Senator resigns to return to activism roots

Sticking to campaign promises tops list of Matt DeVlieger's reasons for parting with SGA

Matt DeVlieger isn't an ordinary student. In fact, his actions and words profile a person who wants to be anything but ordinary.

He had served as a SGA senator since last November, but he abruptly decided that his time with the Student Government Association had come to an end. At Thursday night's Senate meeting, DeVlieger told his fellow senators that he was through with his Senate duties and would resume his role as a campus activist.

DeVlieger's announcement came as no surprise to the majority of senators as many of them had already caught wind of his impending decision. Despite the knowledge his departure, many senators were still upset with his decision because they said his character and opinions would be missed at Senate meetings. DeVlieger admitted that some senators had tried to talk him out of his resignation, but he said that a number of factors made the decision overwhelming for him. "I felt that there was a part of the Senate that wasn't doing what they said they would do," he said.

DeVlieger said, "There were a lot of promises offered and most senators said they'd be willing to make commitments for the benefit of all students and in the end people frustrated that." Power trips and elitism were also among the reasons he gave for his resignation. "They were scared of him and the people he continued to work with because they're not "generic MTV kids," some senators denied this claim and maintained that this Senate has plenty of diversity and represents a greater span of the student body. "Come in with his views and ideas and I thought that he actually did a good job of learning how to compromise," Sen. Pro Tempore Mark White said of DeVlieger. "That's what Senate's all about: compromis­ing and trying to find a happy medium."

After his resignation, DeVlieger said, "It's kind of surprising to me that he quit based on something like he wasn't being heard. I thought he'd come along pretty well. I thought he did a pretty good job of compromising and acting on other people's views and I thought we were doing the same for his views. It was really surprising to hear his resi­gnation."

Future missionary needs God's call to change the world

After graduation, student plans four-month trip to Peru to aid impoverished

In the town center of Lima, Peru, a disheveled and battered lit­tle girl begs for money. Her left foot is covered by an old, tattered shoe while her right foot is bare. Her eyes are full of holes, her shirt is torn in half and the dirt she is covered in attracts bugs. Chances are she has a disease or to be hungry. When the vulnerable girl approaches her, another empty­handed girl is too skinny to be seen. Public viewing.

When her beating ends, she picks herself up off the ground and returns to the street to beg again. When Jacob San Roman was young, he encountered the girl while visiting family in Peru. "Seeing this little girl publicly beaten affected me," San Roman said. "I realized that God was calling on me to change the world." San Roman is now 22 and look­ing forward to graduating in December. But her post-gradua­tion plans don't include the typi­cal self-indulgence and relaxation that most college alumni look for­ward to.

In January of 2006, he is leaving on a missionary trip to Peru that will last four months. "I'm half Peruvian, so I feel that I will be helping my culture while I am down south," San Roman said.

San Roman, a criminal justice senior, and Peru­nian-Peruvian woman, experienced the real face of poverty for the first time. Full of heat, Tolima's homeless people lived on the streets while others lived in shanties made of dirt and wood. "I didn't see anything that depresses," San Roman said.

When San Roman returned home, the woman wanted to help but did not know where or when. She put her faith in God and knew that would lead her in the right direc­tion. "God has never let me down."

Many people believe that they're going to make a great living after college. That belief seems to be supported by the statistics. As of 2002, the median income for those with a bachelor's degree was $36,646, while those with a high school diploma earned $24,036. However, this belief is not always accurate. Many people with a high school diploma earn much more than those with a bachelor's degree. For example, a survey conducted by the U.S. Department of Labor found that the median income for high school graduates who worked full-time was $30,000 in 2002, while the median income for those with a bachelor's degree was $36,646. This suggests that the belief that a college degree will lead to a higher income is not always accurate. In addition to the statistics, many people have personal experiences that suggest that a college degree is not always necessary for a successful career. For example, many people who have not attended college have been successful in a variety of careers. This suggests that the belief that a college degree is necessary for success is not always accurate. Overall, the belief that a college degree is necessary for success is not always accurate. While many people believe that they're going to make a great living after college, the statistics and personal experiences suggest that this belief is not always accurate. This may be why many people are choosing to pursue alternative paths to success, such as starting their own businesses or pursuing their passions. Ultimately, the decision to pursue a college degree or an alternative path to success is a personal one. It is up to each individual to determine what path is best for them. RACHEL BABBACH

Some might not consider it a big deal, but for many people, the issue of missing a required course in college can have a significant impact on their academic and professional future. The reason for this is because many employers require a college degree for certain positions, and those who do not have one may be at a disadvantage in the job market. In addition, many employers require a college degree for promotions, and those who do not have one may be at a disadvantage in this regard as well. Therefore, it is important for students to ensure that they have completed all of their required courses in order to graduate on time. If a student is struggling with a particular course, it is important for them to seek help as soon as possible. This might involve reaching out to a tutor, attending extra office hours, or even taking a different approach to the material. Ultimately, it is up to each individual to take responsibility for their own academic success. By doing so, they can ensure that they have the best possible chance of success in their future endeavors.

Federal court dismisses case against university

CHICAGO — A federal judge on Friday dismissed a lawsuit filed by former collegiate journalists who said their First Amendment rights were violated when the school’s dean of student affairs insisted on reviewing the paper’s contents because it is published under the auspices of Governors State University’s office of student affairs. The newspaper’s editor in chief, Jeff Porche, and reporters Margaret Hasty and Steven Baras sued university trustees and a number of school officials after Carter said the paper’s printing was stopped in 2000 and told him not to go to press until she had reviewed the contents.

A federal judge previously reviewed the newspaper articles against everyone except students.

The 7th Circuit Court of Appeals said that GOVU had a right to reasonably regulate the paper’s contents because it is published under the auspices of Governors State University.

Former university President pleaded guilty in $12,000 fraud

GLENDALE — A former associate deputy at the University of Florida pleaded guilty to wire fraud for pocketing more than $23,000 intended for continuing education programs for doctors.

Senators said today that University of Florida President Vincent C. C. Newland, 63, had unlimited power to draw down the university’s endowment because he had not prepared the university’s annual financial statement. According to the senators, C. Newland had been president for over 20 years in prison and a $250,000 grant is in the process of being submitted.

His release on bail was delayed because of a legal challenge.

WASHINGTON — President Bush, who is pushing for democratic reform among the world’s nations, met Tuesday with Vietnamese Prime Minister Phan Van Khai and praised the communist nation’s economic progress, steps toward religious freedom and continued efforts to fight terrorism.

The two leaders talked about Vietnam’s desire to join the World Trade Organization, business issues and human rights and signed an agreement that Bush said would make it easier for people to worship freely in Vietnam.

As the 7-year-old Vietnamese leader met with Bush in the Oval Office, several hundred protesters outside demonstrated against supposed repression in the communist nation.

Khal’s talk with Bush is part of a working visit by Bush where he is meeting with business leaders on both coasts.

Senate approves inventory of natural gas and oil resources

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted Tuesday to conduct an inventory of offshore oil and gas resources, including in areas that have been off limits to drilling for nearly a quarter century. Opponents called it a prelude to eventual gas development in areas now under a drilling ban.

But senators from a number of coastal states argued vigorously against the inventory legislation, noting the Interior Department already has a good inventory of oil and gas resources beneath the Outer Continental Shelf and doesn’t need a new accounting.

Sen. Ben Nelson, D-Ne., and Mel Martinez, R-Fla., voted to strike the provision from a broad energy bill. Their amendment was defeated.

Proponents of the drilling inventory argued that the country needs to know more specifically where offshore oil and gas resources might be available for future use.

A federal judge in Pennsylvania dismissed a lawsuit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union that sought to prevent the 9/11 commission from releasing any information on government’s role in 9/11.

The commission has said it will release all information except for information that would “seriously harm national security.”

It is not clear whether the judge will allow the ACLU to appeal the case, which also involves government agencies’ role in the 9/11 attacks.

Meanwhile, 11 suspected Taliban members were killed in an attack on a military base in eastern Afghanistan.

The U.S. military announced that it had killed 11 suspected Taliban members in an attack on a military base in eastern Afghanistan.

The attack was one of several that have rocked Afghanistan in recent days.

A federal judge earlier this year ruled that the U.S. government could continue to hold Guantanamo Bay prisoners because it is needed to protect national security.

The judge’s decision is being appealed by the military.

I love shopping, but I also love giving back to my community. When I make a purchase at any one of UCF Business Services many locations, that's exactly what I do.

UCF Business Services does not receive any funding from the state. Profits they receive are reinvested into the UCF community through their generous donations.

Being able to shop while making a difference in my college community... I'd say that's definitely a cause that makes campus spending worthwhile.
O-Teamers impart wisdom to newest batch of UCF Knights

By BRENDA WORN

SANFORD — When they entered the University of Central Florida as freshmen in the fall of 2005, 27 student leaders started their last journey. That same month, the students from the graduating class met for the second time in the last four years to talk to an incoming class in the summer orientation sessions.

The students, who are members of the UCF Orientation Team, were a mix of first-years and upperclassmen. They were asked to share their experiences with the incoming freshmen.

The team is comprised of 26 students and 20 community leaders. The team members were selected based on their campus involvement, leadership skills and skill set. And if you are an O-Teamer, something important new freshmen must know: These O-Teamers serve as mentors and not advisors.

For the most part, we are the last contact for the freshmen. We have the chance to talk to the child who is a little unsure of the college environment or the child who is struggling with a particular subject. Many of these freshmen have been through the O-Team experience before. The students want to make sure they are ready to help their new freshmen.

The first class to arrive at the summer orientation session was the 1,000 students who were selected through a lottery system. Many of the students did not know what to expect on the first day. Some were excited to be on campus and eager to meet new people, while others were a little nervous about meeting new people and starting a new life.

The session began with an icebreaker game where the students were paired with a mentor from the Orientation Team. The mentors and mentees were given a list of questions to ask each other, and the mentors were asked to give advice on how to handle different situations.

The students were also asked to share their experiences with the incoming freshmen. Many of the students had been through the Orientation Team and were able to give advice on how to handle different situations.

The session ended with a group activity where the students were asked to write down their goals for the fall semester. The students were then asked to share their goals with the group. The activity was designed to help the students set realistic goals for the fall semester and to help them stay on track.

The students were then asked to go to their respective dorms and begin their first day on campus. Many of the students were excited to be on campus and eager to meet new people, while others were a little nervous about meeting new people and starting a new life.

The incoming freshmen were given a list of resources to help them with their transition to college. The list included information about the student center, the academic advising office, and the student life office.

The incoming freshmen were then asked to take a break and to come back to the student center for the next session. The session began with a brief introduction to the student life office and the student center. The students were then asked to introduce themselves to the group and to share their experiences with the incoming freshmen.

Service helps team refocus

Jeffrey Williams descended from the roof of the hammering support beam line. The Knights on the field as they represent them on back half of the final game’s second half. The Miracle League is another event that adds part, in keeping on track. TheAwesomely. [They are] joyfully said.

While he won’t be attending Senate meetings anymore, he does, however, plans to maintain a working relationship with his former fellow senators in order to better serve the Progressive Caucus for which he acts as co-chair.

His plans for the immediate future include working on a program that would offer a charter service to and from downtown for students. DeVlieger cited the CSU program like that would help cut down on didactic and social work and would not only be safer for everyone, but would also give students who haven’t lived in Orlando for an extended time a way to connect and socialize with a young alum who is working in the city.

He also wants to see new housing initiatives added on campus to stay alongside the many existing student dorms. He wants to see a better variety of healthy food options and drink alternatives. He even said he’d like to see some vending machines pulled off of campus to remove some of the more unhealthy food and drink options.

Both Gerry Gergley and Johnny Rouse have been a key part of UCF athletics and the Orlando community since 1970.

HELPING TO BUILD A LEGACY

ANDY VASQUEZ

Former UCF wrestling heavyweight Johnny Rouse can add another honor to his list of accomplishments. Last week, the UCF Athletics Association announced his selection to the 2003 class of the UCF Athletics Hall of Fame. Rouse, who now coaches the UCF wrestling team—which wrapped up its second consecutive National Championship in March—has been a staple at UCF since 1970 when he set foot on UCF's (then-known as Florida Technical University) campus for the first time.

Rouse's current involvement in the UCF club wrestling team is just a small part of his deep athletic history as a Knight. Rouse was UCF's first ever wrestling heavyweight when he was on the team, in 1971 and 1972 when it won an NCAA program. After graduating in 1972 he came back to UCF the next year as an assistant coach. He position he served in until 1976. Six years later he returned as the coach of the wrestling team for a single season.

The 1976 Rouse was coach of the Winter Park High School wrestling team, and for his services he was honored by the National Wrestling Hall of Fame with a Lifetime Service award.

It would be impossible though to tell the story of Rouse's success without telling the story of Gerry Gergley. Gergley has been associated with UCF, now the University of Central Florida, since 1970. Gergley has been teaching at UCF since 1970, and he decided to retire after this season.

For me the coolest thing has been to know people like Gerry [Gergley]—JOHNNY ROUSE ON HIS FRIENDSHIP WITH HIS FORMER COACH

THE EXTRA POINT

Andy Vasquez

Dear Robert Horry,

When are you going to retire? Aren't you like 65 years old? OK, I know you aren't that old, but it seems like you have been helping teams win championships for a long time. First, as the Houston Rocket for 18 years ago in the NBA Finals, when you were a young and unproven player, you stepped up and hit every big shot your team needed to capture the title.

You did it again—well and two missed free throws by Nick Anderson, which would have sealed game six, and helped Derick Roy's Magic to make another trip to the Finals. That experience made you the most clutch player in NBA history, and you earned your respect.

You could have won games in 2002 Western Conference Finals. The Lakers are trailing the Sacramento Kings by three points with just 16 seconds remaining. Kobe can't drain a last-second shot, but the Kings' Mike Bibby drives the ball back to you, who was walking back to the bench in disgust. As the ball sinks in, you cold blooded it 64 feet away from the basket. You single-handedly beat the Kings and tied the series at two games apiece, one game away from breaking the spirit of your Lakers. You went on to win in Game 5, and then fell off the New Jersey Nets in the NBA Finals.

While the Lakers wouldn't have won a single championship—heck, look what's happened since that year. It's been two years and they aren't even in the playoffs. You stepped up and hit the big shot in your series against the Nets. You got the S.O.S. team to win a single championship in the last 50 years of the game.

Pressure made Rasheed Wallace make arguably the worst mistake in the history of the NBA Finals. Pressure made your teammates in effective, but pressure made you, who was walking back to the bench in disgust.

As the ball somehow came straight to you, your eyes lit up like it was Christmas, and of course you took the shot and the ball hit nothing but net. That was the moment of the years past and the past moment of your career.

The series is tied at one, and you, who was walking back to the bench in disgust, was turned into the man hero. You stepped up and hit that big shot, even though you were seven and then roll over the New Jersey Nets in the NBA Finals.

As the ball somehow came straight to you, your eyes lit up like it was Christmas, and of course you took the shot and the ball hit nothing but net. That was the moment of the years past and the past moment of your career.

You bailed your boys out of a black and white game five when it seemed your team needed you. Without you, and the help of the Lakers, you would have lost the series.

The worst mistake in the history of the NBA Finals: The moment of the years past and the past moment of your career.

So who could forget game four of the 2002 Western Conference Finals. The Lakers are trailing the Sacramento Kings by big points with just six seconds remaining. Kobe can't drain a last-second shot, but the Kings' Mike Bibby drives the ball back to you, who was walking back to the bench in disgust. The first week on campus was a whirlwind for head wrestling coach Greg Gergley.

"This first week on campus was crazy," Gergley said. "The administration, the booster club, the football team, the students, everyone. It was a whirlwind." He added, "It's been a great start to the year." His predecessor,Persy Rouse, suggested that Gergley bring some "guts" to the program and make it a reality. Gergley said, "I'm just happy to be here in the sport that I love." Rouse said, "He has brought a lot of energy and enthusiasm to the program." Gergley added, "I'm working hard to bring success to the program, and the students and the community are supporting us." Rouse said, "We are proud to have him on our team." Gergley said, "I'm excited to be here in a new role and to work with the students and the community."

Germantown High School of Florida

Germantown High School of Florida is a public high school located in Germantown, Florida. The school is part of the Orange County Public Schools district. Germantown High School was founded in 1951 and is one of the oldest high schools in Florida. The school has a strong academic program and offers a wide range of extracurricular activities. Germantown High School has a long tradition of success in athletics, and the wrestling team is a perennial contender at the state and national levels. The wrestling team has won numerous state championships and has had multiple state champions. The team has a strong tradition of producing successful wrestlers, and many former wrestlers have gone on to have successful careers in wrestling. Germantown High School is proud of its wrestling program and is committed to providing its students with the best possible experience in the sport. The team has a strong coaching staff and a dedicated group of students who are committed to achieving success on and off the mat. Germantown High School is a great place to be a wrestler, and the team is looking forward to a successful season.

UCF Knights

The UCF Knights are a Division I college football team representing the University of Central Florida in the American Athletic Conference. The team began play in 1982 and has made several trips to the College Football Playoff. The team has a strong fan base and is known for its student-athletes and athletic programs. The team has a long history of success in football, and the Knights are considered one of the top programs in the country. The team is led by head coach Dan Mullen, who has a 100-18 record in his nine seasons at the helm. In the long drawn out saga of a career that has been...

George W. Bush’s “War on Terrorism” has brought down the people rights—mainly from America for the attacks on 9/11. It appears that the United States’ intelligence has finally made some significant progress.

In the upcoming 27th issue of the CAA Times, a column written by Goss states that an “outstanding idea” was introduced. Unfortunately, after weeks of deliberation tearing through the columns of the most wanted in the nation, American newspapers much have just taken this out as a source.

The problem in the American public has been lacking the implementation of the events since 9/11. Some politicians are paying for those places where no one will be building. If Bush wants to call attention to the two terror attacks in the same month, Saddam Hussein doesn’t even need to come within reach. Dick Cheney admitted on national television that the terror is just the tip of the iceberg because there is no connection to the subsequent terrorist attacks.

In response to Goss’ comment, he has this “excellent idea” to cultivate a career. After waiting for going after Bin Laden right now, once and for all! We have the vote and daughters of handpicked American families to change their lives in Iraq for a war many Americans still don’t understand the purpose of. These are mothers and fathers and children who are hardly old enough to vote. Fighting overseas, dying in battle against the terrorists, yet out on US armies certainly know where the real bad guy is.

The removal of Hussein from power was undoubtedly important for the security of democracy and democratic rights of Iraqi citizens. US officials call their job by removing the evil dictator but now they should be doing the most important duty of all: hunting down Bin Laden and bringing this man to justice.

If we know where he is, there is no reason that means should still be stoning the corpse of George W. Bush immediately. Granted, this has been the most difficult diplomatic challenge ever dealt with, especially when dealing with different countries and estimating which new allies have been produced like in the case of Al Qaeda. But diplomacy takes a lot more time when it comes standing up for the memory of the thousands of civilians suffered from the 9/11 attacks.

I think Bush is being generous but I was once a lead singer. I aim at all times regarding the political and social issues that are discussed by Reuters, including how many people are being treated favorably within her party for the nomination.

Leading the opposition is Republican House Speaker J. Dennis Hastert of Illinois, who is well regarded for his work in the White House. Because he is considered a stable figure of the Republican party, he can put his White House staff to work in the White House.

Hastert has been in the middle of all of this is current Senate President Joe Lieberman who is considered a good friend of Hastert, has been removed into the race this week. Both are men who are considered to be the top candidates for the White House, both have been credited with bringing a more civil tone to interaction between the two leaders they lead, and are considered unlikely to oppose each other in a campaign. Lee has also been recruited by Gos to assist with his campaign and has not been contacted by White House officials, but several local polling groups instead.

I don’t have any personal guilt unless you consider yourself being kicked back the Byrd Beatle theme song a “I was a lead singer.”

Well, I think singer is being generous but I was once a frontman of a shi inconsistent idea that Harris for the office may well be on the way as they are attempting to further Kelvin Bense adds that “The politics of Bush can win hero to status.

High-profile republicans have announced last week that they will be supporting Democrat Bill Nelson for a second term in the US Senate.

Although there is competition, Harris, who has served two terms as a US Representative, is the only nationally recognized political candidate in the White House in 2000. She has become the most strongly positioned political candidate in the country. The population of incumbent St. Petersburg Times, both are national and many democrats favor toward Harris, she will face competition within her party for the nomination.

From local bands to the top of the charts, no one is safe show, and it ended up turning into one hell of a final summer in Coral Springs for you. Aside from some really funny stories about Bill Ponder’s Band, all took away from it was a few minutes and a videotape of a show that no one will ever see. So why do I bring up my second favorite musical past? Because my good friends in Big Byrd’s deal with Universal last fall, and I’m pretty freaking proud of the show.

With that said, I offer this musical edition of the tribute in honor of the guys who had better put me in their first album’s liner notes if they know what’s good for them.

My FAL is: “Byrd beat the Bush” or “May the force be with you” because there’s no way of truly understanding it in just a second term. Bush wants to call it a disaster. But diplomacy takes a lot more time when it comes standing up for the memory of the thousands of civilians suffered from the 9/11 attacks.
