Relief on the way for officers

UCF Police officers have been delivering supplies to rescue workers since the hurricane hit. They have been making donations for hurricane victims all week long and the officers should leave today depending on Orlando's weather conditions.

The police efforts at UCF have only been the tip of the iceberg in support of community at and around the university. Student Government Association officials are working with the Office of Student Involvement and other organizations to put together a campus-wide event with all proceeds going directly to hurricane victims.

The plans are still being developed, but some UCF officials have said their goal is to put together a large concert in order to attract as many people as possible.

Among the campus organizations contributing to relief are officers who have been affected by Hurricane Katrina and have no home.

Sept. 11 still open wound for many students

UCF reflects on state of America four years after the 2001 World Trade Center terrorist attacks

ABRIANA ADDALLA

For years after Sept. 11, Americans were remembering, searching for explanations and re-creating the United States in the world. Some UCF students feel that the increased awareness of terrorism caused by 9/11 resulted in a safer America.

"I personally feel that we are safer and I think a lot of that has to do with people being more aware," Matthew Whitting, a Florida Air National Guard staff sergeant and UCF senior, said. "There's a need for a new process in the war on terrorism," he said. "We're spreading democracy, we are making the world safer.

Whitting has strong memories of the morning of Sept. 11. He was a full-time student shortly before Sept. 11, but was called into work for the Guard on Sept. 12, 2001. "I got a message on my answering machine," Whitting said. "My unit got activated with 40 hours of (the terrorist attack) and I was called to base.

Many are shook by the four Sept. 11, 2001 tragedies.

"I think the idea of terrorism, hearing these stories is something to give you pause," UCF junior Elliott Masters said. "We do think of the consequences and the insecurity. We're not as isolated as we once were. It's not always over there."

UCF remembers the mood of America today to the tumult that surrounds counter-terrorism during the War. This is a time when putting things out of your mind until they bit you, guarantees you'll affect one person and all of the others," Stans said. "We've never been more aware of security in general."

Stans blamed the media for some of the lingering fear Americans feel at the mention of Sept. 11. "I hate to beat up the media, but it's been sensationalized," she said. "They sit up the fear. It's not that (the attack) shouldn't be on our minds and shouldn't be forgotten, but they're filling space.

"It's just unhealthy when you keep bringing it to the forefront again and again. It's difficult to keep adapting when that apprehension is constantly there."

Dilemmas on Sept. 11 often lead to the debate on war in Iraq. "One of the most recent Silkies passed by the Student Senate are an approval for funding to make possible a trip for several prominent UCF students to this week's football game against the University of South Florida.

The plan will provide the Student body with several hundred free tickets to Saturday's game in compliment a program the Student Government Association already had in place to make the event a success for UCF.

The plan, introduced through the Student Senate, was approved after a long debate and one pamphlet.

Along with the first group of tickets offered by USF, the 280 students received a seat on one of the 13-hour flights to New Orleans.

"The Senate made an executive action to purchase another four hundred tickets to ensure a strong UCF presence at Saturday's game," Williams said.

While approval of the bill was widespread there was some debate as to whether financing a trip to the USF game for so many students was the best use of SGA funds. During the debate over the bill, several senators pointed out that this was a bill that would allow the SGA to give back to the student population, alleviating the concerns many had over the cost of the project.

Others argued that the bill fit well into the senator's criteria of offering a positive benefit to the entire student body.

For most students, the college years are a time for making decisions, building relationships, and preparing for the future. Many students are more mature and wiser after college than they were when they first face the act of choosing a major or career path. The excitement felt by many of the student seniors for the project could also be found among members of the student body that they serve. Freshmen Nicole Bamberski, who chose UCF over her long-time love of Gator football, was quick to lend her support for the bill. "It is important that the students and organizations of UCF support our developing football program," Bamberski said. "There can be no better way to promote the Activity and Service Fee than to support a project widely endorsed by the student body that provided those funds." Sophomore Christopher Lee agreed that the bill was a way to reward the students. "It's a great way for us to come out and see what we have become as a team," Teammate Kyle Smith agreed that the bill was a great, "It was important that we have the support of the student body, the student athletes, and the students."

 Ultimate Frisbee is played in both the club season in the fall and the college season in the spring. Anyone can play on the club team but only UCF students can join the college team.

"You'd probably find a higher skill level in club because it's open to anyone, but everyone in college is young and fast," player Alex Turek said.

The players are also organizing a women's team.

"We have about five hardcore female members," Igar said. "We have five that are really interested and another ten or more on our waiting list who are in kind of a numbers game."

Player Greg Tryter described the game as a mix between football, soccer and basketball.

Each team has seven players. Games are played on a 70- by 40-yard field with end zones 25 yards deep. Play begins with one player throwing the Frisbee to the opponent team (called a "pull" and similar to a kickoff in football). When a player has the Frisbee, he is not allowed to run but can give one person on the opposite team a pass. The Frisbee is self-refereed and players follow the "spirit of the game," which requires fairness and a general lack of violence.

"It's not competitive to where you don't think it was a foul and you can contest," Igar said.

UCF's Ultimate Frisbee team, see its action above and below, is trying to show how exciting the game is to help spread it on campus.

Weekends games are played at 10 a.m. and are more casual and fun. Next month, the team will compete in a tournament at Vero Beach Sept. 14 against other Florida teams. A tournament will be held at UCF Nov. 12 and 13. We're trying to see if we can get more college teams," Igar said.

"We have to build the new team member experience," said Greg Trytr, "because it's open to anyone, but every core of male players. Sunday's noon practice is one of UCF's most active. "No one wants to argue over fouls so we don't call as many," Tener said. "It's the nicest thing.""
The New America," our UCF 2005-2007 topic for a university-wide discussion, seeks to reflect on the current state of U.S. society. In particular, the UCF community will explore those forces that are reshaping the social and technological landscape of both Central Florida and the nation.

Class discussions, speakers, media events, even late-night talks in the residence halls will consider, from many different perspectives, the impact of these fast-changing times on all of our lives. The "Connecting the UCF Community" organizing team invites you to

UCF players, fans ready to start rivalry with neighbor

Football gearing up for Saturday's game

Raymond James Stadium in Tampa Saturday night for the first-ever matchup between UCF and USF on the football field.

This is a date that UCF players have been looking forward to for a long time and evidently, so have their fans. UCF ticket manager Kevin Lock announced last week that UCF's allotment of 13,000 seats had already sold out, and the Knights are asking for additional tickets to cover season ticket holders and UCF student ticket requests.

The request for more tickets shouldn't be a problem as USF shows in home with the UCF's Tampa Five Bancshares and the stadium has a seating capacity of 55,000.

Adding to the drama of the matchup is the Knights' 9-game losing streak, which is the longest in the nation. The Knights are desperate to end the streak as soon as possible and doing it against USF would make it even sweeter.

The Knights will travel to Tampa for a chance to break the losing streak, which is the next stop for their season-

Around C-USA: Marshall falls hard, Tulsa falls even harder to Oklahoma State

Marshall

On this day when Marshall hosted the coach that's led the Thundering Herd to a football program in nine years in Huntington, West Virginia, Marshall created a big hole in the program's success story.

Head coach Bob Prather called a pass play at the Royal State 22-yard line with eight seconds left and his Thundering Herd down 11-4.

The ensuing play stunned the Knights as recently named All-Fourth-year receiver Arikian deflected a cross pass from Roberta Stacey George, right, defeats Florida State's Linda Hurd in Wednesday's 1-0 loss to the Seminoles. UCF's next game is a weekend trip to New Orleans.

The UCF women's soccer team continued its early-season struggles last week as it fell to Florida State on Wednesday, UCF Mile High for four goals in the final 15 minutes in a 1-0 loss to the Knights, dropping the Knights' overall record to 2-5.

The Knights were competitive in all three games as the defense performed well, only allowing five total goals, but the offense was unable to get on the board in any of the games.

The Knights' latest test was certainly the most frustrating of the three as they fell to Loyola for a second time on Wednesday afternoon.

UCF out of firing with 11 shots in the first half compared to just three for Loyola, but the Knights couldn't get the ball into the net.

The game started well for the Knights on defense throughout their game on Friday evening. Through regulation the Knights didn't give up a goal, but they couldn't hold the lead before the herd.

The Knights offense was led by Jessica Adham and Roberta Stacey George, who each had three shots.

As they did on Saturday afternoon, the Knights looked good on defense throughout their game on Friday. Through regulation the Knights didn't give up a goal, but they couldn't hold the lead before the herd.

Five days left until UCF butchers a few moo cows

I have a confession to make and I don’t think it’s going to make many people happy.

I own a UF shirt.

Once you’ve recovered from the horrifying shock please resume reading.

My fraternity held its annual alumni golf-tournament Saturday and afterward some of the old frats thought it would be funny to give me a special prize in recognition of the hard work I do.

They gave me a freaking UF shirt. And it’s not just any UF shirt, it’s quite possibly the ugliest shirt of any UF shirt I’ve worn.

I have another confession: I wore the shirt as I wrote this column in the first place.

I’ll rather grab my eyed to Tony Stewart’s No. 20 than ever clothe myself with the attire of a university that was created by the devil himself.

I know these things in life I’d look stupid with a mustache, losing a lot of weight means you have to buy new clothes and UF is the nation’s top university for people seeking degrees in evil.

The first-ever matchup between UCF and UF on the football field is still five days away, but the reason I’m throwing gasoline on the fire is because I’ve been issued a challenge.

The news editor of UF’s The Oracle — who was once my pleasant sports editor at the Future — sent me an e-mail and told me I was supposed to make a friendly wager at the debut college football Saturday.

There were no details to the bet, just a simple reply to my brother or not I was interested. I’ve sent no e-mail back of yet, mainly because I’m convinced I’ll get a horrible computer virus in my e-mailing someone who uses UF e-mail will not.

So this is my answer to the editor at the Oracle-ack!

You sent Bulls but I’ll take that bet. You name the terms and the wager and I’m down.

This is the reason why I’m wearing this horridous shirt with the ugly little logo of Lucifer’s university. It’s an embarrassment. Normally, I’d wear a UF shirt every day leading up to a huge game and the Knights will lose. I’ve done this a lot: obviously.

This time around I figured I have nothing to lose by wearing the UF shirt. I’m wearing this ugly fashion every day this week, on campus and off, and in my way of helping UCF win.

The only thing I’m nervous about is getting off campus with all my friends in fact, Hell, I want to kick my own butt for wearing this shirt as it is.

But that’s my reasoning and that’s why I’m accepting this bet. It’s going to mess up my game but that’s my confidence that the losing streak won’t go on till I straight. Plus I’m a man and we make bets and live with stupid consequences if we lose to know that.

I’ll share a UF shirt log into my hair — although there isn’t much up there — or I’ll wear this god-awful shirt for an entire month. I’ll take just about any wager for this bet.

I’ll let those UF cow mooners play a photo of me on their front-page wearing UF gear from head to toe.

Why would I do this to myself? Because I’m not worried. I believe in the talent of my team and I believe players like Steven Moffett and Cedric Gagne-Marcoux when they tell me that there is no way they want more than the game they’re playing this Saturday.

If they’re hungry, I am confident that they’ll succeed.

Besides, what do I have to lose supposed to a UF shirt and the big, bad Bulls running back had quite the game against Florida A&M Saturday and three touchdowns is very scary.

Too bad I could probably throw more than a flag football team on the field against FAU and they’d do the same thing. Playing FAU — after the program was hit with eleven billion violations — is like playing football against a team of retiree school board members. It’s no fun.

I’d admit right here that I’m confident that I really don’t have a prayer of life, I probably shouldn’t be writing this column.

But I have no choice because UF has something we don’t want in the past year.

Kids that don’t win shouldn’t produce newspaper writers who talk smack. We ought to win our past 15 games, but I’ll talk
