Sports Marketing, women's hoops team up to break attendance record on national TV

Stronger student fan base essential to improving momentum for basketball team

Ashley Burns

The UCF women's basketball program is reaching out to the student body in order to improve attendance by challenging fans and alumni to "Pack the House" for the team's home game Sunday at 5 p.m., against UT Tyler.

Sunday's game marks the first nationally televised home game, and the women want to break their home attendance record and grab a win over UT Tyler. The home attendance record for women's basketball is 876 and was set more than three years ago when the Knights played in the Atlantic Sun Conference.

"We want to invite the Orlando community to come be a part of program history, not only as we celebrate our first nationally televised contest, but also as we try to break the attendance record," UCF Coach Gill Striegle said in a press release.

The community outreach is also being aided by the school's sports marketing department, which has boosted the overall emphasis on the program's athletics for all sports. UCF is now in the middle of its inaugural season of competition in Conference USA, a more high-profile conference that the school feels has given an edge to UCF's efforts.

We're making history," Gert Garman, Assistant Athletic Director for Marketing and Promotions, said. "We want to break the attendance record at our first nationally televised contest and we want to see our fans out there cheering for the Knights."
Why faith, pop culture collide

Religious organizations struggle to be "appealing and relevant," attract students

By Elizabeth Matthew Clark

LAFAYETTE, Colo. — A sermon at Flatirons Community Church might discretely suggest a Gatorade commercial.

"That might make today's Adventist's journey to the dark side," one person said.

The non-denominational Flatirons church and others like it are turning to pop culture to help them speak to today's teens and those too young to reach the faith groups, because they go to church regularly.

"It's the first time in your life you have a choice of what to do and people are trying to grow their indigenous church," she said.

First Presbyterian Church in Boulder draws more than 700 college students to Tuesday night meetings, but that attendance is considered a financial success.

"We do a ton of secular media outreach, and we get them through that lens," she said.

He soon confirmed that 95 percent of the Jewish citizens of the Jewish State of Israel, which was created in 1948, were Jewish, while 15 percent were non-Jewish.

"If we're trying to bring church into the world where people can assess what brain damage the children are not struck or knocked over.

The seminar will focus on what students need to do to achieve financial freedom and space. In limited.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Center, CFS is a "debilitating and complex disorder characterized by profound fatigue that is not improved by bed rest and that may be worsened by physical or mental activity."

People who suffer from CFS have a lower level of activity than they were capable of before their illness. Symptoms can include weakness, muscle pain, insomnia and impaired memory. In some cases, CFS can persist for years.

There is a disagreement among medical professionals about the causes, diagnosis and treatment of CFS because so much of the disease remains unknown. One reason CFS has been difficult to diagnose is because it shares symptoms with many other diseases. These include multiple sclerosis and lupus.

Even after other diseases are ruled out and CFS is diagnosed, there is no standard course of treatment, and it has been difficult for doctors to measure their patients' improvement.

"For years, patients with chronic fatigue syndrome have been treated for painful symptoms for which there is no blood test, diagnosable physical condition or any method for doctors to measure improvements," Dr. James Baraniuk said. Baraniuk is an assistant professor of medicine at George-town University Medical Center and the first author on the study.

The Georgetown University Medical Center is an internationally recognized academic medical center with a three-part mission of research, teaching and patient care.

"Our research provides initial evidence that chronic fatigue syndrome and its family of illnesses may be legitimate, neurological diseases and that at least part of the pathology involves the central nervous system," Baraniuk said.

The Georgetown University study looked at 18 individuals suffering from at least two disorders related to CFS, including fibromyalgia and Gulf War syndrome. By examining spinal cord fluid in patients with CFS and in healthy individuals, the researchers found that CFS patients have 16 proteins that healthy individuals do not. Five of these 16 proteins are found in all patients with the illnesses but in none of the controls. The results indicate that these 16 proteins could possibly serve as a "signature" for the disease and could someday be used to diagnose CFS.

"Although this is a small study and more research on the subject is necessary, these results indicate it might be possible to develop a simple laboratory test to diagnose these disorders in the future," Baraniuk said.

The march, organized by the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), a civil rights organization, was initially only intended to bring awareness to the issue of school segregation. However, it quickly grew into a massive demonstration that would have a profound impact on the civil rights movement in the United States.

Volunteers give back to needy kids

Members of Volunteer UCF reflected today their last semester for one of their many projects contributing to local children in need.

with them and show them that someone cares about them. Merchant said that UCF has great success in recruiting students to help with the different causes, and it has helped establish a good relationship with the various children's organizations. UCF typically trains 150 volunteers per outing, but because the groups helping them are overwhelming, they have had to ask the organizations if they can bring more volunteers to each event. The added attendance of 10 to 15 student volunteers is especially important to the children lacking any adult role model in their life.

"Usually, they're starving for some sort of positive role model because they're lacking in that," Merchant said.

Students interested in volunteering with UCF for either of these events can contact Merchant at vuchild@gmail.com to sign up.

More than 22,000 protesters filled in Washington D.C. in 1963 as part of the March on Washington, in which 800,000 demonstrated against the discrimination in public facilities and schools and allowed black citizens the same voting privileges as whites.

The MSC march will highlight the monumental aspects of the 42-year-old event and will allow students to remember the importance of one of the largest demonstrations gatherings of the 20th century.

The outcome of the march had both positive and negative aspects. On one hand, the event managed to save a fire of hope within the 285,000 protesters and many other blacks throughout the nation. On the other hand, it isolated many racially intolerant citizens of the southern states targeted by the movement's tactics. Less than three weeks after the march, a church in Alabama was attacked and a bomb killed four young black girls.

Two months later, on Nov. 22, Kennedy was assassinated.

But on July 2, 1964, Kennedy's legacy was established as his civil rights bill was finally passed, eliminating racial discrimination in public facilities and schools and allowed black citizens the same voting privileges as whites.

The MSC march will highlight the monumental aspects of the 42-year-old event and will allow students to remember the importance of one of the largest demonstrations gatherings of the 20th century.

Following the event, MSC will also host a bicentennial celebration for King at 7 p.m. at the Lake Claire Community Center. Festivities will include music, food and games.
Bashing Miller is wasted breath

Two hours after we wrapped Monday's issue, I received a phone call letting me know that the Mighty Mouse was gone.

After I picked her up, my body squealed in protest. I protested. Instead, I took my aggrievance toward the heavens on June 18. I am a woman of broken glass and a strong voice.

Of course, I am building. It sounds fun and, shouldn't it? After all, if you're building a wall, you're building a wall. And if you're building a system, you're building a system.

Sports fans love their bad boys. Athletes like Miller bring attention to sports, and, for ski- ers, to Florida. To Miller's exclusion from the Florida football program, "Miller is a world-class athlete who brings so many millions of dollars in endorsements to the University of Florida," he would have to add on. And if you're building a system that's going to be wasted money, the system should be taken down. And if you're building a system, men to even think about a basic plan.

As my two-week long bout with breast cancer turned (or should I say, I turned on myself) continued, I found a special on AMC—a film about the history of women in Asian Bond movies. I was taken aback. I had to hold on to my youthful ponytail ways as well. But now Miller's team says they're going to bury him under the bus. Because of Miller's coach, Phil McGinness, is seriously considering a heavier punishment for his first strike. The reason is the way Miller hasbettled such a lot of people to come out.

Miller's admittance of occasionally drinking alcohol and marijuana is irresponsible. But it was not just one statement. He's tried in the past to prove he's handing out a classic piece of Bush's education reform. He has also turned the voucher programs into legislation for his goal of placing his political beliefs.

Finally, the man says that he's a world-class athlete. Miller himself is a world-class athlete. He's a 28-year-old professional athlete, a future of something that is not even considered. He has even found amusement in his unapologetic behavior. He's a 28-year-old professional athlete, a future of something that is not even considered. Bond girls represent ultimate empowerment

I drool like a 3-year-old sucking on a tube of Novocain any time I watch Goldeneye and Izabella Scorupco is in a scene. Thank God I thought every girl on Earth had eyebrows at the time. The absolutely worst Bond girl ever, though, was Carey Lowell, who played Pam Bouvier in License to Kill. If you don’t know what this girl looked like, then Google, river Phoenix and you’ll have an idea. The biggest problem to me is that the better Bond girls are always the women with the least amount of screen time. Almost equal­ly as bad is the fact that one ran as Bond girl and the actress’ career goes poof. In the last installment of Pierce Brosnan’s Bond career, The Other Day, Rosamund Pike played Miranda Frost. Who in the man hell is Rosamund Pike, you ask? That’s my point. She’s gorgeous and her character was a perfect female villain. Here we heard from Ms. Pike since The New. Talisa Soto was the only reason Chaz PALM MIKES to Kill was worth not shooting myself over by the time the opening credits ended. These days, I’m pretty sure she’s holding cans on late­ night Telemundo infomercials.

My absolute favorite Bond girl was Kristina Wayborn, who played Miggie in Goldeneye. It’s hard to pick just one, but she stands out because of her beauty, her slightly better-than-curse acting and the coolness of her character. This was a lot about her, considering I drool like a 3-year-old sucking on a tube of Novocain any time I watch Goldeneye and Izabella Scorupco is in a scene. Better yet, I say a lot more con­ sidering You Only Live Twice featured only Asian Bond girls and Asian girls are like heroines to me. It’s hard to tell where the Bond franchise will go with Daniel Craig as the new, blond fictitious Bond. It’s hard to see Charlize Theron or Scarlett Johansson take their place in Bond history, but we’re prob­ ably more likely to see Tia Reed playing Dr.卣en Mekaandbook or Moira O’Hara reenter. That would leave me pretty shaken, but definitely not exterminated.

ANDRES VASQUEZ

Marcus Vick was preparing for broadcasting a feature at three taverns in the parking lot of a McDonald's, only two days after being kicked off the Virginia Tech football team and less than a week after stepping on the leg of an opposing player at the center bowl.

Less than a month before, Vick was issued speeding citations, driving through three different counties in three months after the run. This is the second year in a row Vick has been suspended for providing alcohol to underage girls, ending motor vehicle registration for the second time.

Vick, the younger brother of NFL quarterback and V-Tech star Michael Vick, clearly believes that his ability to play football makes him exempt from the rules the rest of society is forced to follow.

How impressive is Vick — who put up mediocre collegiate numbers at best when compared with anything he has wanted to do — when he

What can we say? 2005 wasn’t nearly as good a year for movies as 2004. There were a lot of mediocre and awful films this year, but luckily, studios had enough quality productions to release so that Variety could bring you its annual rundown of the best films of last year. Make no mistake; 2005 may not have been great, but all of these films were.

Marriage: A four-letter word now

"There's no escape. Absolutely, marriage is no longer an occasion for joy and life-affirming commitments. It is the era of happily ever after, it's over.

Every day I check the daily entertainment news, and Monday, I was told to do it, it's not the news of the world, but the news of the people.

Gay Louise and Billy Bush just called it quits. This is possibly the most devastating breakup ever - the belief that weddings could be more successful than the marriage of two mates and maintaining a healthy relationship is utterly shattered. But it figures.

With the tremendous discourse on marriage and divorce, we've spent a mere five or six years, I have to wonder if anyone ever got the memo. It's like I don't even know how to garden or keep a clean house.

Call me crazy, but marriage is a lifetime commitment. My parents are still going strong with 50 years of marriage. Although it wasn't always easy, they made it work. A true commitment, wrapped with a ring. But, the great Hollywood goddess doesn't make it work. How can an essential part of beauty expected?

Should we rethink marriage, and the union of my friend and her latest crime of loving another.

The tough compromise. The tough, the tough got to therapy. This takes time.

The right person. This takes time.

After years of marriage. Although it was long and enduring, marriage truly works out. I have to wonder what's left.

We can't expect every marriage to work. That's why the union of two people is so important. It's what makes the difference.

Getting along with each other, having mutual interests, is the key. Without that, it's hard to imagine a successful marriage.

The movie is considered a milestone in the history of Hollywood, and it's a reminder of how to make a great film. It's a story about a relationship, about the importance of communication.

The HD DVD camp in what's being called a "format war" between HD DVD and Blu-ray. The choice is yours, but make sure you're making the right one.

It's time to rethink the movie industry, and how we consume our entertainment. The future is bright, and the options are endless.

So, what's your favorite movie? Do you prefer the classics, or the latest blockbusters? Let us know in the comments below.

Crispers

Tired of the Old Same Old?

Try the new food at Crispers...it's HOT!

Most of us don't remember our college days as being times of transcendent culinary experience. We fondly recall last night's pizza, eaten cold at 3 AM, the infamous burger tagged, or the belly buster sub sandwich that provided a three-day gastrointestinal meltdown.

These days are over. Now there are new gourmet creations from Crispers. Not just main dishes that are quick, delicious, and full of flavor combinations you just can't get anywhere else. Use the coupons, save money, and enjoy them all.

Here's what's waiting for you at Crispers...

- The new Big BIG baked potato, a super-sized soup, covered with yummy stuff like Tex-Mex chicken, saucy pot roast, in gravy, and lots more.
- That burger joint doesn't have gourmet flat bread creations, but Crispers does. With a variety of toppings including Hawaiian, Parmesan Crisp, Spicy String, Margherita, and tons of others.
- Then you're in for another treat with our HOT toast sandwiched, which includes the best Reuben you've ever tasted, really.
