HOLIDAYS BRING MORE THAN JUST GIFTS TO SOME STUDENT HOUSING

According to UCF students and police, staying safe this holiday season is just as matter of common sense. As the holiday season approaches, UCF students and residents are reminded to keep safety in mind. Whether traveling home for the holidays or deciding to stay in town, students must remember to take extra precautions.

Since most UCF students will be leaving home to visit friends and family out of town and may be gone for weeks at a time, theft may be a major problem.

In 2004, there were 202 occurrences of larceny and theft reported to the UCF Police Department on the main campus, many of which occurred during the holidays.

Sgt. Troy Williamson of the UCF Police Department says that theft can be avoided by following a few simple precautions.

I think it's easy more of the way, but they have courts that have not been adjusted the right way," said Codrina Coma, an English composition and literature instructor at UCF.

Coma, who uses a wheelchair because of her muscular dystrophy, said she has had problems with the shuttle system at UCF.

"They would pick up all the walking students, but not me," Coma said. "It was really frustrating, but it's getting better now.

According to the National Center for Education Statistics, of the 6.1 million undergraduate students enrolled in postsecondary institutions in 2000, 1.5 million reported some kind of physical or learning disability. This growing number of students may need accommodations based on the specifics of their disabilities.

Virus can cause warts, cervical cancer

The lowdown on HPV

Virus is incredibly common in the United States, especially among women

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, HPV infection is the most common sexually transmitted disease in the United States, affecting an estimated 14 million Americans each year. More than 80 different types of HPV exist, and while most are harmless, certain types can cause infection in the skin, mouth, and genital areas. It's estimated that 70% of people who become sexually active will have at least one episode of genital HPV, but the vast majority of infections clear up on their own.

"I saw a lot of things I couldn't see, a lot of things I didn't know," Bratcher said. "But I think, in a lot of ways, it's easier to understand how infections can be because the warts can be in places that are not easily visible."

"It's a lot of people who are infected, but don't know they're infected," Bratcher said. "And that makes it difficult to gauge how infectious they are, because they can't see the virus."

The low-risk strains often cause genital warts, but after six months, the virus goes into remission and, reurrences of warts are unlikely.

"With the low-risk strains, genital warts are, it's most communicable and most noticeable when there are visible warts," Bratcher said. "But you can still get it when there are no visible warts.

"I think that it is still difficult to gauge how infectious a person is because the virus is not easily visible."

In addition to being transmitted through sexual contact, HPV can be transmitted through unprotected sex, and neonates can be infected during birth. Despite this, it is not easily visible. Bratcher said that it is still difficult to gauge how infectious a person is because the virus is not easily visible.

It's rumored that about 300 people a month come into his office disclose that they are infected with HPV. This number includes only those who have seen a health care provider. Mireles said. "It's a different species of wart," Bratcher said. "It's a different species of wart, and it's not really visible."

BLOGGERS AMONG US

No strangers to the world of blogging, UCF students actively participate in this growing trend. In 2001, when blogger Patrick Fitzpatrick's blog was started, there were relatively few blogs on the Internet. Today, there are millions of blogs hosted both publicly and privately.

Students with disabilities face many challenges, including those related to their learning, physical, and mental health. Some may need accommodations to help them succeed in their education. Accommodations can include assistive technology, note-taking support, or modified assignments. At UCF, students with disabilities are provided with a range of services to support their academic success.

"It's a real accomplishment for us," O'Leary said. "To get to this point is something that we've been working toward for a long time."

SARC provides 24 hours of studying and some free snacks on Thursday and Friday.

Other student clubs and organizations are offering study sessions and help for their members as well. Elizabeth Daumen’s sorority’s academic excellence committee has planned an event for its members.

"My family will be having a small family event and coffee and snacks will be provided for our sisters," she said. Some students may opt to go to the UCF Library where there will be free coffee and complimentary snacks will be given out on Monday and Thursday after 7:30 pm. Daumen said she usually studies on her own but will probably head to the Library this week for some study-time.

"I like to start preparing for my exams at the latest, two days prior," she said. Daumen doesn’t think she’ll be participating in any study groups but will just review her notes and text and enjoy the free items that will be offered at the Library.

UCF FALLS TO TULSA, BUT HEADED TO BOWL

Turnovers the difference in UCF's 44-27 loss to Tulsa in inaugural C-USA title game

For most of Saturday afternoon, a record UCF home crowd of 20,157 waited for the Golden Knights to do what they have been doing all year long: force a key turnover to send the team back into the driver's seat.

But Saturday, that break never came for the UCF football team. The Knights lost 44-27 to Tulsa in the inaugural Conference USA championship game at the Florida Citrus Bowl.

In a matchup between the teams with the best turnoves differentials in CUSA, UCF failed to force a turnover for only the second time this season, but Tulsa forced four.

Tulsa took the ball away from UCF three times in the second half, leading to a 27-14 Tulsa lead. Moffett had an uncharacteristic four turnovers as the Knights lost to Tulsa 44-27.

“Tulsa had a great focus on defense, especially on turnovers,” Coach Kirk Speraw said.

In the first half, UCF forced five turnovers, including four interceptions, to help build a 14-7 lead.

On the opening drive, but UCFS quarterback Steven Moffett, who had taken care of the ball consistently all season, was responsible Saturday for all of UCF's turnovers, which led to 27 of Tulsa's 44 points.

“I am a loss of words,” Moffett said.

Although the UCF football team's inaugural season in Conference USA ended in disappointment in the championship game at the Florida Citrus Bowl on Saturday, there was some good news for Golden Knights this past weekend.

UCF is headed to its first-ever bowl game.

UCF President John Hitt, Athletic Director Steve Orsini and Coach George O'Leary confirmed Sunday afternoon that the Knights have accepted an invitation to play in the Sheraton Hawaii Bowl this month.

On Dec. 31, the Knights will cap a week in paradise when they face the Western Athletic Conference's Nevada 8-3 at Aloha Stadium in Honolulu.

"It's a great reward for the players, coaches and fans for what has been a really magical season," Hitt said.

UCF's 44-27 loss to Tulsa on Saturday cost the Knights the chance to play in the Liberty Bowl in Memphis, Tenn.

He left there Saturday afternoon with his first loss of the season, as his feelings about his team's lack of preparation for Florida rang true in their 80-47 defeat at the hands of the Gators.

Hurricane hits Orlando, yet again, this time in the form of Tulsa football team

UCF didn’t play to potential in loss to Tulsa

The biggest news covered in UCF football history was not how they were sent to the Sun Bowl in December. It was last May, when UCF was eliminated in a field hockey match. "What if?"

UCF coach George O’Leary talked about the difference between fines and support, the ones who stay with teams the longest. He didn’t mention the team games or the season and the difficult process of building a football program.

But in the aftermath of the Citrus Bowl on Saturday, UCF fans were left with too much running backs yards and one touchdown on eight plays. The team didn’t turn the ball over enough to find a way to stop Tulsa’s offense in the first half. Without a turnover advantage, Memphis fans were not turned off by the turnover-avoiding Tigers.

Certainly, not all of the players from Memphis’ C-USA Championship triumph were able to make an impact in the bowl game. Coach George O’Leary said UCF was stuck in a "We’re not going to get a point tonight." rut.

UCF didn’t turn the ball over until the second half, when Memphis led 21-14. O’Leary was surprised by UCF’s performance in the second half of the bowl game. He said he expected UCF to come back and get the ball back in the second half of the game. "I was surprised by our performance in the second half," O’Leary said.

The UCF offense was unable to match Tulsa’s offensive output in the first half. In the second half, UCF’s offense improved, but not enough to turn the tide of the game.

UCF’s offensive line struggled to contain Tulsa’s rushing attack, allowing the Golden Hurricane to gain 201 yards on the ground. The Golden Hurricane running back scored twice in the second half, leading UCF to a 34-7 defeat.

The Tulsa defense was dominant, holding UCF to just 229 yards of total offense. UCF quarterback Blake Barnett struggled to find his receivers, completing just 15 of 38 passes for 174 yards. Barnett was intercepted twice, once in each half of the game.

UCF’s special teams also struggled, as the UCF return team did not have a punt return for a touchdown in the game.

Tulsa’s defense, on the other hand, was able to generate turnovers, as UCF had to punt on 10 of its 11 possessions. The Tulsa defense also forced a fumble and recovered it for a touchdown.

UCF fans were left disappointed by the loss, as they had high hopes for the team’s bowl game performance. The loss marked the end of the season for UCF, as they finished with a record of 8-5.

UCF football fans were left wondering what could have been if the team had played to its potential. The loss marked the end of the season for UCF, as they finished with a record of 8-5.

UCF is not expected to return to the Sun Bowl, as they are not eligible for the conference championship game due to their bowl game loss. UCF fans will have to wait until next season to see if the team can bounce back from this loss.
Crips founder should stay put

San Diego (UCSD) - Following in line to put the additional press on the already saturated San Diego press was the recent resignation of John F. Williams, founder and former leader of the Crips gang. Williams has been a key figure in gang-related activities in the San Diego area, and his resignation has raised questions about the future of the gang and its influence.

Williams' resignation comes after a series of events that have cast doubt on his leadership. The most recent event was the discovery of drug-related activities by the federal government, which led to the arrest of several high-ranking Crips members. Williams has been linked to these activities in the past, and his resignation is seen as a step towards disbanding the gang.

Williams was the leader of the Crips gang in San Diego for many years, and his influence extended beyond the gang to include political and community leaders. His resignation is expected to have a significant impact on the gang's operations and its relationship with the community.

There is no clear successor to Williams, and it is unclear how the gang will operate in his absence. The Crips have a history of violent and destructive behavior, and their presence in the community is a cause for concern. The local police and the FBI are closely monitoring the situation to ensure that the gang does not become a threat to public safety.

The gang's activities have been linked to drug trafficking, gang violence, and other crimes. The local community has long been concerned about the influence of the Crips, and Williams' resignation is seen as a positive step towards reducing the gang's power.

I may be a snob, but I'd like to make some changes next time

It should take me roughly one week to get over Bimini’s Conference USA Championship loss, but I can already look back and back at what a remarkable season the Knights had.

It’s a grateful feeling, sure, but the best advice I can offer to anyone is this: Take the pain and the agony of losing, and simply utilize that win or be nonexistent season we would have never known this brand new type of pain.

The 2011 season felt like the entire roster of the University of Central Florida was ready to take some kickoff and blow up the on-field. Saturday’s loss felt nearly the same until you reflect that UCF was never even supposed to be in that game. Therefore, the Knights were upset to lose, as I’m sure they were after denial, but I’m certain they all gave back their best.

Since this was the first time I’ve ever experienced a conference championship game, I’ve come up with a list of things that irritated me during the game that I would change next time UCF hosts the title game.

First of all, something has to be done about the noon time for the Citrus Bowl. Watching the game leaves very little time for sleep. Zero hours and ten minutes to be precise.

Next, the “Black Out” campaign. Trust me when I say that you should not have to walk up to 40 rows in front of three rows of friends wanted to stand out and show their school spirit and a sense of tradition. I know I didn’t complain about this, but why are people always so passionate about things? It’s kind of like hosting a marathon in Ethiopia and then we can go back to the side to side? I’m all about being an insomniac with way too much emotional investment into the game leaves very little time for sleep. Zero hours and ten minutes to be precise.

Since the “Black Out” campaign was a cool idea, but anything that involves wearing black should be attached to an advertisement. Regarding weather, San was to the north but the hurricane knew that the gods of weather have to make us more than anyone else in the world. I felt like I was watching the game inside a microwave oven. I now have a equations number to show for it.

Don’t get me wrong, I’m all for ideas that promote school spirit but maybe next time we can fly it to the Weather Channel. I’m not criticizing anyone, just simply expressing that maybe next time we’ll have Tank, Top and Spirals Day at the Citrus Bowl and another ice age will roll through.

Next up I thought the official walking a liberty bell behind the Knights’ bench when the game was out of reach the first two minutes left and was an inappropriate thing. That’s kind of like having a mission in Baghdad and awarding the winner a pot roast and then having the runner-up roll it over to line. Maybe I just have to get over because I had to cancel my New Year’s Eve plans and my hotel reservations. Maybe I’m bitter because UCF just Marble voting maybe isn’t necessary.

Something I absolutely love in sports is when a coach calls a timeout with less than a minute left and his team has the game sealed. Tulsa was guilty of this. Tulsa’s coach called timeout with so little time left and his team has the game sealed. Hey I’m impressed with Tulsa win, and the Golden Hurricane put together quite the season the last season but save the celebrating for the after the game. It’s called class. You didn’t see me fractions in front of Buffalo and Temple fans last season when UCF finished shiny and stole the ESPN Button III, did you? OK, bad example.

I have to think that aside from some people within UCF athletics, I’m usually at the fore-front when it comes to building spirit and some of the things I never have to criticize any group of games when it comes to a new cheer or chant. However, for the past few years, one thing has kind of creeped under my skin.

When the band plays the fight song and everyone does the side-to-side thing with their arms I start to get a little confused. Why are we doing the side-to-side thing? We’re not moving our arms from front to back in front of us if we’re watching something! If I’m watching something, then someone, feel free to fill me in. My complaint with side-to-side is that I’ve seen other schools do it. Well, that, and it makes me feel like I’m in a Maupit By Nature video. How about we try the lacing motion, and if it doesn’t work, then we can all get back to the side to side? I’m all about compromise, people.

I know I shouldn’t complain about this, but why are people much more into it when it comes to assigned seats! Just because 16 of my friends wanted to stand behind the three rows in front of me doesn’t mean there’s a reason for people to be upset. Of course, I’m kidding. It was kind of cool to finally have to argue with people about the difference between row 1 and 2. Finally the use of the row names gets more great more than anything else as that the Knights are going to a bowl game for the first time ever, and I won’t be able to go. Not many people are going to be there. I guess I’ll have to wait for next year.

Want to know the one thing that’s really bothering me for the first time ever as a UCF fan? I think the answer is “Let’s wait for next season.”
