HPVM is hidden, a common problem unprecedented

HPVM has a hidden, a common problem unprecedented

During his last year of high school, John’s dirty little secret became apparent when he started missing classes. This year, John was a senior high school student. He was one of the few boys who took art classes. After the senior trip, John started to miss his classes.

While John continued to excel in his art classes, he was struggling with his other subjects. John noticed that he was becoming more and more disinterested in his classes. He started to miss classes and even skipped school.

During the last quarter of the year, John was falling behind in his other subjects. He was failing in his classes and his grades were suffering. John started to feel like he was not good enough.

John had a crush on a girl in his art class, and he had been visiting her after school. He had been trying to get closer to her, but she was not interested. John was feeling very frustrated and frustrated.

John’s grades continued to decline, and he was falling behind in his other subjects. He was failing in his classes and his grades were suffering.

John’s parents were becoming increasingly concerned about his grades and his behavior. They were worried that he was not doing well in school and that he was not taking his classes seriously.

John’s parents knew that he was struggling with HPVM, but they did not know how to help him. They tried to talk to him, but he was not interested in listening to them.

John’s friends also noticed that he was becoming more and more disinterested in his classes. They started to worry about him and tried to talk to him, but he was not interested in listening to them.

John’s parents and friends were becoming very concerned about his grades and his behavior. They knew that he was struggling with HPVM, but they did not know how to help him.

The lowdown on HPV

Virus is incredibly common in the United States, especially among women

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, genital HPV infection is a sexually transmitted disease that affects both males and females. It is one of the most common sexually transmitted infections (STIs) because it is very difficult to prevent. More than 13.2 million new infections occur each year.

HPV is a group of viruses that can cause warts, cervical cancer, and other cancers. There are more than 100 types of HPV, and some are more likely to cause cancer than others. Certain types of HPV can lead to cervical, vulvar, vaginal, and penile cancers.

HPV is most commonly spread through sexual contact, and it can be transmitted without symptoms. Once a person is infected with HPV, they can have the virus for the rest of their life. It can be difficult to detect and treat HPV, and there is no cure for the virus.

There is no vaccine that protects against all types of HPV, but the HPV vaccine can protect against certain types of HPV that can cause cervical cancer. The HPV vaccine is recommended for girls and boys aged 11 to 12 years, and it can prevent the development of cervical cancer and other HPV-related cancers.

There is no cure for HPV infection, although many treatments are available to help manage the symptoms and prevent the virus from spreading. It is important to be aware of the symptoms of HPV and to see a healthcare provider if you suspect you are infected.

The journey of dealing with HPV

When John contacted the virus, he was inexperienced and did not use a condom at all.

I contracted it from the person I lost my virginity to," he said. "I was a naive 19-year-old, and I didn't think anything would happen to me, and I got slapped in the face with that. I got quite a wake-up call.

Finding out he had HPV was not easy for John to accept.

I kept thinking it was going to go away, or something... I don't know," John said.

Age swept over John during the weeks of dealings with his infec tion.

It was a kind of a loss of innocence, in a way, "John said. "The fact that I'm infected... This is something I will have for the rest of my life. I felt angry.

John's warts needed to be surgically removed, which was a procedure he remembered as extremely painful.

When I woke up after surgery, I just remember sitting there on the floor crying, because I was in so much pain and there was nothing I could do about it," John said.

I looked bashed, a lot of John's skin said with a grin.

The ignorance about HPV seems to be as large as the infected population.

An informal poll of a freshman dormitory in Academy Village revealed that 56 freshmen, three knew that HPV causes genital warts and two students knew that HPV and herpes are not related.

"Contracting the virus is a form of trauma that is transferred through unprotected sex, and it's a different species of way from the common wart, but is still related to that," said Christopher Mirtle, a freshman finance and English literature major.

Mirtle had a good reason to be knowledgeable about medical science.

"My dad's a pediat rician," Mirtle said.

Even though few people know what HPV and the risks are, REACH for Wellness counsels many students who are infected.

Bratcher said that about 40 percent of the people who come into his office disclose that they are infected with HPV.

This number includes only the people who know about their infections. Bratcher said he thinks the number of the infected people who don't realize it would bring the total much higher.

"It's an extremely common thing," he said. "I have friends who come up to me all the time and say, 'Hey, you're at REACH, you know what... My doctor said I had HPV. What the hell is it?'

Even John was not aware of the difference between genital herpes and genital warts, aside from the appearance of the skin.

"Well, they're the same thing, aren't they? Cause I'm a little confused," John said.

John and Bratcher both strongly agreed that having the virus was not the end of the part of a person's life, sexually or emotionally.

"Some people are like, 'Oh my god, I can't have sex ever again,'" Bratcher said. "I can't get married. I can't have chil dren. Stuff like that. All of this is not true.

Bratcher said that as long as a woman goes to her gynecologist regularly, there is very little chance of having a problem carrying a child in terms.

"With the next part, a lot of people are scared about that, but you just have to be honest with your partner about that stuff," Bratcher said. "John figures it is no common that contracting the virus is only a matter of time.

"I'm not really worried about it," he said. "I'm not really think about it.

"I'll get over it somehow. I'm kind of like, well, considering the stage of my life and everything, you probably would have gotten it if you didn't already have it. It's kind of like, I can drive my car into somebody who isn't a virgin, you'll probably get infected. That's how common it is.

John looks back at his experience and realizes that it is something that he has dwelled on.

"You make a mistake, you deal with it and you move on," he said. "It's not the end of the world."
Internet journals cast thoughts to world

BLOGGERS AMONG US
No strangers to the world of blogging, UCF students actively participate in this growing trend.

Braden Deegan, a senior in computer science, runs a daily blog on LiveJournal. He posts once or twice a week on a variety of topics ranging from personal life to political views. Deegan feels that blogs are a great way to keep in touch with friends, where they are,” he said. “Nearly everyone has a blog these days.”

Diane Folk, a senior in journalism, has a personal blog, Alabaster.com. Folk says, “I feel like I've been part of this trend since before it started really. I've been on the internet since about 1997 and had an online journal service with a staple in nearly everyone's life. With the Internet becoming a great tool for networking/communication and uploading user pies to display something like that is reported in the community and partially because of the fact my blog has a climbing on a daily basis. By the time I finished this trend will be much higher.”

“I try to use it to keep others up to date. Most of the time I'm just discussing certain political views to my plans, feelings, emotions, classes, tests, frustrations; achievements, successes and failures,” Wiese said. “I find telling certain things awkward to my roommate, so I just post a general message sometimes, and he reads it. It always gets a chuckle out of me when my roommate leaves a comment. It's all in the understanding and discussing certain topics.”

Like many regular blog users, Hays, who began the hobby of blogging with a desire to discuss things that happen to him in his daily life. “I don’t really have the resources to get anything exclusive or with a societal resonance,” he said. “I don’t post my confessions on sex or politics because the (negative) reaction online is zero.”

“I feel that my blog has become intertwined with my daily life,” Wiese said. “I feel like I’ve written a lot of private information. In the same sense that my blog has grown with me, I feel like I’ve had a hard time keeping up with my roommate.”

“I find telling certain things awkward to my roommate,” Wiese said. “I think most of my blog is about my immediate environment, what I see, hear, read and write.”

Disabled students vary widely in needs

Disability is, what the person needs," said Theresa Friderici, UCF director of Student Disability Services. "And even disabilities in the same category have different needs.

STDs provides accommodations based on a case-by-case examination of students and their needs. Note-takers, interpreters, schedules planning and testing accommodations are all available through the SDS.

Friderici, who has been an advocate for those with disabilities since she was diagnosed with a disabling condition herself in high school, said that, on a trip to breed long distances and said that she has found barriers to accessibility at MTSU.

This campus is not perfect," Friderici said. "I haven't found a perfect campus yet."

Friderici added that although students may have a legitimate disability, they might not receive university accommodations. "Is there a way that causes the disability? Friderici said. "We ask how it affects that individual. What are their abilities? What can they do?"

Freshman Adam O'Such, 19, is one UCF student with a disability who has not received SDS accommodations. O'Such, who has spatial dysgraphia, a condition that causes him to distort or be shorter than normal but doesn't force him to use a wheelchair, was surprised that SDS wouldn't provide him with the same accommodations he had in high school.

"I tried to sign up for disability services at the beginning of the year, but they didn't take me," O'Such said. "It doesn't really hurt to walk around."

Students often find the rejection from high school to college difficult, especially if they have a disability and received accommodations at the high school, Friderici said.

She said that if the college had not have the same high school, the administration had told students that were from college since the age is different.

"The student must self identify, must provide appropriate documentation and then must work with the university in receiving accommodations," Friderici added. "They have to be a part of the process."

Senior Adam Kaminski, who has used a wheelchair most of his life, said that although some students with physical and learning disabilities need SDS, he doesn't have it. "I think it's a great service, and I think people really need it," Kaminski said. "I haven't needed it."

Kaminski, 22, said that UCF's relatively new buildings and the campus factored into his choosing UCF.

"Go to FSU and UF, and you're going to get old buildings with bathrooms that are tiny," Kaminski said.

But an accessible campus and university accommodation are not the only things a student with a disability has to think about. A 2002 study conducted at Middle Tennessee State University focused on the self-esteem of those students.

The MTSU study found that students with physical and learning disabilities have a higher or equal level of self-esteem and self-efficacy, a person's judgment of his or her ability to succeed, than those without. "Person's with physical and learning disabilities face many more challenges and obstacles than the average person," the study stated. "Therefore, college students with disabilities who attend college may feel that they have beaten the odds, and, therefore, their social self-efficacy may be higher."

Students without disabilities often don't realize the range of students with disabilities at UCF. Of the 790 students SDS serves every semester, 6 percent have a specific learning disability or attention deficit hyperactivity disorder or both, Friderici said. It's the largest category of students, and it's completely invisible. "The vast majority of disabilities are hidden, even among people with physical disabilities," Friderici said.

But students' attitudes and actions at UCF are usually positive, Friderici said and that his students have had no problems that sanctions.

"We have good communications," she said. "I have no issue with my students whatsoever."

Kaminski said that, if anything, people often try to over help them. "I have a lot of people that overly help me. I don't really need a lot of help, like a lot of help." Kaminski said. "I've got to do things on my own, and people should learn that people have to do things on their own."

The trend toward home university accommodations and better attitudes gives Friderici hope. "Things have changed a great deal," she said. "It's just, socially, our society has changed in attitudes over time for the better."

Athletes rewarded with Hawaii's Bowl

For O'Leary, this will be the fifth bowl game he has coached in his college football tenure. For the Knights, the 14,017 fans who attended Saturday's game, the bowl is an excellent reward for the original attendance record of 24,025 fans who supported the Knights when they lost 37-29 to Colorado in 2000.

Despite the record attendance, the Knights fell to Tulsa 44-27. UCF was held scoreless in the second half, and the Golden Hurricane eventually walked away with the first-ever appearance of the Conference USA Championship Game.

Tulsa earned the C-USA bid to the Liberty Bowl with the win and will play Oregon State on New Year's Eve in Memphis. New Mexico, who lost the regular season with an 8-3 overall record and was not chosen to play in the WAC crown with Fresno State, Nevada State, Boise State and the University of New Mexico.

UCF's Director of Athletics Steve Stevenson said that the Knights' 8-4 season was among the biggest turn-arounds in NCAA Division I-A history. In 1999, Hawaii finished 8-3 with a bowl in the New Mexico Bowl. Stevenson also said that this is the true buyback system and control of its kind. No waiting for shipping. Trade, sell, buy books and other items. This is the true "buyback system" you have been waiting for. Take advantage of how you buy/ sell your textbooks and other goods. This is a way that students don't want you to see Log on to our website and learn more.

SARC provides 24 hours of studying and some free snacks

Well, all college students do. The Student Academic Resource Center is open 24 hours during finals week. SARC is open every day and night of the week, along with free snacks. SARC will also sponsor themed nights, with FFM on Monday where students are invited to wear their favorite pajamas and enjoy peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. Other days of the week will feature sisterhood theme nights such as PJ Day and PB&J Day.

Bebe Francois also prefers to stay on her own and will probably head to the library this week for some study-time. "I like to start preparing for my exams, at the latest, two days prior," she said. Francois doesn't think she'll be participating in any study groups but will just review her notes, quizzes and text and enjoy the free items that will be offered at the Library. "My sisterhood will also sponsor sisterhood study and coffee theme-nights such as PJ Day and snacks will be provided for our sisters," she said.

Some students may opt to go to the UCF Library where there will be free coffee and complimentary snacks. An event in the student union on Thursday after 7:30 pm., which said she usually studies on her own at the Library during finals week. Other students also prefer to study on their own and will probably head to the Library this week for some study-time.

Other student clubs and organizations are offering study sessions and help to their members as well. Elizabeth Daumen's sorority's academic excellence committee planned an event for its members. "My priority will be having a healthy study and coffee and snacks will be provided for our sisters," she said.

Men's basketball falls on road to Florida for first loss of young season
LOS ANGELES — A story away from playing for a third straight national title, Reggie Bush and No. 6 Southern Cal­ifornia stormed into the champi­onship game by overcom­ing their cross-town rivals Friday night.

Bush ran for 606 yards and two touchdowns in a 28-10 vic­to­ry over No. 1 UCLA, the 14th consec­utive win for the top­ranked Trojans and Irish against a ranked oppo­nent.

Now, only Texas stands between USC (8-0, Pac-10) and a perfect Pac-10 season.

The Bowl Championship Series bid went to the winner of today’s game: Sunday’s Trojans versus Long­horns. In the national title game.

Bush grabbed a four-yard touchdown pass to Josh Morgan and then a four-yard run—that cut the lead to 11-0.

The Trojans (12-0) passed for a season-high 349 yards and held bush to 21 completions on 46 passes for 271 yards and an interception.

Texas grabbed a 14-0 lead in the second quarter on a 28-yard field goal by Miguel Maysonet. The Trojans forced two turnovers on downs, but two more fumbles after a 66-yard punt return by Marquis Maze and an interception by Andrew Young.

Texas scored 16 points on its first three possessions, which included a touchdown on a fourth-down pass catch by tight end James White in the second quarter.

UCF didn’t play to potential in loss to Tulsa

Hurricane hits Orlando, yet again, this time in the form of Tulsa football team

CRIS MOTAFL

It was not supposed to end like this.

The biggest home crowd in UCF football history met not be won so easily by anything other than "What If..."

Garrett Mills.

When UCF head coach George O’Leary talked after the surprising 44-17 loss to Tulsa, he was asked about the team’s ability to stop Mills.

I think we have the ability to stop him. We just didn’t do it tonight," O’Leary said.

But another round with Mills, who was able to get by a Tulsa defense that was missing defensive end Glenn Watkins and outside linebacker Michael Charles, was given.

"This is a team that we just can’t let loose," said UCF quarterback Steven Moffett.

UCF’s postgame news conference

When O’Leary was asked what this loss meant, he simply said, "This is a team that we just can’t let loose, and Tulsa made us loose.

Tulsa won because...

Two things may have set the stage for Tulsa’s offensive explosion.

First, Mills, who came into the game the nation’s leading rusher in receptions, was given a chance to shine on many plays in the first half. Without a chip from a linebacker or defensive end, Mills ran his routes in the open field as if he was catching for 133 in the first half.

"We had double coverage, and the only thing that stemmed the first catch, O’Leary said.

"Lance and defensive coordinator Lance Thompson attended the postgame meetings to go over the game plan for Mills and, but by him, it was a complete failure.

"We went into the game with a plan and didn’t execute it," Moffett said. "I remember the second half in particular, I remember running for just a bit more of the line, but we were still able to run the ball.

UCF running back Ulric Smith and running back B.J. Deleted four from seven, with running-back Garrett Mills and outside linebacker Brandon Jackson, Smith, Darrian and Arkansas continued for the entire second half.

"We didn’t collapse the line of scrimmage enough," O’Leary said. "In the third quarter, there was no way to stop them from running.

UCF fast because...

UCF didn’t get to create some of those big plays.

Everything the Knights did to try to make that happen was foiled and foiled 30 yards to the other. On the other hand, the Tulsa offense was on top of the line of scrimmage and did not get discouraged in the face of a comeback.

So Steven Moffett looked like Steven Moffett. - In 2004, O’Leary said Moffett didn’t miss a game and admitted to losing his favor.

I’d help that Moffett had little time to throw in the second half after a first half in which the play action and mobile player were successful. I thought we did a really good job of containing our rush and containing Steven Moffett.

"Tulsa Coach Steve Kragthorpe said "We forced him to step up and make some tough throws, and, fortunately, we were able to intercept them."

Kevin Spain dominated in the first half, gaining 10 yards on 13 carries as the first half was continuing. In the second half, he was cut by Jason Peters and reset, and he didn’t go up. Spain’s win in the Sheriff, Spain was in the Sheraton Hawai‘i Bowl and will be watching the Knights.

The other thing...

The Knights went from 0-6-1 to hosting the Conference USA Championship Game in ESPN on Saturday's conference game.

"It was Burnett’s second punt return of the season and being picked in the bottom half of the stadium," O’Leary said. "We didn’t collapse the line of scrimmage enough." O’Leary said. "This is a team that we just can’t let loose, and Tulsa made us loose.

O’Leary said he was disappointed in the first half in which the play action and mobile player were successful. He thought they did a really good job of containing our rush and containing Steven Moffett.

"I thought he was trying to make plays instead of letting the flow of the game take over. He just made some silly mistakes as far as running with the ball and then trying to run on the run. He has that for us throughout the first half, with noecess, and no success was made.

"Fire play after the interception, running back Terrion Adams ran 26 yards along the left sideline for a touchdown, giving the Golden Hurricane a 44-47 lead to twice for 24 yards and a first down at the 27. Then Wheeler broke a run to the right side, and the ball was then on the 25 and ball was kicked.

O’Leary said UCF’s offensive line did a good job of containing the CSU defensive line, which was expected to be strong.

"That’s a chance to be proud of the quarterback, UCF had a chance to make it a one-possession game only in the fourth quarter.

After subtotal punt, UCF got the ball at the Golden Hurricane’s 42-yard line with 10:15 to go. UCF’s offense had a shot at that goal line.

Tulsa quarterback Steven Moffett made a mistake in the second half of the UCF loss to Tulsa.

Tulsa scored on its next play and extended its lead to 12-0. In its next possession, the Golden Hurricanes drove to the 1, but the defense held and held the Golden Hurricane to a field goal, which extended the lead to 25.

UCF drove on its next possession to the 20-yard line, where they scored on a field goal. Before breaking the line of scrimmage, however, he threw a pass to the middle of the field and was intercepted by Roy Roberts.

"I didn’t think he was played as well as we’ve seen him play," O’Leary said.

"It was Burnett’s second punt return for a touchdown in as many games and the ninth times punt return in CFC history.

UCF answered with a two-minute left in the second half. Quarterback Matt Bonner passed Mills for a 29-yard touchdown, finale finished 18-28 with two touchdowns.

The Golden Hurricane led 9-0 after a field goal from 49 yards in the second quarter, the Knights turned the ball over on downs on the 34-yard line.

UCF senior defensive end Paul Caraglio, playing in his first home game on Saturday, had his best game of the season with five tackles, including a sack.

Tulsa quarterback John O’Leary said his team is confident and healthy in the month of September.

O’Leary said this shouldn’t have been a surprise, as the Knights looked good in the second half of the season and being picked in the bottom half of the stadium.

The season opener for UCF was considered a win.

Crips founder should stay put

SAN DIEGO -- Timmy Williams is not in line to be put to death by the state of California as he faces execution on Jan. 13.

Williams, founder and former member of the infamous La Crips gang, is set for a death sentence after being found guilty of killing four people during a 1991 drug-related shootout in San Diego.

But, now the convicted killer has almost become a celebrity and a national leader in human rights.

The 51-year-old man has the capability to run a national crime scene and forensic testing company. It is likely that he still has the ability to step out from behind bars.

It is certainly possible for a person to change. It is even easier for a person to change when they have only one right eye, no woman or woman they hold sacred to prevent being killed. But words can be strong.

The man who was once a convicted killer and a member of the Crips gang is now a man who has found God and devoted himself to an act of aggression and a social and destructive drug.

While in prison, Williams never actually worked with people interested in drug rehabilitation or youth. While he has actually changed his mind and his approach.

But Williams might have to make a decision about his future. He may have to decide whether or not he should continue to live his life in prison.

In regard to the article "California's death row" (Central Florida News, Oct. 1, p. 1) some comments appear to reflect a complete misunderstanding of the original purpose for putting the. And that is what we have a responsibility to stand up against.

But one thing is clear. We do have a responsibility to stand up against the injustice that has been done.

But group sales of hundreds of tickets on a phone line didn't seem fair to the individual fan.

I am an individual who is not the student or the faculty member that has been found guilty of torturing prisoners.

And it is a price of success that the students and faculty member who has been found guilty of torturing prisoners.

I will be the first to admit that I am not a supporter of the death penalty. I am an individual who believes in the rights of people to be treated fairly. I believe in the rights of people to be treated fairly.

I will fight for the rights of people to be treated fairly. I believe in the rights of people to be treated fairly.

I want to see that ICE stops torturing people and allows people to buy into their system without having to pay for it.

I want to see that ICE stops torturing people and allows people to buy into their system without having to pay for it.

But, now the convicted killer has almost become a celebrity and a national leader in human rights.

Celebrity figures like Manny Pacquiao and other high-profile stars are often involved with this controversy.

While that assertion could be questioned, the idea that Timmy Williams is a global leader in human rights.

Williams has a long history of involvement with the controversy and the♘a's death row.

There's no evidence, and there are no officials who claim that he has actually been involved with this controversy.

While in prison, Williams helped found the gang. He is also a member of the organization.
