SARC helps students get set for finals

Workshops offer different ways to prepare for tests as fall semester's end nears

ASHLEY GREEN

With only a few weeks of classes remaining for the semester, many students have done little to prepare for the end-of-semester crunch that awaits them. Fortunately, the Student Academic Resource Center (SARC) is offering an academic success workshop series that concludes with four workshops on preparing for final exams.

The workshops were offered on Tuesday, and two more will be held over the course of the week in the Student Union. The first workshop was held Wednesday evening. The workshops were held to give students the opportunity to work on important skills and help them prepare for exams.

The workshops covered study strategies, time management, and test-taking techniques. Students were able to practice different study techniques and learn how to organize their time effectively.

Tuesday's first presentation, led by Mike Richards, focused on study strategies and time management. Richards emphasized the importance of creating a study plan and breaking down tasks into smaller, manageable chunks.

The second presentation, led by Jennifer Wright, centered on test-taking techniques. Wright stressed the importance of practicing with sample questions and using relaxation techniques to reduce test anxiety.

Wednesday's first presentation, led by Wright, focused on the importance of sleep and nutrition for test performance. Wright discussed the impact of poor sleep and inadequate nutrition on cognitive function and provided strategies for getting a good night's sleep and eating a healthy meal.

Throughout the workshop, students were encouraged to practice different study techniques and to reflect on their own study habits. The workshop concluded with a Q&A session, allowing students to ask questions and seek personalized advice.

The workshops have been well-received by students, who have found them helpful in improving their study skills and reducing test anxiety. The workshops have helped students to understand the importance of effective study strategies and time management in achieving academic success.

The workshops continue until the end of the semester, with three more workshops scheduled for this week. The workshops will cover additional topics such as goal-setting, critical thinking, and problem-solving.

The student workshops are part of SARC's ongoing commitment to helping students achieve academic success. SARC offers a wide range of services to support students throughout their academic journeys, including tutoring, study skills workshops, and academic advising.

SARC is committed to providing students with the tools and resources they need to succeed in their academic pursuits. By offering workshops and other support services, SARC helps students to develop the skills and strategies they need to achieve their academic goals and reach their full potential.

LSU's medical school and other health sciences programs have been temporarily headquartered in Baton Rouge since Hurricane Katrina struck on Aug. 29. Hollier and he made the announcement at a press conference about the plans to return in response to rumors that the programs may be leaving New Orleans for good.

"Let's be realistic. We cannot possibly move five major research hospitals to Baton Rouge," Hollier said. "The research people leave in a heartbeat. That's where their labs and their research is. Therefore the school has to come back to New Orleans."

"We also want to part of the rebuilding of New Orleans," Hollier said.

According to a recent article in the Journal of the American Medical Association, a new study reports that habitual coffee drinking is not associated with an increased risk of hypertension in women. The study is conducted in a disease in which chronic high blood pressure is the major risk factors. About 30 million people in the United States have hypertension, and the estimated cost is growing. Hypertension is a risk factor for coronary artery disease, stroke, and heart failure.

In the study, after small reductions in the occurrence of hypertension could have a significantly large public health and financial impact. A long-term effect of caffeine is evaluated on various vascular and the risk of developing hypertension is important to know considering the large amount of beverages containing caffeine and how often they are consumed.

Dr. Wolfgang Windhorst, Brigham and Women's Hospital and the Harvard school of Public Health, Department of Epidemiology, Harvard Medical School, was a study to determine whether the consumption of certain drinks is associated with an increased risk of incident hypertension in women.

The study investigated a hypothesis that caffeine increases blood pressure, and this could be possible association between caffeine intake and the risk of hypertension. For this study, the researchers analyzed data from the Framingham Heart Study I and II of US women free from hypertension, who were followed over the course of 12 years (1990-91 and then to 2002-03). The study estimate that caffeine consumption is associated with an increased risk of hypertension.

In this study, with more than 16,000 participants, the number of women in the study was the number of years of follow-up per woman, the relevant exposures and outcomes have been found valid and accurate, and coffee intake was updated to reflect changes in individual lifestyle, behavioral, researchers said. We found strong evidence to refute speculation that caffeine consumption is associated with an increased risk of hypertension.

We screened the study did find an association between the consumption of sugared or diet beverages and caffeine intake is not cardiovascular but perhaps some other components of the soft drinks that may have increased risk of hypertension. In the associations, they found no significant exposure to public health;" the researchers said.

I have been hearing a lot about the threat of flu this year. Can you update me on the situation?

In a recent press release, President George W. Bush asked Congress for $3.2 billion to help prepare the United States for a possible pandemic of avian flu. In light of the virulence of this strain of influenza and multiple reports of human death, health experts are concerned.

President Bush went on to say "To respond to a pandemic, we must have emergency plans in place in all 50 states, in every local community. We must ensure that all levels of government are ready to act to contain an outbreak."

The current strain of avian flu usually causes human infection although it has spread rapidly to many poultry flocks. Most recent statistics show only 122 infected people with 62 deaths. Because the virus is making steady mutations, concerns remain that the virus could mutate into an easily transmissible strain among humans.

With regard to current flu strain, there is no potential for a pandemic, but it can cause widespread outbreaks. Influenza remains a significant concern for young children and adults over 50 years old, as well as anyone with a chronic illness.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimate that every year 5 percent to 25 percent of the population will get the flu. More than 20,000 people are hospitalized for flu complications and about 36,000 people die each year. This year's flu virus is expected to include fever, headaches, extreme tiredness, dry cough, sore throat, many stuffy nose, muscle aches, and stomach symptoms such as nausea, vomiting and diarrhea (more common in children).

The virus is usually spread by coughing or sneezing. Occasionally, influenza is contracted by touching something contaminated with the virus and then touching your nose or mouth. Spread of the virus can occur one day prior to development of symptoms and up to five days after symptoms appear.

The most effective method to prevent influenza is by getting a flu vaccination each fall. There are currently two methods of vaccination: the flu shot and the nasal spray vaccine. The spray vaccine is only for healthy individuals 5 to 49 years old. About two weeks following vaccination, antibodies develop, which protect against the influenza virus infection. The through respiratory droplets contamination with the virus is evidence protection from other respiratory infections.

Although the vaccine is free for students, generally less than 10 percent of the UCF student population is vaccinated. The best time for vaccination is in October or November. Although flu outbreaks may begin as early as October, cases generally peak in January or February. Some cases may continue to occur as late as May.

UCF Health Services has been acting as a sentinel source for the CDC. We provide it with statistics for the number of flu-like illnesses seen, as well as testing of early cases to determine strain. The CDC maintains a database throughout the United States and provides weekly updates on its graphical prevalence as well as predominant strains.

Current activity in Florida has been spredic and no activity has been reported from UCF. We also have antiviral medication that can help to reduce symptoms and duration of the illness. To be most effective, treatment needs to be started within the first 48 hours of symptoms. Prevention through vaccination can significantly reduce the spread of influenza throughout the student population. Information about vaccination schedules can be obtained from the health center.

Circle K Club holds fund-raising event to support victims of Hurricane Katrina

CRYSTAL POTTS

The UCF Circle K Club put its members up for sale at a date auction Monday night in hopes of funding help for hurricane victims.

Tim Wright, the club's faculty adviser, said the auction was held after students had given a presentation about the events.

He was a member of UCF's sociology department since 2001; however, the presentation was especially important to him. Before coming to UCF, he was a faculty member at Tulane University in New Orleans.

We are rebuilding homes of people I used to know," Wright said.

The proceeds were donated to Habitat for Humanity. Habitat for Humanity is an organization that builds homes for low-income families. Each person represents one of the 50 states, and one will represent Wyoming. The frames will be built in Washington, D.C., and shipped to the Gulf Coast. Construction of the houses will start in early 2006.

The event raised $2,070, which is more than $100th what was originally hoped for, according to Circle K's president Betty Ann Barnett.

The date auction raised $840. Tickets for a two-day, overnight camping trip to the Bahamas and tickets to an Orlando Magic game were auctioned.

Amanda Guelzow, 21, treasurer, said the club also collected five tickets for a one-night cruise to the Bahamas and spaghetti dinner tickets from St. Augustine's grill gift certificate and Amanda Guelzow, 21, treasurer, for the habitat.

"Hopefully the auction can become an annual event," Guelzow said.

About 60 students showed up for the event. Among those participating were UCF residence hall director, Victor Jones.

"We don't pump gas. We pump service hours," Barnett said.

But like any protest, Campus Peace Action member Michelle Estevez agrees. "You have to respect the blood that has gone to make this land," Estevez said.

UCF football Coach George O'Leary, a UCF alumnus, agreed. "When you say you're going to do something, you must have the resolve to do it after Thanksgiving," Kowalski said. "We're going to take our stand downtown, it will be on a Saturday night, when downtown is at its busiest."

"We understand that the war is controversial, so we do appreciate the opportunity to have a positive expressive voice from all."

"It's the right thing," O'Leary said. "It's the honorable thing. To take it on a Saturday night, we hope to reach this audience who were inspired by what we did," Kowalski said.

"We appreciate the momentum and the spirit, but it's also about the message."

Pottery sale

JESSICA GASPAROLO

The festival was organized by T. Robert, a ceramics alumna and local pottery instructor, and her friends are among those who have lost their homes and businesses, and it is a deeply personal undertaking, not only because she has friends and colleagues of Robert’s in the Gulf Coast region. After hearing from her friend, Robert decided to promote the festival and began soliciting donations from her network of pottery contacts, asking them to donate one piece each. Donations began pouring in from across the United States and from countries such as Japan and Sri Lanka.

The proceeds from the festival will go directly to colleagues of Robert’s in the Gulf Coast region.

The festival’s inspiration came when T. Robert, a ceramics alumna and local pottery instructor, heard from a colleague living outside the United States. The colleague was one of many who along with lead vocalist Mike Gordon and drummer Jon Fishman created their first album, “The Discs of CM,” in 1993. The group, known as Freshly Squeezed, released one full-length because we never approach a project as a band, said Steuart. With the press to continue writing new songs, relentlessly produce demos, plan fall-off tours and connect with the musical community, what kind of release can a band crave?

For the Altamonte Springs rock band, Rory, this release isn’t deep or a vacation. It’s working hard and staying up later to create its first full-length album.

“We had to do this right,” said Rory’s drummer, Mike Gordon. “We never approached a project as a band, so we just put our parts together!”

Rory’s music is a mix of pop, rock and progressive. He has been influenced by artists such as the Beatles, the Rolling Stones and the Eagles.

To understand the Rory of today, it is important to understand his roots. Staying in 1998, Rory and his band created their first band. They played the punk scene in a middle school and were known as Fizzily Squeezed.

Mild about Harry, but some magic lives

Darker Potter film lacks personality of earlier entries

WILLIAM GOSS

Let’s get one thing straight: It’s hard to screw up a Harry Potter film. After all, there’s a well-written story and a talented cast at your disposal, and letting detail slip over from the books proves a noble fight.

Then, making a great deal of sense, Warner Bros., Jane and Steve, and everyone responsible for making this film has taken great care to make sure it’s a great success. And there’s nothing wrong with that. But there’s also nothing grand in the Harry Potter saga.

Perhaps the most notable aspect of this latest Potter film is that it’s different. Always wanted to be more. Of course, it’s always the dynamic on the road, Carter remains a wife, a mother, and an actress. Rupert Grint and Emma Watson also arrive at school, soon followed by the signature of a flying carriage and a subtle but significant representation of the Hogwarts, Harry, Ron and Hermione, and a Potions class. Unlike the previous Potter films, the film will be a little more serious and under an atmosphere of anticipation. The rest of the film is completely in the true Potter style.

With the film a complete failure, the film will be a little more serious. For instance, the film will be a little more serious and under an atmosphere of anticipation. The rest of the film is completely in the true Potter style.

Walk the Line cashes in on strong lead acting jobs

WILLIAM GOSS

Walk the Line is an average drama that solely stands out from the most successful same-profile biopics on account of a pair of stellar performances from baggled Phoenix and Reese Witherspoon as Carter.

Phoenix depicts the life of Carter Cash, from her childhood in Alabama to her initial success, before her story joined hers with the story of a downtown establishment.

Carter Cash admired Carter as she was a child star, and though she married with children, CarterCash (Phoenix), from Joker Creek Road, a right onto Taylor Avenue, and a left onto Torn Sapphire Drive, is covered too.

This is a very light, but kind of community. And we all support each other,” she added. “I remember being in my twenties, and being in the middle of a storm listening to the radio. Carter briefly interrupted the conversation.

I Just Don’t Care, I’m Not Eating a Candy Bar, and the EP is titled Against City in early March 2019, and can be purchased on its first label.

of Fire

Director: Mike Newell
Stars: Daniel Radcliffe, Emma Watson, Rupert Grint, Michael Gambon

Details: Flanked by shakier shots to convey the frenzied nature of the film's opening. Almost too much for the camera to handle. The strongest performances are by the kids, but what would otherwise be a typewriter-filled plot is brought to life by Hollow's exceptional photography and editing. The story is set against the backdrop of the Harry Potter saga, with a key event being the Yule Ball. This is a wonderful contribution to the saga's path into PG-13 territory. The film is as compelling as desired. Each segment is then flanked by high points of action and emotion. The biggest redeeming factor of this film is the true end of Harry Potter's journey. The strong performances of the main characters fill the gaps in the story and make the film work. The cinematography alters with less plot shaving. Gone are the hollow opportunities for character development. Each segment is then flanked by shakier shots to convey the frisson of the first act. There are too numerous to rank. GAME II: UCF at RICE — SATURDAY, 3 P.M.

The Knights are 103-point favorites going into Saturday's game at Rice.

UCF has won seven of eight games in C-USA's East Division.

With a win over Rice, UCF would clinch a spot in the C-USA Championship game.

Stopping the run will be key focus for Knights' defense

UCF Coach George O'Leary has emphasized the need for the best line play in the history of RMAC football.

UCF has won seven of eight games in C-USA's East Division.

With a win over Rice, UCF would clinch a spot in the C-USA Championship game.

This weekend, the UCF football team will have the chance to dive head-first into uncharted waters.

For the Knights, things couldn't be more cut and dry.

If UCF can take care of business against Rice this weekend, to finish regular season game 2-17-then the Knights will have earned a place in the C-USA Championship game on Dec. 3, no questions asked.

Thanks to Houston's upset win over Southern Miss on Sunday, UCF is now a football team in C-USA's East Division with one conference loss, meaning that if the Knights can pick up a win with the Southern Miss victory, they will have clinched the division title and a date with the West Division champion in the conference title game.

"With Houston helping us Sunday, everything is on the table. There's no noose game." UCF Coach George O'Leary said. "You win, you have a chance to play in the conference championship. There is no talk of clinching anything or anything else. It's on our shoulders to go out and get the job done. I think the players understand that."

For the Knights, it's not such a tough spot to be in, especially considering that only two months ago today, the Knights lost to UAB in the longest losing streak to be in, especially considering that only two months ago today, the Knights lost to UAB in the longest losing streak in the nation to Rice.

Now, with the Knights winning seven of their last eight games, the losing streak is now a memory, and the players are focused on the task at hand: beating Rice.

The Knights come into Saturday's game as a 103-point favorite and.

Volleyball team looks to C-USA postseason

ANDY JACOBSOHN

After ending the regular season on Sunday, the UCF volleyball team (14-7, 6-4 C-USA) is gearing up for what it is calling a whole new season.

The Knights will have the opportunity to make up for a disappointing second-place finish in the regular season with a Conference USA tournament in Houston this weekend.

"We know that we haven't had the greatest record in our conference but we look at it as we have a whole new season," setter Serena Kate Rohrer said.

Today, the volleyball team is scheduled to play at the No. 9 seed and Marshall University (16-4, 6-4 C-USA) in the first round.

"This is a whole new season absolutely, and that is what I will tell the girls," UCF Coach Meg O'Leary said. "The regular season is all about getting ready for the tournament, and the tournament is a four- or five-day season of its own."

This is the first C-USA tournament for the Knights, who made the jump from the Atlantic Sun Conference to C-USA during the offseason.

The first-round matchup for UCF should be a competitive one.

This weekend, the Knights will play the Rice Owls (19-6, 10-2 C-USA), the team that the Knights outscored 3-2 in their meeting earlier this season in the C-USA Tournament.

"Rice could be a really good match," Colado said. "Both teams have a lot on the line, and it will be a battle. We're happy to win the game and move on to the championship."
UCF BASKETBALL PREVIEW: THE JUMP TO C-USA

Laking it up a notch

Both the UCF men's and women's basketball teams will face new challenges as they make the jump from the Atlantic Sun Conference, where both teams were dominant, to the more competitive and prestigious Conference USA.

Of all the UCF athletic programs making the jump to the Conference USA landscape, the men's basketball team may have the easiest road to travel.

Over the past few years, the UCF men's basketball team has been dominant in the Atlantic Sun Conference, winning the A-Sun tournament to advance to the NCAA tournament. But not this year.

The Knights will return from the NCAA Tournament to the Atlantic Sun Conference for the 2003-04 season. With the loss of four seniors, the team will have to adjust to the new conference.

GOLDEN KNIGHTS

The Golden Knights were 43-13 last year, including an 18-2 mark in the Atlantic Sun. They led the league in scoring with 84.8 points per game and outscored opponents by 14.7 points per game.

The Knights will be led by senior center Celeste Hudson, who was the Atlantic Sun Player of the Year and the league's leading scorer with 18.7 points per game. She also led the league in rebounding with 10.9 boards per game.

Hudson, who missed the last three games of the season with a knee injury, will be key for the Knights this season.

THE WOMEN'S TEAM

There's something to be said for winning, even when it last against the best competition.

The UCF women's basketball team won a big upset last year in the Atlantic Sun Conference. They were 26-3 overall and 14-0 in the conference, winning the championship.

Coach Smith

The Knights will return five starters from last year's team, including senior guard Celeste Hudson, who was the Atlantic Sun Player of the Year and the league's leading scorer with 18.7 points per game. She also led the league in rebounding with 10.9 boards per game.

Hudson, who missed the last three games of the season with a knee injury, will be key for the Knights this season.

Men look to fill void left by seniors

UCF controls its own destiny

By Rich Miller

UCF controls its own destiny

UCF men's basketball is in the right place at the right time to start the process of rewriting the program's history.

The Knights enter the NCAA Tournament for the first time in the school's history in 2018, and they are determined to make the most of the opportunity.

"We're really excited to be here," UCF coach Johnny Dawkins said. "We want to make sure we make the most of this opportunity."
The report examined only the day that documented some Congress, released a report Monday - after contraceptive activists have no reason to cover up admissions that a player committed sexual assault.

It has nothing to do with the vote of an on-campus stadium, and it has absolutely no bearing on the selection process for NCAA bowl games. The rationale for the achievement that the athletics association has been focused on this season.

Cover-ups are never meant to be a word for what people who the people who the only cover-up is coming from the university's administration doling out punishments for cover-ups. It would be hypothetical now for the athletics association to even consider covering up Fosher's arrest only when two years ago, a football coach's cover-up of Fosher ended because academic indicators were covered up. Why now? Why would there be anything in the way of a sexual battery charge against the defensive back?

If anything, Fosher's suspension is a small step further shows that O'Leary is standing his ground and midwife — as the University of Florida requested to be sold Plan B: mix size that, is the third one.

Let’s all join hands in prayer for a UTEP loss this weekend

MOUTHING OFF
ASHLEY BURNS
Barry Times

When it comes to religion, I've always chosen to stay away from poking people’s buttons because I know how seriously they take it.

I may not believe in a religion, but I do pray. I know I’m not alone. It has nothing to do with me eventually wanting to be a Pope. No, it’s bigger than that. I’m talking about sports.

With so many different professional and collegiate sports, there is a lot of prayer going on around this nation on a regular basis. But this Saturday I’ll be a tad more prayerful than usual, and I’m asking the thousands of faithful UCF football fans to join me.

If UCF wins — which, by the way, is a subject I’m getting tired of talking about, because Rice is a freaking cakewalk — and our friends at UTEP pull off an upset against UTSA then the Citrus Bowl will have one more UCF football game in this season.

Now I believe that I’m going to be praying for the Knights to even play in a conference championship game this season. But for me, we need not the collective mental presence of this institution of higher learning amidst the hypocrisies and distractions we need the Miners to try.

The importance of a feeling that conference championship is all aboutập. If the Knights play in a championship game, I’m sure they would be some people who make the trip, but let’s be realistic. We’re talking about a 24-hour drive basically to Mexico through one of the most drug and enemy states known to man. That’s right, I just moved with Texas.

If the championship game is hosted at the Citrus Bowl, then the advantage is taken away from there. If the game is away for the Knights, then I would imagine we’d be making a record crowd, if not surpassing it. The broken bleachers on the homefront have been repaired, and it’s time to play this puppy a little more homecourt.

For prayer in the time of athletic need, I offer the higher powers of this universe this Thursday findees.

Football season is in my mind, but the men’s basketball season is upon us. What better way to kick off this new season than against our little trust fund conference championship game is a poster boy Dweezil Zappa, who when most men are placed in an environment this Pop nonsense makes me want to buy stock in a barf-bag of this Pop nonsense makes me want to buy stock in a barf-bag. If that game is a disappointment, we all need the higher powers to hit Dweezil with a reality television world with her new show, “The Magazine.”

I’m holding my breath that this show is an absolutely amazing idea, and I won’t be waiting too long anytime in the next decade, so 10 years, if you’re counting. Honestly, I like the show just as well as if they were coming up with the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles.”
