFL is known for its passionate fan base, with dedicated fans who follow their favorite teams closely and engage in various forms of tailgating and team spirit, such as dressing in team colors and cheering loudly during games.

- The NFL is also known for its popular broadcast networks, including ESPN, Fox Sports, and NBC, which air games and broadcasts of NFL events throughout the season.

- The NFL has a long and storied history, with its roots dating back to the early 20th century, and has grown into one of the most popular and influential professional sports leagues in the world.

Putin promotes peace summit

Russian President Vladimir Putin has completed his mini-tour of the Middle East while Palestinians prepare for a peace summit in Moscow in April.

Putin's trip may be more about Russia's growing influence in the region than about the peace process.

The Kremlin has decided to use its influence in the Middle East to pressure Israel to make concessions to the Palestinians.

Putin called the region "the heart of the world" and said that Russia has a "constructive role" to play in the peace process.

The Kremlin has also been working to build ties with the Palestinian Authority, and has expressed interest in helping to mediate a peace deal.

Putin's visit comes as the United States is expected to announce its own peace plan in the coming weeks.

The US plan is expected to be similar to previous US plans, but will likely include some new ideas to try to break the impasse.

Putin has said that he is open to any idea that could help to move the peace process forward.

However, it remains to be seen whether Putin's visit will lead to any concrete steps towards peace.

The situation in the region is complex and volatile, and it is unlikely that any single person can solve the conflict.

But Putin's visit is a reminder that Russia is a major player in the region, and that its influence cannot be ignored.

The Kremlin is expected to use its influence to try to ensure that any peace agreement is fair to all parties.

Putin has said that he is committed to a two-state solution, and that any final agreement must be acceptable to both Palestinians and Israelis.

The Putin administration is expected to work closely with the Palestinian Authority, and to try to ensure that any peace agreement is legally binding.

The Kremlin is also expected to work with the United States to try to ensure that any peace agreement is internationally recognized.

But the situation in the region is complex, and it is unlikely that any peace agreement will be easy to achieve.

My year in review for UCF’s 2004-05 school year

COMMENTARY
NATHAN POEKERT
Spartan

This school year has been a memorable one. UCF has experienced the good (free concerts), the bad (hurricanes) and the ugly (Michael Moedinger’s scooter until the ransom is paid by the College Democrats). As a future leader of America, I’ve decided to incorporate Disney World features into its food court. Lanes in a zigzag pattern are now set up at Wendy’s during peak business hours. Approximately 15 minutes later, you can order your food.

UCF students are now planning on adding a speed-pass kiosk next semester. It’s called “Wait & Save.” The two-kiosk system has been a memorable season for the basketball team. It had a memorable season capped off by giving defending national champion UConn a serious run for its money.

5. Matt Prater’s extra point decision to incorporate Disney World features into its food court. Lanes in a zigzag pattern are now set up at Wendy’s during peak business hours. Approximately 15 minutes later, you can order your food.

6. The WB decided to incorporate Disney World features into its food court. Lanes in a zigzag pattern are now set up at Wendy’s during peak business hours. Approximately 15 minutes later, you can order your food.

7. Hats off to the men’s basketball team. It had a memorable season capped off by giving defending national champion UConn a serious run for its money.

8. Willie Bentley wins the Big Man on Campus award. He’s now planning on adding a speed-pass kiosk next semester for those who don’t want to wait.

9. UCF wins the 2004 election over Kerry in anger, the College Democrats steal Moedinger’s scooter until the ransom is paid by the College Republicans.

10. Hurricane Charley drops trees and debris all over campus. The gym is closed for four months. Steroid-using fraternity brothers become desperate and begin to bench press one another and their girlfriends to get a workout.

We have no mountains, but he's still coming

John Darnielle plays at Will's Pub this evening

JOHN THOMASON

H is songs are alternately witty and mordant, if they're not both at the same time. He can play quiet acoustic numbers and fist-pumping rockers and make them equally captivating. At live shows he's prone to everything from near-tearful renditions of popular favorites ("Your Belgian Things") to impromptu versions of "I Will Survive" — which he performed at The Social last year to the thumping bass of Tabu next door.

And he may call himself The Mountain Goats, but the "band" is still virtually John Darnielle, with a few backing members who chip in on bass, drums, piano, and even, on his new album The Sunset Tree, the occasional cello. Darnielle may inhabit one juxta­position after another, but one thing is for certain: the lo-fi boombox Darnielle is no more.

Since he's now three albums into his 4AD record deal, it no longer comes as a surprise to fans when each new album is, comparatively, overproduced. While Darnielle's early work placed almost total emphasis on his lyrical talents, thanks to guitar arrangements that were deliberately simple and threadbare, the new material retains the same dark humor, spine-tingling pathos and keen eye for detail and sprinkles in some genuinely beautiful music to accompany his vocals.

And, with The Sunset Tree and 2004's We Shall All Be Healed, Darnielle has eschewed the fictive characters of his older material; the albums are drawn largely from his own life.

What results is a greater treat for the con­certgoer: as The Mountain Goats has come to excel in the art of performance. Where, a mere four years ago, one would see a guy on a stool playing guitar, there is now a revolving group of musicians who share the stage, and at the last Social show, Darnielle actually stood, uninhibited and infused with rock power.

The downside, of course, is that new material has taken utter precedence at Mountain Goats shows. The man does have 415 songs in his catalog, and it may be a bit much to expect him to bust out an obscure track from Yan, the King of Crops or Beautiful Rat Sunset, but a few pre-Tallahassee tracks would be more than welcome. Or at least "Going to Georgia."

But you are likely to hear recent gems from The Sunset Tree, as well as his two other 4AD albums. "Dance Music" is this album's "Southwood Plantation Road" (which he's played at the last three Orlando shows), an instantly accessible number that is sure to become as much an Orlando tour classic as "Jenny," Darnielle's ode to love on a motorcycle. Also expect to hear the an­themic "Up the Wolves," and the nostalgic, sweet and sentimental — but in the good way — "Love Love Love."

The Mountain Goats perform tonight at 8 at Will's Pub. Tickets are $10 to $12.

New CDs from Weezer, Aimee Man, shows by Dinosaur Jr. and more

CHRIS BOWERS

No doubt that by the time you read this, you'll be like me: tired, cranky and worn-out. Finals week has a way of doing this to even the most dedicated of students, and technically it doesn't end for two more school days. But allow me a few minutes of your time, and we will temporarily break away from the grasps of Scantrons and blue-books, and look into a musical crystal ball to see what lies just on the horizon. In the next few paragraphs I'll attempt to put together a list of some of the stuff you should be keeping your eyes peeled for this season.

This summer is filled with releases from bands we used to love, bands we currently love and bands perhaps we will get to love. And of course the clichéd summer music festivals that roll through town every year are back, but this summer also offers great weekend shows if you are willing to invest in the road trip — more on those to come soon. But for now, onto the new releases!

The summer of plenty starts just around the corner on Tuesday, with the first of three new releases this year from Ryan Adams. Cold Roses, which is actually credited to Adams and his new band The Cardinals, is a double CD with 18 new tracks. You can call it lazy, or you can call it the personal lyrical content that made him the hero of every mid-'90s adolescent who spent his nights pining for half-Japanese girls, lesbians, and true love half a world away. Cold Roses is filled with everything the previous two releases were lacking, and should, excuse the pun, make believers out of anyone who had jumped off the bandwagon. Welcome back aboard.

Take a trip down indie rock's version of memory lane on May 23, when Fearless Records will release The Staiton is Non Operational. The At The Drive-In - anthology, featuring greatest hits, unreleased tracks, rare b-sides, covers, videos and live footage, should be considered a must-buy for both the band's original fan base and Mars Volta fans in need of a history lesson.

With all this talk of indie and alternative rock, perhaps the most anticipated hip-hop album of the year will find its way to stores...

MUSIC

The summer concert season is in full swing

The Coachella Valley Music Festival goes down this weekend in Indio, Calif., and for $150 you can get a two-day pass to check out an impressive listing of bands, including Weezer, New Order, Cocteau Twins, Gang of Four, Nine Inch Nails, Coldplay, The Arcade Fire, Bright Eyes and M83.

On May 28, for $55 you can see the Sasquatch! Music Festival at the Gorge Amphitheatre in Washington. Among those playing the one day event are Wilco, Kanye West, Modest Mouse and Bloc Party.

And on July 23-24, if you still have the energy and your van hasn't broken down just yet, head to Chicago for the now-one-weekend Lollapalooza (still the coolest name for a festival in the past 20 years). If you make it to the event you will be serenaded by rock stylings of such bands as The Pixies, Weezer, Dinosaur Jr. and Widespread Panic.

So there you have it. A brief sketch of what is to come between now and that fateful day we all gather again back in the fall. Hopefully this list will help steer you in the direction of some good music, but also, hopefully you'll get out and discover your own music, make your own lists, see shows in venues both near and far, large and small. But it's probably best that we don't get to far ahead of ourselves...we've still got two days of finals to make it through!

Of Montreal will be performing May 13 at the Social, with guests I Am the World Trade Center.

On July 12. This will be your first chance to purchase Late Registration, Kanye West's follow-up to the critically acclaimed The College Dropout. Expect more of the same hip analysis of pop culture, race roles and societal structure that made The College Dropout a classic to be prevalent on West's sophomore album as well.

And as if all this wasn't enough to keep you going through the end of exams and even on through summer school, know this: There are numerous great shows coming to the area. The Good Life, Of Montreal and The Blood Brothers each have headlining shows at The Social in the upcoming months, while at House of Blues you can catch shows by Paul Westerberg, James Brown, John Legend, Better than Ezra, and a reunited Dinosaur Jr. Not to be outdone, Hard Rock Live counters with Bright Eyes and the Village People on back-to-back nights in early June!

But perhaps the staple of summer music throughout the past 30 years has been the outdoor multi-day festival. If one is willing to invest the time and the money, then some of the best lineups in recent memory can be seen across the nation this year. Sadly, however, none are close to Florida. Here are a few of the top ones:

With Woman King, Iron and Wine presents a balanced Beam

Iron and Wine's Sam Beam reflects on his new EP, home city and family

CHRIS BOWERS  Staff Writer

... Sometimes the simplest things can have the biggest impacts; one basic, seemingly unimportant event can turn into what becomes the deciding point in our lives. We don't think much of them while they are happening, but somewhere down the line, we realize the impact they had, and they will forever hold a special place in our hearts.

Music can have this effect. "Yesterday" turned out to be one of the most beautiful songs of all time, yet it is simply Paul McCartney and a guitar. Much of what we hear today on the radio and major music networks has never learned this lesson. It focuses more on the production than the actual song itself. The advent of the computer as an instrument has made it possible for what should never even be considered as mediocre to become number one hits on the pop charts. That's why many of us who consider ourselves educated music fans turn our radios off and seek our music elsewhere.

But there are still those who care more about the song then the airplay, more about the music than the merchandise. And in most cases, these are the songs that end up standing the test of time and are the albums that become the most memorable. This lesson of simplicity is one that Sam Beam has taken to heart.

Throughout the past four years, Beam, better known to most as Iron and Wine, has been making simple music that often times just features him and an acoustic guitar. Music that while not overproduced, beautifully presents the listener with scenes of Americana and stories of love and admiration.

His first release was the ultra lo-fi The Creek Drank The Cradle. It was a collection of songs featuring hushed vocals accompanied by acoustic guitar, banjo and sometimes slide guitar, all of which were played by Beam. Recorded in his bedroom, where most of the songs were written and rehearsed over many a nights spent with his family, the album played like a soundtrack to the old South, with a focus on rural pastoral imagery.

What followed this was the slightly more polished and more produced album Our Endless Numbered Days. While the recording method changed slightly, the lyrical imagery and stories depicted in the songs did not. Then with the release of the Woman King EP in February, Beam continued the advancement with his most ambitious release to date. The six-song EP, each of which tells a story of a strong woman character, was Beam's first release with a full band. The band, however, plays his music, and it still has a distinct Iron and Wine sound to it. It's bluegrass rock and roll meets the Lylith Fair with a hint of electricity.

Beam acknowledges the advancement, saying "I keep trying to keep doing stuff that pushes me in different directions from what I've been doing. It would be a shame if it was the same stuff over and over again."

The advancement will continue with the release of his next EP in September, which finds the Southern influence of Beam paired with the western influence of Calexico.

But if you asked him, music is not his job; it's a hobby. Beam is a dedicated family man who says the best part of being a musician is that it gives him more time to spend with his family. "We sort of figure out how long I have to stay out, and then the rest of time I stay home," he said. "I love my kids, so it's easy for me to make them my priority."

Being a strong family man isn't the only thing that seems strikingly non-rockstar about Beam. Currently residing in Miami, the folk singer used to teach a class in screenwriting at the local community college before music became a full-time gig. Yes, Miami. Where, according to Will Smith, everyone has $100,000 cars. The two lifestyles just didn't seem to mesh. But when asked about the city he lived in, Beam just chuckled and said: "Well, the people are nice, and I like the weather, you know?" Somehow the simplistic answer seemed to fit.

Iron and Wine will be performing a sold-out show at The Social tomorrow. Doors open at 7 p.m.
Seven summer things for a geek to look forward to

From Lollapalooza to a potentially good Batman movie

Michael Lawrence
Staff Writer

As Alice Cooper said, “School’s out for summer!” So now, with all that extra time, you could either do something like volunteer at a homeless shelter, like you always wanted to do, or go in to your inner geekiness. Since no one cares about the poor and sick, choose the latter, and help to you sate that part of your soul, we here at the indie have come up with seven things for geeks to look forward to this summer. Remember, if all else fails, make a blog and bitch all summer long. Chances are someone even more bored than you will spend all day reading it.

1. The return of Family Guy
Because DVD sales and high cable ratings can only be ignored for so long, the Griffin saga is back on Fox as part of an animation block on Sundays. Geeks rarely get their dummies heard, so this is definitely a victory. The only question now is whether or not it’ll be as good. And if counterpart American Dad has improved since the pulpy post-Super Bowl pilot.

2. Lollapalooza 2005
The concert tour that was so big they had to shut it down last year! OK, that was due to lack of sales, so this year it’s narrowed itself from a traveling show to a two-day affair in Chicago with The Pixies, The Killers, The Walkmen and The Arcade Fire headlining.

3. Batman Begins
Shades of Schumacher or the beginning of a new era of cinematic glory for the dark knight detective? Christopher Nolan, who has shown he can weave cerebral suspense stories with the brilliant Memento and Following, sets to wipe the taste of camp from the cape and cowl, as he matches wits with the Scarecrow and Ra’s Al Ghul, two villains familiar to comic geeks and viewers of the animated series but unknown to the average filmgoer.

4. The Vans Warped Tour
Yeah, you’re thinking, “I thought this list was for geeks. What’s a punk concert sponsored by a shoe company doing on this list?” Because it’s one of the best places to pick up chicks. Think about it: young nubile girls who are obviously easy to manipulate. How else do you explain them listening to Hawthorne Heights and My Chemical Romance? They’re only one Tom Waits vinyl LP and Atom Egoyan film away from going from emo to Emo Phillips.

5. Star Wars Episode III
Geeks are already lined up at the theaters as of this issue’s publication, and with a PG-13 rating, will Jar Jar get the hideous beating he so badly deserves from Chewbacca, who makes his first onscreen appearance since 1983? Despite the hour or two of pseudo-political babble that’s sure to be in the film, seeing Darth Vader rise to evil prominence alone will make this one a must-see and a sure-fire blockbuster.

6. Harry Potter and the Half Blood Prince
Come July, fat guys named Fred will have an excuse to wear capes and hats for a day as the aspiring mage from Hogwarts sees the release of his sixth book. After this, only one more book in J.K. Rowling’s series remains. That is until she tries something completely different, fails miserably and comes crawling back with several spin-offs to regain her reputation.

7. Charlie and the Chocolate Factory
On the one hand, Tim Burton and Johnny Depp usually generate magic on the screen when they collaborate. On the other hand, the last time Tim Burton tried a “reinvestment” (this term) of a loved film, it was Planet of the Apes. But can even Depp’s charm match the gentle oddness of Gene Wilder? Even if Burton claims his version is truer to the book, the 1971 film is a cherished classic; that can’t be forgotten.
There's the chubby, wise-cracking, gas-passing dad; the caring-yet-strict, do-it-all wife; the 13-year-old son troubled by school and girls; and the older daughter with a poor self-image, trying her hardest just to fit in.

On the surface, it's the typical family.

Now throw in an infant bent on world domination with a vocabulary comparable to Webster himself; and a talking, martini-loving dog filled with philosophical wisdom. These final pieces complete the puzzle known as the Griffins, the dysfunctional family of five from Quahog, R.I. Oh yeah, and they are also the stars of a little animated show called Family Guy.

It's been six years since the Family Guy pilot debuted after the Super Bowl, but there is a reason you may have only discovered it about two years ago. After a mediocre debut of about 12.8 million viewers, which some call "disappointing," and poor ratings (the likely result of mixed time slots) Fox dropped Family Guy from its line-up. For some, it probably meant nothing. For many die-hard followers though, it meant absolute heartbreak.

But then, the unthinkable happened. Fox released DVD box sets of the three previously aired seasons and received an instant eye-opener: The DVDs went on to sell more than three million copies, making it the fourth-highest-selling TV DVD of all time.

Then, all of a sudden, Family Guy was on the air again. Cable's Cartoon Network began airing reruns only to be met with chart-topping ratings, even beating out late-night comedy kings Jay Leno and David Letterman.

Fox noticed this was no longer just a fluke, and soon made an unprecedented announcement: "Family Guy has been un-cancelled!" Family Guy was finally back, and would soon return with 35 all-new episodes. Millions could have only dreamed of this day.

Among those millions was Seth MacFarlane, Family Guy's 31-year-old creator. I had the chance to sit in on a recent telephone press conference with MacFarlane where he talked about what it was like to start working on Family Guy once again.

"Getting back into the mindset was easier than I thought," recalls MacFarlane. "I loved ... who wrote the Family Guy musical numbers to a kind blend of Rat Pack one-liners."

"The genesis of it was the idea to have a band and a live orchestra," adds MacFarlane. "I wanted to do something splashy and edgy, but also with a personal touch."
a rough transition,” “But I think what that we did have five years to be produced season that had been five years. So we were able to update them a little bit,” MacFarlane says.

He expected a Family Guy CD and a wanting to spoil the story, MacFarlane says. “I think we were able to do it. It was essentially a rough transition,” he says.

But something everyone is sure to enjoy is the once-mentioned, now confirmed must be 18 to enter, “Detoxify” that we did. “The way we were able to do this was that it was added onto our episode order. If it was a theatrical release, we wouldn’t be able to do it. It was essentially the production process for three episodes that are actually a movie,” explains MacFarlane.

The plot finds diabolical baby Stewie on a search for “his real father.” While not wanting to spoil the story, MacFarlane hints at a third-act plot twist that will take the movie in a totally different direction. Exactly what direction though, we will have to wait and see.

It is obvious that a lot has changed, as far as television standards go, since the show has been on the air. Ever since Miss Jackson’s infamous “wardrobe malfunction,” the FCC has been lurking over networks like a gray, stormy cloud. Many have feared that this will ultimately lead to a more tone-downed Family Guy product. But as Seth explains, “we shouldn’t have to worry too much.

“From my standpoint ... I have a clear sense from the Broadcast Standards Department that they are doing their best to kind of help shield us from as much of [the censoring] as they can and keep the show the same that it has been. That’s something that has really helped us a lot,” comments MacFarlane.

It is safe to say 2005 looks like a promising year for us die-hard Family Guy fans. Though the show may have fallen short the first few times around, MacFarlane feels better about its chances in the fourth season.

“I think, just from getting out there and kind of taking an overall temperature of how many people are aware of the show. ... I think it’s going to do better,” explains MacFarlane. “It seems like just with my daily conversations with people that many, many more people are aware of it than have been before... the fourth time could be the charm for us.”

And as a humble MacFarlane explains, as it was we the viewers who ultimately put Family Guy on the air, it is up to us to keep the show alive.

“To me, the best thing the network could do is put the show in a time slot and keep it there. I think the show will [survive] if it’s worthy. If we’ve done our jobs then people will watch, and if they don’t, then we shouldn’t be on the air anyway (laughs).”

I know I’ll be watching.

Catch the re-premiere of Family Guy at 9 p.m. this Sunday on FOX. Family Guy: Live in Las Vegas is available on Geffen Records.

The Chorus strikes sappy chord

More character focus could have moved this decent film to greatness

Paul Haynes

The Chorus is a perfectly competent example of classical storytelling that should please anyone who holds Cinema Paradiso dear to their heart. After all, this is the kind of movie, released in the United States by Miramax Films, that has become representative of its once adventurous distributor's increasingly conservative repertoire.

The Chorus is a film that has been carefully groomed to tug at your heartstrings and be welcomed with open arms by audiences, and this is partly the reason the film has been given a decidedly lukewarm reception. We've seen this before. And it doesn't help that France, year after year, submits marginal films like French Twist and East-West as its official Academy Award entries over inarguably better and more relevant works.

The framing device that opens and closes this film is a paternal nurturing primed to set the tone. Mathieu, an aging, gray-haired man is called back to his hometown with news of a death, and they begin to reminisce about the past. Gerard Jugnot, as composer Clément Mathieu, leads a chorus in The Chorus. The sappy-but-decent film opens tomorrow at the Enzian.

Kutcher and Peet give us a look at just what Love is

Brett Ryan Bonowicz
Staff Writer

ast week, you heard about my experience in L.A. Here's what happened at the A Lot Like Love press conference.

While it might have only cracked the top five this week with $7.7 million, there's still a lot to love about A Lot Like Love. Looking scruffy and possibly taller then one might imagine, Ashton Kutcher ruminates on the differences between love and a lot like love.

"That's a difficult question for me because I'm somewhat of a love cynic. I don't understand how this film has been given a lukewarm reception. We've seen this before. And it doesn't help that France, year after year, submits marginal films like French Twist and East-West as its official Academy Award entries over inarguably better and more relevant works.

The writer of the film, Colin Patrick Lynch, said that he wanted to create a film that avoided the genre clichés. Nigel Cole said he wanted to make a film with young people after having previously worked with elder chaps in both Calendar Girls and Saving Grace, mashing these two goals together has created the film now out in theatres.

But in following with his previous film Calendar Girls (which Cole has many elderly women nude), Cole continues what could possibly be a career motif in A Lot Like Love. In the film both Kutcher and Peet are nude (in a PG-13 kind of way, of course).

When asked about that experience, Kutcher said "I think that we were both so insecure about ourselves that we weren't really looking at anyone else. We were on a sound stage and we weren't actually outside. So I think that kind of helped because it's a little bit more private."

Peet added that "We were about halfway through the shoot when we had to do that." Kutcher later added that the shooting day had little to do with how he felt about the scene. "I like being nude as often as I can. As much as I can be nude I try to be nude. No... it's really not that great for me. For other people I like them being nude, but not me so much. It's this awkward thing and you're completely exposed. I had this banana thong with like a catcher's mitt to wear. It was a little awkward!"

With statements like that it's hard not to be intrigued, hard to not want to see the film, hard to not want to see it. As much as I can be nude I try to be nude. No... it's really not that great for me. For other people I like them being nude, but not me so much. It's this awkward thing and you're completely exposed. I had this banana thong with like a catcher's mitt to wear. It was a little awkward!"

Here they come, for better or worse:
The indie’s summer movie preview

This year brings with it the usual scary mix of potential bombs and blockbusters

MIKE FERRARO
Staff Writer

Get ready; it’s that time of year again. Summertime is upon us and this is a time where multiplexes fill their rooms with sequels to mediocre films, explosions, computer-generated explosions, Paul Walker action pictures and remakes galore. So here is just a small preview of what’s to come. Get your shoes on and head to theater, and prepare to be disgraced.

MAY:

Crash — May 6
Starring: Sandra Bullock, Don Cheadle, Matt Dillon and Ludacris.
Unfortunately (or is it fortunately?), this isn’t a remake of the horrific film with the same name from 1996 about weird sex addicts that like to perform the act while crashing cars. The screenwriter of Million Dollar Baby takes his hand at direction this film about a car accident that brings a multitude of characters together in Los Angeles. Sounds like a mixture of mores Perros and Short Cuts to us.

House of Wax — May 6
Starring: EliShia Cuthbert, Chad Michael Murray and Paris Hilton.
A remake of a Vincent Price classic, this new update was specifically designed for the three people on this Earth who haven’t slept with Paris Hilton yet. Here is your chance to see her frolic around in a bra and scream.

Kingdom of Heaven — May 6
Starring: Orlando Bloom and Liam Neeson.
Hey Orlando, do you have a phobia of starring in movies that take place past the 19th century?

Kicking and Screaming — May 13
Starring: Will Ferrell.
From an old school college kid to an elf to an anchorman, and now, a soccer dad. This Ferrell guy sure has some range.

Unleashed — May 13
Starring: Jet Li, Morgan Freeman and Bob Hoskins.
Good news is, this film was written by Luc Besson (Leon, The Fifth Element). The bad news is that this movie was once called Danny the Dog.

June:

Cinderella Man — June 3
Starring: Russell Crowe and Renee Zellweger.
A Depression-era boxing flick about the comeback of Jim Braddock sounds about as exciting as watching a blank screen. It’s summer; we want explosions and fire.

The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants — June 3
Starring: Amber Tamblyn and Alexis Bledel.
Who cares what this movie is about; it has the best title of the summer. Sounds like something you may find in a clearance bin at Premiere Adult Factory Outlet.

June:

National Treasure — June 10
Starring: Billy Bob Thornton and Greg Kinnear.
Thornton once again unleashes his Burt Santa character, but instead of belittling poor kids in a shopping mall, he takes it to the ball field. While remakes are usually discouraged amongst the cinema snobs, at least this one has director Richard Linklater (Dazed and Confused and Before Sunrise, After Sunset) on board to ensure the suckness will be kept to a minimum.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith — June 10
Starring: Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt.
This Doug Liman-directed action flick pits Pitt against Jolie, where they play a husband and wife spy team that get assigned to kill each other. This movie would be awesome if it had a Reservoir Dogs-style ending and the results were real.

Batman Begins — June 17
Starring: Christian Bale, Michael Caine, Liam Neeson and Ken Watanabe.
Miller was once attached to this project but was fired for some reason or another. Then, he co-directed Sin City with Robert Rodriguez and created the best comic movie ever made. So who cares about another Batman movie?

Herbie: Fully Loaded — June 24

COMING TO DVD — APRIL 26

The Schwartz is with you in a new 2-disc set

Plus, a new version of White Chicks! Woohoo!

BRETT RYAN BONOWICZ
Staff Writer

National Treasure

Another movie where Nicolas Cage pretends to be cool. National Treasure did better than expected box office in the United States, which has led to a full-blown special-edition DVD that includes an alternate ending and deleted scenes, with audio commentary on each. There’s also a making-of called On location with National Treasure and three features: The Knights Templar, Treasure Hunters Revealed and Riley’s Decode This!

Spaceballs Collectors Edition

In anticipation of Episode III, MGM found it fitting to release this two-disc in an attempt to confuse some fanboys into thinking that this actually is Episode III. And with all the bonus material, there will probably be a few people in Kansas who are gonna be really disappointed when they realize this is Spaceballs and not Star Wars. This new DVD includes outtakes, an audio commentary with director Mel Brooks and a production interview with Brooks and Thomas Meehan. Also included are two features: John Candy: Comedy Spirit and Spaceballs: The Documentary.

When DVD was invented, it was a breathtaking advance for the industry, and finally this week the release everyone said would never come has arrived:

WHITE CHICKS (unrated and uncut)

Finally! After years of banging down the doors at the behest of studio executives and against the better judgment of our spouses, all of the hard work has paid off. No more will America (and Canada) have to settle for just regular White Chicks; now there’s a choice — the way it always should have been. Damn the man for not letting this be the original version! Included on this highly anticipated release is an audio commentary with geniuses Keenen Ivory Wayans, Marlon Wayans and Shawn Wayans. A featurette called How’d They Do That? is also included because “How’d they do that?” is a question you’ll be asking yourself the whole time you’re watching the film. Lastly there are two other features: A Wayans Comedy and an on-the-set Starz! piece.

A SPECIAL ADVANCE SCREENING!

THE SISTERHOOD OF THE TRAVELING PANTS

Laughter.

Cry.

Share the pants.

DATE: WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 2005

TIME: 8:00 PM

LOCATION: WATERFORD LAKES REGAL CINEMA

TICKETS AVAILABLE AT: STUDENT UNION ROOM 208

ARIVE EARLY! SEATING IS FIRST COME, FIRST SERVE!
MOVIES

Coming up: War of the Worlds, The Dukes of Hazzard

FROM IT2

Starring: Lindsay Lohan and Justin Long.

Second-best film title of the summer, starring that oh-so-fresh-and-legal Lindsay Lohan. We’ve lost remakes count so far, but here is another about a Volkswagen bug that comes to life and kills people with its spiney flower hubcaps of death. Actually, that is what we were hoping for. Instead, all we get is some happy family movie about racing. Boring.

Land of the Dead — June 24
Starring: Simon Baker and John Leguizamo.

Cult director George Romero (Night of the Living Dead) rises from the grave and gives another zombie film. The world will never have enough zombie films.

War of the Worlds — June 29
Starring: Tom Cruise, Dakota Fanning and Tim Robbins.

How many does the world have to see the same popular cities and buildings get destroyed? And poor H.G. Wells. No one can do any of his novels justice. Not even his great-grandson (see 2002’s The Time Machine).

JULY:

Fantastic Four — July 8
Starring: Jessica Alba, Michael Chiklis and Chris Evans.

Didn’t Roger Corman try this once and fail? Well, a superhero film where Jessica Alba and The Commish team up to fight evil can’t be that bad. Can it?

Charlie and the Chocolate Factory — July 15
Starring: Johnny Depp.

Tim Burton and Johnny Depp work together again, and while they may not be as great of a team as Akira Kurosawa and Toshiro Mifune, they still have made some good films together. Will this be another? Right now, it is unclear. It has one strike against it already and that is because it is a remake of a film adapted from a great Roald Dahl novel.

Into the Blue — July 15
Starring: Jessica Alba and Paul Walker.

One of the few non-remakes of the summer brings a shirtless Paul Walker back to the screen, this time with sidekick Jessica Alba (mostly in bikini attire). This is supposed to be a rip-roaring adventure about water and modern-day pirates. Sounds lame, but Walker is sure to give the performance of the year (under Hayden Christensen for Episode III). This will hold us over while we are waiting for the third chapter in the climactic Fast and the Furious franchise.

The Island — July 22
Starring: Scarlett Johansson and Ewan McGregor.

From the director of Pearl Harbor, comes a film about ... running. At least that is what the pointless trailer tells us. How does this guy get work? Oh yeah, armies of people pay to see his films, no matter how horrible they keep getting.

The Brothers Grimm — July 29
Starring: Matt Damon and Heath Ledger.

Terry Gilliam rarely disappoints, and since he has been absent from the screen for so long, our hopes are high for this tale about those wacky fairytale brothers. It’s a shame his Don Quixote film never saw the light of day.

AUGUST:

The Dukes of Hazzard — Aug. 5
Starring: Johnny Knoxville, Jessica Simpson and Seann William Scott.

Take an old television show, throw in a jackass, a Stifler and an annoying rich brat, and you’ve got yourself a feature-length film. It probably would have been great if it starred Paul Walker and Ashton Kutcher instead.

Doom — Aug. 5

Everyone knows that movies based on video games are always doomed. Take a look at Super Mario Bros., Resident Evil and House of the Dead if you don’t believe us.

Deuce Bigalow: European Gigolo — Aug. 12
Starring: Rob Scheinder and Eddie Griffin.

Six years after the first, Columbia Pictures decides that it’s about that time that they drop us another Deuce. Was it necessary? Too bad they couldn’t hold it in longer.

The Skeleton Key — Aug. 12
Starring: Kate Hudson and John Hurt.

This movie is supposedly about voodoo or something, but it’s kind of hard to concentrate on anything else when that dude from Alien looks scarier than anything else going on. Perhaps this will be this year’s Serpent and the Rainbow.

Domino — Aug. 19
Starring: Keira Knightley and Mickey Rourke.

Inspired by the tales of Boba Fett, the infamous daughter of actor Laura. Harvey decided that modeling wasn’t as exciting as bounty hunting. Since Tony Scott directed it, prepare for some hella-cious editing and countless camera moves. Take some Dramamine before you head to the theater.
Fond farewell from The Geek Life

After a year and a half on the bridge, Elizabeth Fernandez is moving on out

All good things must come to an end, it seems. All bad things do as well, I suppose. We just tend to miss them longer.

I think this column, for me, and I hope for you as well, dear reader, was one of the good things. And now we must bid a fond farewell to each other. I will miss you, and maybe you will miss me, but we learned, we laughed, until time made fools of us all. It seems like only weeks have passed since my heydays in Orlando, the land of plastic and make believe, yet I have become someone and something else. I have traveled much, learned much, experienced loss and gained so much joy in the past year and a half. Above all I hope that I have managed to convey at least some of that, some of my musings, my memories, the very basics of what makes me tick and think, with anyone willing to devote five minutes to reading about whatever it is geeks do in their spare time.

When I first proposed the idea for this column, I was unsure of exactly how much of myself I would be able and willing to share with the crowds that drift through UCs not so hollow halls. The idea of sharing some of the personal parts of myself with all my friends, enemies and everyone in between was not really what I was looking for. Yet as I found myself pondering the intricacies of the geek universe, I soon became impossible to separate me from things I cherished so. When one is a fannish geektalking from birth like me, so many of your thoughts and opinions are affected by whatever it is you happen to be a fan of. Science fiction expanded my mind, and cartoons gave me my peculiar sense of humor, while video games made me a true technophile and comics nurtured my imagination.

The writers, artists, actors and the like who have made my corner of the world a better place have changed me in so many ways. The nerdy little girl who loved to read grew up to be literate and well spoken, a writer herself. It was partly in gratitude to the writers who came before me that I wrote my first short story. To them I am thankful.

But what would a writer really be without at least a few faithful readers? Is it to you, the audience, that I am most grateful for. You gave me a reason to remember things I hadn’t thought of for years, research my favorite shows, relive my childhood obsessions and, most importantly, to imagine.

In my first column, I went to great lengths to try describing and defining what it actually means to be a geek. Well, to be honest, up until that point, I had not given it that much thought. Since then, I have spent a few hours every week, for a year and a half, meditating on what being a geek actually means. It means to be open to ideas, to embrace being different and accepting a counter culture that doesn’t always try to fit in in exactly the same ways. There are broad trends for sure, but the movie geek sitting in his room watching Blade Runner for the 700th time isn’t trying to be like everyone else. At least he isn’t. He has been made up until 4 a.m. on a Saturday trying to level-up. They realized there were things they wanted that the rest of the world might not understand, and they decided that didn’t matter to them.

Thank you to them for making this possible, for realizing that the things they were teased for at 12 made them special in ways only kindred spirits could appreciate, and for understanding that a life taken too seriously was not worth living. And so I dedicate this, my very last column ever to be published in this fine publication, to them. This is written by a geek for her fellow geeks, in gratitude. So long, and thanks for everything — not just the fish.

Strap bottle rockets to your head and let’s go

In last week’s edition, you read the beginnings of my journey to Internet Camp. If you skipped it, here’s a recap: My girlfriend, some friends, and I went camping in North Carolina with 110 people from the Internet. This is part two of our story.

After awakening Saturday morning to the sound of people talking about World of Warcraft next to our tent, we rubbed our eyes and unzipped the flap. Internet Camp was alive and well. The kegs were tapped, and folks rushed to ease their hangovers and get a head start on being wasted by nightfall. A round of firecrackers soon gave everyone sleeping past 10:30 a.m. a rude awakening.

Saturday, the only full day of camp, consisted mostly of sitting around and talking about various topics that involved the Internet, Linux, computers, television, food, games and forum drama. Each group began by arranging its folding chairs in a circle to get the chat room started. After our crew made the drive to the nearest Wal-Mart to buy some shoes and an air mattress, we returned to find the start of some actual activities.

The official sport of Internet Camp is poker. But this was not just any poker game: It was “Ban Me” Poker. All losers would be required to get banned from our mutual host forums in a crazy way, traditionally by posting disgusting naked pictures of themselves. Their threads’ delinquency would create a public spectacle shortly following their return to civilization.

As nightfall approached, I ate my third can of cold Chef Boyardee, since I can’t cook anything without a microwave. Goons fired Roman candles and potato cannons back and forth across the creek in a faux “war” between the sides. Eventually, two guys got tired of such weak sauce and geared up for Mech-wars. They got suited up in camouflage, army helmets and earplugs. Most importantly, they each strapped two boxes of bottle rockets to their helmets. As they stood on opposite sides of the hill, their fuses were lit and they walked around, spewing whistling death in all directions. The crowd cheered in admiration, as it then fled for their lives and sanity. Somehow, no one was injured.

As the skies darkened, we congregated around the fires for warmth and light. One guy acting as pseudo-camp counselor ran a storytelling competition, entered by people who discussed alcoh- olism, severe beatings, tattoos, drugs, piercings and sex. In the midst, the main fireworks show began as volunteers fired them... into the sky for a change. When it ended, our host told us that the police had stopped by and thanked us for a lovely show, but had asked that it not continue much longer. After a sigh of relief, festivities continued well after the last keg was exhausted.

That night was cold enough to ensure a night of shivering despite both tent and sleeping bag. We awoke to more idiots with fireworks as one guy burned a Bible, its black ashes fluttering down over the land that will be forever scared by our memory. After a long but uneventful drive home, we anxiously dove into the shower and resumed studying — but not without checking the Internet first, of course!
CONGRATULATIONS GRADS!
