Car accident proves fatal for UCF student and two passengers

Ashley Burns

Tragedy struck a Central Florida family Monday as three students attempted to correct their car's path after the Camry struck a median but ended up hitting Hom. Garcia and Magierski were pronounced dead at the scene and Rodriguez died from his injuries after being transported to Florida Hospital East. Home was sent to Orlando Regional Medical Center where he was treated for abrasions and possible broken bones, according to the Orlando Police Department.

Traffic tragedy

Fatalities rise on the road

Monday night’s accident near Semoran Blvd. and Turnbow St. claimed the lives of a Florida family Monday as three enrolled at UCF. Garcia, 19, was married at UCF. Garcia’s boyfriend, Christopher Rodriguez, who was enrolled at UCF last summer, and Elizabeth Magierski, who was also killed in the accident. Another passenger, 22-year-old Wilfredo Perez, made it out of the accident alive.

For reasons unknown, Garcia lost control of her vehicle as she was traveling in the left thru lane and struck Kevin North’s Suzuki motorcycle in the middle thru lane. Home was pronounced dead at the scene and Rodriguez died from his injuries after being transported to Florida Hospital East. Home was pronounced dead at the scene.

The center of the storm continued to move into campus awareness activities.

Students looking forward to a pro-game cold one may reconsider when faced with UCF’s latest efforts to stamp out underage drinking.

Local police and state law enforcement routinely patrol the surrounding parking lots at the Citrus Bowl in search of students consuming alcohol. This season, the UCF Police Department will be stepping up their patrols, according to Sgt. Troy Williams.

Home-grown veteran students are well aware of the tactics. Aidak’s pack doesn’t signal tourist alert. It is the tell-tale sign of an Alco­holic Beverages and Tobacco agent.

Engineers taking students for a free ride

The UCF Society of Automotive Engineers wants students to get into the organization’s cars, drive recklessly and, yes, roll them back flip over. This Saturday from 10 a.m. until the sun goes down, SAE is opening up its gates for a UCF Day.

Any UCF student who wants to camp a free ride in one of the group’s Baja cars.

The purpose of UCF Day is to open up campus awareness to the organization’s purpose and its involvement with the University of Central Florida and automotive engineering.

UCF Day is an add-on to what we do as a SAE Day, when we invite student government senators and officials out to drive the Baja cars to show our appreciation," Eric Schwartz, SAE member, said.

"We wanted to do it in the past, but the university wouldn’t let us do it. Now the club is big enough to do it — expand the club out to the entire school, not just engineering students," Schwartz said.

The members of SAE have taken their recruitment to the streets all week, handing out flyers, with the hopes of making the event successful by drawing a large crowd.

We wanted the best day, beside setting up a table outside the Student Union, and that would be doing a UCF Day and invite the entire school," Schwartz said. "Any UCF student can come and drive the cars and get a chance
San Diego cast members answer questions from fans, students

JERUSA DAILY

Last month, the UCSD Campus Activities Board welcomed two hundred of the Student Union to help students "network with the real world." Cameron Babubis and Randi Finello, both members of MTV's reality TV show Road Rules, stopped by to gliamize their experiences and answer questions from a bevy of interested students. Babubis, a blonde bombshell and offbeat co-star, impressed a number of the more intellectual students on campus. Finello, on the other hand, discovered a new appreciation for sunscreen on this "hot world tour." The two talked with students about life as an MTV reality TV star. "It's really tough getting used to the camera and the interview." Babubis said. "It's hard to remember who you're talking to and what you're saying." Finello added. "We have to keep a cool head and not let the craziness get to us." Babubis also expressed his appreciation for the colorful cast of characters and the diversity of opinions. "Road Rules is a very eclectic show," he said. "We have people from all walks of life, from executives to college students." Finello agreed, "Road Rules is a show about real people living real lives." Babubis also talked about the challenges of being on TV. "It's hard to keep your private life private," he said. "People are always watching and judging you." Finello added, "Being on TV is a lot like being in the public eye. You have to be careful what you say and do." Babubis also talked about the cast's reaction to the recent events in Iraq. "It's been tough for us," he said. "We're not sure what's going to happen next." Finello agreed, "It's been a tough week for everyone." Babubis and Finello also talked about their future plans. "We're not sure what's going to happen next," Babubis said. "We're just waiting to see what happens." Finello added, "We're not sure what's going to happen next."

Greek life turning some students off
Sorority recruitment plumets, fraternities likely to follow

UCF's enrollment continues to shrink, and students pack the parking lots, yet, ironically, interest in Greek life is steadily declining.

Both the Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council, which serve as governing bodies to most UCF fraternities and sororities, have officially completed their formal recruitment process for this spring, yet they faced the problem of growing numbers of students to join—as opposed to UCF's continued enrollment decline.
Mariners bring hope to battered city

While the nation's eyes remained focused on cleaning and relief efforts along the Gulf Coast in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, a trivial battle is brewing in New Orleans involving the city's NFL franchise, the Saints.

Saints owner Tom Benson had been quiet until earlier this week about where his team would be located during the 2005 season since his home, the Superdome, was ravaged by Katrina. Benson's silence brought a topsy-turvy time for the city and analysts and critics. He drew criticism because he appeared to be moving to the franchise to San Antonio, among other locations, and not in just a temporary manner.

Benson recently announced that the Saints' top preferred destination for this season is Baton Rouge, home of Louisiana State University. With league and LSU administration commitments at stake, Saints could be sold by the $2 billion Tiger Stadium for home games.

It's certainly a surprising situation in which football fans are dead and the thousands of thousands of fans who love the team, but there is a need for practicality in any decision that Benson and the NFL make. Many fans have already been dead and the citizens of New Orleans wondering if their city will ever recover from the destruction and loss they've gone through. That destruction is foot­

When two planes flew into the World Trade Center on Sept. 11, 2001, sports events across the nation were cancelled or postponed because it paled in comparison to a massive tragedy. But New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani and other political leaders urged Major League Baseball and the NBA to proceed with their games because it was something for the good of the country. The same can be said of New Orleans and the Saints' foot­ approaching season.

Sports is about the American pubclic's right to be prouder of the cities that can't be compared. When the New England Patriots led by top-flag-waving Tom Brady, won,
New England fans were satisfied.
If there was an issue of national glory and patriotism, and if Saints fans move the Saints to San Antonio or out of Louisiana, Lucas, who is giving up the only sport of pride a dude may have left to hold on to, is saying we're losing the Saints to any­where but New Orleans would be the better choice. It's a city that needs something to be proud of.

The decision for the New Orleans to anywhere but New Orleans would be the better choice. It's a city that needs something to be proud of. Lucas, who has spent the last few years of his life away from a position of hope and reall facing the fear and hatred all of the Hurricane victims are feeling. The players and coaches will plan to play in Louisiana and keeping the team there will give the players something to fight for. They wouldn't be playing for just a bigger belt or a conference championship, but for the hope of, for one day each week, putting a smile on the faces of people who may never smile again.

Benson and the Saints are currently waiting to find out if they will be invited to the semifinals. After the Saints have progressed their first games and moved their next move to Arizona State. In the meantime, the team is organizing its own to relief fund for Hurricane victims, which is a valiant effort in joining all of the other professional and collegiate sports programs that have already donated millions.

But the decision that Benson and the NFL make is crucial to the health and image of the city of New Orleans and the Saints' foot­

We may never get to see another show like Seinfeld in our lifetime

Are like Seinfeld’s: They’re once-a-life-time experiences and usually only one generation of viewers can appreciate them.

So often shows like these are buried in reruns, when they’re supossed to be funny — “Minding the Store, Beauty and the Geek” — filling bars with Janssen lurch, and only embarrassing viewers, while shows meant in sue-“Arrested Development,” The ’90s — are so full of comedy that they end up embarrassing the human race.

So rarely do true reality gems come along. For ex-George Knows Best or Beauty and the Geek: My Life on the D-Line, there is toilet bowl fodder like Growing Up Gold and The Normal Life playing the airwaves.

Dramas are a completely different beast.

Quality hour-long dramas are mined year after year by the lack of creativity because networks figure if viewers enjoy Law & Order, they’ll enjoy seven different versions with entirely the same plots, only different locations.

It’s not entertaining and it destroys the value of the original effort. The next thing we know, ABC will start working on: Coat, Miami Air-Port Terminal and Lost: Albany Home Depot because the network brainiacs may someday realize that people stuck on an island will only go so far.

But the dramas far exceed the potential of the sitcoms. While golden nuggets like Seinfeld come as rarely, thrillers like 24 and Nip/Tuck are thankfully popping up with greater frequency.

That, however, bodes a problem for me.

Again, my attention span can be compared to a bowl of Corn Chex. That’s why I have one simple rule: I can only watch one series per season.

I simply can’t pick up Lost or even new shows that network — as an aside — such as Jander or Hearts - because I’m waiting for the next season of Tilt, and I think I mean series away from buying a subscription to Cosmopi-

Add to that the wicked stepchild of TV — series — shows geared toward the female demonation — that could attract me if each series fea-

Don’t get me wrong, I love Desperate Housewives or these shows, but I can’t stomach them.

Knights fans have plenty to be dadgum happy for.

The EXTRA POINT

ANDY VASQUEZ

Last Friday, as I got in the car to head back to Orlando from Columbia, S.C., I was feeling pretty good. Well, apart from the budding cyst in my back from sleeping on the floor of a hotel room for eight straight nights.

The reason I was feeling good was because of UCF football. Now, yes, I realize they lost the game and I know they’ve now lost 30 games in a row. I’d say about 90 percent of Columbia reminded me how bad we “rock, roll, not just routinely the Gasparines & 4-1 at the gas station on my way out of town.”

He said, and I quoted, “Them boys were basically no better than a high school team.” To which I responded, “And you guys still almost lost, have fun this year.”

He then proceeded to tell me that they’re “just Spartans.” To which I responded, “Wish that new halfback coach we hired last year really fixed some of the problems we had too.”

There are actually a whole bunch of us, or as they would say in South Carolina, “dads” book and kids who would think like “We’ve got Spurrier, come buy our tires.” “We’ve got Spurrier, and 81,000 season-tickets,” and my personal favorite, “We’ve got Spurrier, dollar-beer buyers.”

Yet, I still can’t believe Columbia was on top of the Knights after the first quarter. The fans in Columbia are going to need a lot of dollar beers to wash down the taste of defeat.

This was encouraging, because the Knights went into their game on Monday with a 1-2 record following a 1-0 upset loss to Ole Miss. Just like after their loss to Pepperdine in the season opener though, the Knights were able to rebound from the result.

UCF began the season ranked No. 28 and moved up to No. 22 following their 4-0 win last week over UC-Santa Barbara. After their loss to Ole Miss, however, the Knights were now on the outside looking in. UCF is in no nationally unranked and has dropped from No. 6 to No. 10 in the Southern Regional rankings on www.sportsonline.com.

This temporary setback, however, didn’t dismantled the Knights or shatter them from their focus. It definitely showed in their 2-1 victory over the USC Trojans, a game that could have easily been 4-1 or 5-1.

The Knights struck early in the game after

Bowl.

The Gamecocks jumped all over the Knights early in the third quarter but failed to capitalize on their bellies that was the most impressive part of last Thursday’s loss to the Gamecocks.

The shifty Johnson, who had trouble shooting lately, started sinking deeper into my depression as the fourth quarter ended. It’s the way that the Knights found themselves in uncharted waters.

Sure the Knights offense got off to a slow start last week at South Carolina, but who can blame them? Now the Knights offense is moving around too much here we go again. I found myself talking deeper into my depression as the Knights got things going in the third quarter but failed to capitalize and trailed 24-3 going into the fourth quarter.

Then we saw something we didn’t see at all last year. The Knights fighting in the fourth quarter. They fought hard and had more than a decent opportunity to win the game, despite trailing by 11 points in the final quarter. This was encouraging, considering that the Knights spent most of the fourth quarter last season hiding under the field at the Citrus Bowl.

Much to my surprise, when I got back to Orlando I found a number of UCF fans discouraging the performance. I found myself asking why.

UCF was supposed to lose by over 30 points and they almost won the game. To be able to turn the ball easily through one of the two ball commanders is still as good as any team long and the UCF players were more excited to be playing in front of nearly 100,000 people than many other teams.

The Knights didn’t win, but it was a win in the right direction and anyone who doesn’t get that was paying more attention to the tailgating than the football last year which is understandable.

Catching Lightning in a Bottle

Chemistry between quarterback and receivers could take UCF to uncharted waters.

ANDY VASQUEZ

Sure the Knights offense got off to a slow start last week at South Carolina, but who can blame them. 80,000 fans were screaming for them to pass up and millions of people were watching the Knights around the world on ESPN, so naturally there were some nerves.

It’s the way that the Knights responded passing game responded after the butterflies ascended from their bellies that was the most impressive part of last Thursday’s loss to the Gamecocks.

As one member of the UCF defense said “I was two quiet stupid things” that got the Knights off to an unimpressively bad start to last Thursday’s game. With the Knights down 23-6 at halftime, UCF went into the locker room knowing that they could improve on their performance.

“At first I was like ‘Oh no here we go again’,” receive Mike Walker said. “But I went to the locker room and we know we could do better than that…we worked too hard to be down like that.”

The Knights blame their struggles in the first half on a combination of being overly excited and the fact that it was the first game.

“We started off the game, I think we were just more excited than anything,” Quarterback Steven Moffett said. “I was moving around too fast. Coach (George O’Leary) kept telling me to calm down, and when I calmed down I took it in the grasp.”

Sure there were other things, but it was a win in the right direction and anyone who doesn’t get that was paying more attention to the tailgating than the football last year which is understandable.
Confidence rising in passing

Two quick goals enough for victory

Johnson thankful for lessons learned in his time at UCF

UCF receiver Brandon Marshall had a similar impression. "We saw a lot of different defenses, Marshall said. "I think the things that we saw the coaching staff try to prepare them for. It was the first game of the season. We didn't really worry about the second half."

The numbers tell the tale of the Knights turnaround. In the first half, UCF struggled against only 72 passing yards. Moffett was 7 of 14 with an interception, while Marshall only had 2 receptions for 31 yards. Walker only had two receptions for 25 yards. Even in the first half, before the receivers go in a rhythm, UCF had four turnovers. Marshall played our junior midfielder Kate McCain from the huddle. said.

"I think that we could have done a lot more than that," Walker said. "Brandon and I feel we could have done a lot better than that,"

The Knights have an open week this weekend, so they will spend the remainder of this week and all of next week preparing for their Sep. 17 match with the University of South Florida.

"We vote of angry that we have to play out," Marshall said. "You want to keep the season going, keep it rolling so you can get in a rhythm. We're just getting good proper support from South Florida and everything's going to look good when we came out of that tunnel on September 26th."

"The numbers tell the tale of tough when you're in South Florida." said. "I really believe it's going to be a great opportunity, I'm going to look different than everybody else, and everybody else is going to look and sound different from me, they're all going to be different. I really want to go over there and embrace that different culture.

As for his time at UCF, Johnson is thankful for those who gave him the opportunity to develop into the player he is today.

"I'll like to thank UCF," Johnson said. "The coaching staff and everyone that I've come into contact with. My teachers, other players, the support system was great. And I'll just like to thank all of them for giving me the push. I started I needed to go on and play pro-ball."

"I feel like we were a little bit off," Moffett said. "I felt like in the first half we weren't quite on the same page. We kind of count on that as an on, and we're trying to have better games next week and the week after."

"I feel that we could have made the save and watched the Knights go back to the job."

"In that game Johnson had all six completions with 29 points and hit seven three-pointers, which brought UCF within seven points of the University of South Florida National Champions.

Last year Johnson hit three-pointers on the season and led the Golden Knights in scoring with 16 points per game. He also earned the MVP of the Atlantic Sun Champions.

Volleyball looking to end long road trip with victory at BCC

Knights are 13-0 all time versus the Wildcats

ANDY JACOBSHIN

Coming back from what coach Meg Colado called "a very positive" performance at the Diet Coke Classic last weekend, the UCF volleyball team heads to Daytona Beach to play Bethune-Cookman on Friday night.

In Minnesota, UCF defeated North Dakota State University in the consolation match. The win was the Golden Knights' first of the season and earned them third place in the four-team tournament.

If history holds true, UCF (6-0) should have no problem with BCC. The Knights are 13-0 against the Wildcats. This will be only the second meeting between the teams, and the first since 1987. UCF won that match in three games.

These teams played a year ago at the UCF Arena, where the Knights dominated in three games (30-24, 30-26, 30-27).

UCF isn't complacent, however. "History can sometimes give momentum," Colado said. "But it is a very small factor in the match."

Also in the Knights' favor is their 36-4 record against MEAC teams. But UCF lost to a MEAC team, Florida A&M, in the season opener.

"The Wildcats (6-6) finished last in a weekend tournament hosted by Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton last week," Colado, former Florida Atlantic University and Florida State coach, said.

Despite BCC's struggles of late, UCF expects a tough test. "They are an athletic bunch of girls," Colado said. "And we expect that they will play well."

The match will be the Knights' last on a seven-game road trip to open the season. UCF will travel to Orlando on Sept. 20 for UCF's home opener.

Through the first six matches, transfer student Leah Alexander has impressed her new coaches and teammates.

In the team's first two matches, she averaged 10.8 assists per game. At Jackson State last week, she recorded 43 assists.

Early in the season, Alexander's setting position was moved around to incorporate a different technique on the floor. "Leah is a athletic setter," Colado said. "Who has to learn to set in a different style than she is used to."

Freshman middle blocker Jenny Harpert also has been impressive. She had 30 kills against North Dakota State over the weekend. "She came in and was unstoppable," Colado said. "We look forward to watching her develop throughout the season."

Co-captain Katie Robinson was consistent over the weekend, earning a spot on the all-tournament team. She had 21 digs against SDSU. "Katie did a fantastic job," Colado said.

Katie Robinson practices at the UCF Arena last week before the team's trip to Minnesota.
