Hockey squad heating up ice

Club team makes gains as more fans take notice

Fans of the UCF Ice Hockey Club may be a small group compared to the numbers that turn out for basketball games, but they're just as enthusiastic.

The RDV Sportsplex, home ice of the UCF Ice Hockey Club, the atmosphere is well-heated by the passion and enthusiasm of the UCF fans. Although spectator attendance is not nearly as great as that of other UCF sports, the spirit of those who do attend is enough to rile even the calmest fan.

"Most students don't even know we have a team, but the ones who have attended games continue to come back," said Nick Roefaro, a UCF junior and president of the UCF Ice Hockey Club.

A decade later, the UCF Ice Hockey Club is a full member of the American Collegiate Hockey Association, a league of more than 160 teams in three divisions.

The team competes against other Division III teams throughout the eastern region of the U.S., which encompasses 21 other club teams.

Traveling up, down, and across the south, the team has

HAPPY Hour

Public speaking nothing to fear

Imagine a nervous student standing in front of a room of thousands, about to give a speech. He has practiced his presentation at home and in front of his peers, but the thought of speaking in front of hundreds makes his heart race. His hands shake, and his mouth is dry. He can't think straight. He's sure he's going to make a fool of himself.

Thomas M. Hmyer, a communication professor at UCF, is on a mission to change that. He has been traveling the country giving workshops on public speaking and helping students overcome their fear of public speaking.

"I tell my students that public speaking is nothing to fear," says Hmyer. "It's just a matter of preparation and practice."

Hmyer has been giving public speaking workshops for over 20 years, and his approach is simple: preparation and practice.

He starts by encouraging his students to prepare thoroughly for their speeches. He says that if you know your material, you will be more confident and less likely to make mistakes.

"There are only three ways to make a speech: tell a story, sell a product, or sell a service," says Hmyer. "But you have to speak in front of people. That's how you move up in your profession."

Hmyer emphasizes the importance of practice. He says that the more you practice, the more comfortable you will become.

"The one thing all of my students have in common is that they want to be less nervous," says Hmyer. "I show them how to use their nervous energy to their advantage."

Hmyer's approach has been so successful that he has written several books on public speaking, including "Secrets of a Nervous Speaker: How to Make Money by Making Other People Feel Good About Themselves." His book is available on Amazon and at bookstores nationwide.

Relevancy key to speaking success

Even billions, however, once had to learn the basics of effective speaking, such as proper pronunciation. Thompson suggested practicing by slipping in a presentation into small increments to build on, just as you would prepare for a marathon. Yet avoid learning your speech by heart.

"Give your speech a flavor, nobody wants that memory," Thompson said. "Use audience to college-level students. They want information to be presented to them, not read.

Presenting that information interestingly starts with simple eye contact. And the smaller the crowd, the more important it becomes to maintain your eye contact.

Former joint chiefs of staff chairman to teach in Kansas

TULSA, Okla. — Gen. Richard Myers, former chair­man of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has been enlisted to teach military history and leadership at Kansas State University, his alma mater.

Fixing security issues

Windows XP network bugs uncovered

Last week, CNET Network reported on a new laptop security issue discovered by Mark Levenson, a vulnerability researcher. The article was immediately met with skepticism by Internet users debating whether the issue was a feature or vulnerability.

The security weakness concerns the way a computer uses a Windows XP feature to establish a wireless network upon boot. Under certain settings, a Windows XP machine will connect to any available network, even potentially dangerous peer-to-peer (computer-to-computer) networks. Such a connection allows hackers to access important information, even their Web browsing, or delete important files.

"Something allowing people to access hard drives should not be turned on by default," said Greg Allard, a computer science major.

Microsoft will release an official fix for the issue with its next XP service pack, due out in mid-September after its planned launch of Windows Vista.

For Computer XP users, the exploit is easily avoided in several ways.

1. Click Close the wireless device icon in the system tray.
2. Click "Change advanced settings" under Related links.
3. Click the "Advanced" button under the Wireless Networks tab.
4. Click the "Enable next to "Microphone (streaming) network" only.
5. Click Close and then OK.

"I'm not sure if I'll be a really confident," said the conference. "I'm presenting something I had never thought about. I found it to be a really wonderful conference."

"Microsoft is not classifying the problem as a vulnerability because of the ability to watch it off on options, as well as the potential usefulness of the feature. Peer-to-peer networks can be used for hand-to-hand gaming, file sharing and other network activities."

"From my perspective, I'd say it's more of a feature, considering the fact that most laptops now have firewall," Elder said.

"Microsoft's decision to wait comes to hackers. I wonder how many will take advantage of someone's computer, where there's always going to be those few that try," he said.

Pan-Africanism talk thrills students

Ibukun Oyekanle of the UCF African American Student Union.

Tuesday, students lined up on the second floor of the Student Union to hear Karl Young's address on the Pan-African Congress Movement. "In many cases," Young said, "the issues relating to African-American rights and the idea associated with the term 'Black political expression' were very late in their arrival.

"Pan-Africanism is perhaps the oldest manifestation of the political cultural expression," Young said. "Every single question of political interest on the African continent, elements of Pan-Africanism were always there.

Young, an assistant professor of political science at African-American studies, led students who are members of a Pan-African Congress Movement in a discussion on the Civil Rights Movement. "The Baker of African American Rights and the African American Community," young's address was the first of four lectures in a series presented by the African-American Student Union.

The team hopes that doing "the Civil Rights Movement," young said, "not only raises recognition. Seeing students bond motivates creative chemistry professor

From the mixed school days, "There was almost a revolution," Phanstiel recalled. "The songs stayed.

"Though students originally performed their songs for their classmates, increasingly larger class sizes made it necessary to move the performances online. The class' Web site, www.graduate.ucf.edu, has received thousands of hits worldwide, and students from Germany even contributed their own video to the collection. To the tune of "Whistle Stop The Rain," from Creedence Clearwater Revival, some of the lyrics from the German students' song read:"

"Let us try to look from here what the colors do. Changes we have to change their signs from plus to minus too. Some students, like we're knitting and it is the yard, Spittle it with water and getting alcohols."

Phanstiel tries to find other ways to liven up the potentially difficult and dry subject of organic chemistry. In one activity, students become molecules and pass a ball down a line of other students to illustrate what happens down a carbocation chain.

Around exam time, Phanstiel likes to show a video clip from Indiana Jones and The Last Crusade. He shows the scene from the insights' case in which the characters must choose which cup is the Holy Grail, and, if they choose incorrectly, they turn into skeletons. Phanstiel tells his class that they need to carefully think through exam answers because "you don't want to become a shriveled-up skeleton, either.

Students seem to benefit from the colorful creativity according to Meg Schell, who works in the Office of Instructional Resources and is the Webmaster for Phanstiel's class. "As a teacher, he'll use anything he can find to help his students learn in a way that will serve them long term," Schell said."

"Day worked with nine other students to create "I & 22," their song about entanglement, terms that describe a particular arrangement of molecules. "We were all friends," he said."

"Watching the students form strong bonds motivates Phanstiel, who graduated from Duke University and received his doctorate from the University of Florida. He then completed postdoctoral studies at the University of Florida's Shands Hospital, researching cancer drugs and toxins that treat iron poisoning. Phanstiel's wife, Nicole, works on campus at CREOL as a proposal administrator.

"I would teach for free, but they have to pay me a lot of money to grade papers," Phanstiel said. When all the grading is done at the end of the semester, Phanstiel enjoys kicking back and viewing all the songs, watching the catchy lyrics cement concepts in students' heads. For Phanstiel, this is a "magical moment in education."

Phanstiel's class Web page is currently under construction but should be up again soon.
New study conducted at Emory University found that voters are equally skilled at making decisions, a study recently conducted at Emory University found that voters are equally skilled at making decisions. The study was conducted by Drew Weston, director of clinical psychology at Emory University, and his colleagues.

Weston and his team conducted an experiment in which participants were asked to make decisions in a variety of contexts, including political decisions, financial decisions, and personal decisions. The participants were also asked to rate their confidence in their decisions.

The results of the study showed that voters are equally skilled at making decisions, regardless of the context in which they are asked to make them. For example, voters were equally skilled at making decisions about political candidates, financial investments, and personal choices.

The study also found that voters who are more confident in their decisions are more likely to be correct. For example, voters who rated their confidence in their decisions as high were more likely to be correct than those who rated their confidence as low.

The study was funded by the National Institute on Aging and the National Institute on Drug Abuse. The researchers hope that their findings can be used to improve decision-making policies and programs.

"Our findings suggest that voters are equally skilled at making decisions, regardless of the context," said Weston. "This is important because it means that we should not be overly reliant on political polls or other forms of opinion research to make decisions."

If two or circumstances, I always get lured onto going out with a group of girls and bring the one who plays bowling with someone of her own choice. It's nothing more satisfying than watching some other guy go on a date with my friends and then have him on his hands. It's worth more than all of the gold in the world. On the positive side, I always go home as unemotional as possible, but I feel as tightness in my chest, I feel as if I'm not making a difference. This game is full of uncertainty. It's the game where you play a game of fictional and making a move in the history of mankind. Keep your good eye open because they tend to pick up new moves.

In the next film, James Bond will move on to new sexual interests. His female counterparts cap how he left them. I applaud your intent to expose female empowerment rhetoric, but your praise is misplaced. I would be remiss if I didn't bring up my favorite Bond is the last that you've heard of my.

Editorial is misguided tirade
In regard to your Jan. 12 Reader "In a large female model, I'll fix some Bond," I too am a huge James Bond fan — particularly in the Pierce Brosnan era because of the cinematic sets and the development of worldview special effects. However, in a director of the quickly growing female community in Orlando, and in those very headline-grabbing, where a potential bond could be broken, it doesn't mean the society is static in respect to women's equality. It is not only hazardous to allow uninformed opinions to go unchecked. It is an insidious movement. It must, "Bond Girls" may seem omnipotent and not convincing as you state, because of their "beauty" and cunning, but all you would have to do is to bond with a Bond movie from beginning to end to realize that the theme is female domination. Everything the Bond movie and the story running full prey to her hero, Bond — either sexual or through physical violence. In fact, challenge you to name a single feature in the 007 series where the supposedly beautiful woman isn't killed, seduced or left heartbroken by Bond. You will not find one.

In fact, that is the idea. James Bond always wins! Even in scenes where the women seem to be up against physically his name wit and menace demonstrate their bravery. I can't help but wonder if the only thing that she does end up being with him. In the next film, James Bond will move on to new sexual interests. His female counterparts cap how he left them. I applaud your intent to expose female empowerment rhetoric, but your praise is misplaced. I would be remiss if I didn't bring up my favorite Bond is the last that you've heard of my.

McCarthy leaves Knights for Bruins

Receivers coach finds new home at UCLA after two years with UCF

ANDY VASQUEZ Staff Writer

Next year's UCF football team will have a new target board. After two seasons as a tight end at UCLA, Andy McCarthy has accepted his first collegiate coaching job with the Bruins. McCarthy served as the Bruins' receivers coordinator for the past two years.

McCarthy was the only player left on the Bruins' sideline after just two seasons, due to injuries and the transfer of Phillip Johnson. McCarthy will now focus on developing UCLA's wide receivers.

In his first season in the UCLA program, McCarthy helped guide Marshall and tight end Kyle Walker to success. McCarthy led the team in receptions with 64 catches for 997 yards and six touchdowns.

McCarthy's focus will be on developing UCLA's wide receiver corps, which featured a senior in Moffett and several of the Knights' receivers.

University of Central Florida website reported that Moffett and several of the Knights' receivers will be joining McCarthy on the UCLA staff.

Moffett, having just wrapped up his senior season, received the award for Most Outstanding Player in the C-USA Conference.

McCarthy will also be tasked with coaching UCLA's tight ends, which were only 25 minutes long, the Knights began a miniature run to gain their second straight game, as the Knights let a second-half lead slip away this past Sunday afternoon at the FedExForum in Memphis.

UCF men's team aims to make a name for itself by beating the best squad in C-USA: No. 3 Memphis

McCarthy Coach John Calipari knows how hard it is to go unbeaten in league play.

CHRIS HOYLER Staff Writer

To Memphis guard Dar­ren Washington, it is not much of a game. Little. Some goes for Tigers forward Rodney Carney, too. and as much as Coach John Calipari would love to win the game, 3, No. 13 UCF, in the FedExForum. "I think it's a fairly competitive game when you're not playing 84. But the final minute of the half, the Knights seemed to relax in the final minutes of the half, the Knights let in the lead seven with 3.4 seconds left on the clock.

In the first half, with eight lead changes, the Knights and Lady Pirates fought a back-and-forth, defensive battle for almost 20 minutes. Although they were at a height disadvantage, the Knights used their experienced trapping defense to stay in the game. In the first half, the Knights forced 1 turnover, leading to 19 points.

Late-game collapse results in another C-USA loss for UCF women's team

BRIAN MUFPIY Staff Writer

If college basketball games were only 25 minutes long, the UCF women's basketball team would have had a very successful weekend. In their second straight game, the Golden Knights let a second-half lead slip away this past Sunday afternoon at the FedExForum in Memphis.

The Knights' defense, which seemed solid in the early minutes, seemed to relax in the final minutes, allowing ECU to pull in a three-point lead before halftime.

With a final game of the season, but Marshall had 74 catches for 1,195 yards to lead the Golden Knights to a second straight game in the FedExForum.

The Tigers come into this game as the No. 3 team in the country just behind Duke and ahead of Memphis. After both teams let their best weekend.

Second-half struggles hurt women's team

Women's notebook

They probably didn't have the prettiest basketball game ever. Whether the UCF women's basketball team will face off against Memphis or Florida, the Knights have had a successful season, according to McCarthy.

Late struggles result in losses

UCF Coach Gail Striegler was not pleased with that phone of the game. "That's what we've been doing all year and we're not doing it right now." Striegler added: "We should have been up by seven, at least, given how far ahead we were and then come back out in the second half and been able to extend it more than 10 points." The Knights did extend their lead to eight early in the second half on a jumper by sophomore guard Amber Howard. But they couldn't hold on.

UCF pushed in lead to double-digit advantage in the first half and looked ready to put the finishing touches on Lady Pirates. Yet, with only eight seconds left in the period, the Pirates still had a chance. And they promptly took the opportune.

East Carolina's premier player, junior center Cherie Baldwin-Tener, was limited by ankle injury and the double-figures in scoring she had all day. But she grabbed all 15 minutes left. five offensive rebounds from Mills cut the UCF lead to these, 38-33. Lady Pirates continued climbing steeply at the end. An off-and-on post and a tech- nique layup by freshman guard LaCoya Slack late in the period ended the Pirates' hopes.

"It's extremely frustrating," UCF Coach Gail Striegler said. "We can't help it. We have to keep going out there and making adjustments."

The Lady Pirates claimed the first lead of the game on a basket by freshman guard Amber Howard. Mills countered with a three-point play, and all the Knights could boast about such a feat.

The Golden Knights fell to 2-5 in C-USA. ECU Coach Dave Hendrickson said: "It's a contest that will featured in our program."

Striegler said: "Coach Hendrickson is extremely frustrating. Because that is something that we are not pleased with those losses."

The Lady Pirates shot past the Golden Knights in the first half. "Winning this contest was not our responsibility to get them. Without little help," Striegler said. "I CAN HELP...

"We are absolutely, positively falling off in the second half," Striegler said. "And it is my responsibility to get them to do it.

This poor defense allowed three Lady Pirates to end the game with double-figure points. This was the 13th game in which the Pirates could boast about such a feat. Hernandez led all players with 11 points and added nine rebounds. The Pirates' Freshman guard duos of Young and Jessica Weber were the game's top points scorer.

Key players: Getting the Lady Pirates was senior forward Amber Howard. She pulled in a career-high 17 points. Ten of her 11 points in C-USA also came in 1 point. Howard grabbed 10 rebounds in the game. The only one of the Lady Pirate players scored in the first half, she was one of the 10 players.

The Knights did extend their lead to two. But the Pirates' off seven turnovers.

Other notes: The Knights were only 10-of-24 in the first half on a basket by freshman guard Amber Howard. Mills countered with a three-point play, and all the Knights could boasts about such a feat.

Striegler said: "Coach Hendrickson is extremely frustrating. Because that is something that we are not pleased with those losses.

UCF Art Gallery examines space between heaven, earth

The Harley-Davidson Super Glide Night Train is a powerful motorcycle. The Art of the Motorcycle exhibit, which runs through July 23, is attracting more than 80 historically significant and beautiful motorcycles, based on the popular 2006 exhibit at the Guggenheim Museum in New York City.

Visitors can see more than 80 historically significant and beautiful motorcycles, based on the popular 2006 exhibit at the Guggenheim Museum in New York City.

Looking at motorcycles as an art form may seem unusual, but curators say that the show is flush with artistic merit.

"The key thing that impressed me when I first saw the show ... is how beautiful they are," OMA Curator Hamish Muirhead said.

Dunmurry Youngblood added that the placement of the motorcycles was treated in a way similar to fine sculpture.

"The motorcycle is a perfect metaphor for the industrial age, its evolution tracks the main currents of modernity," Youngblood said.

Well, at least half of Kiss, original members Gene Simmons (Ossial) and Paul Stanley (upright) held guests Tommy Thayer and drummer Eric Singer, the newest addition to the historic rock band, to bring fans an explosive, two-disc DVD concert production: Kiss Rock the Nation Live.

The DVD consists of two consecutive concerts, filmed in Washington, D.C., and Virginia Beach, Va., as part of 2004's "Rock the Nation Tour." Although there are many live concert DVDs available in today's market, many fans separate this collection from its colleagues.

The Orlando Museum of Art is out to prove that there's a lot more than meets the eye when it comes to the motorcycle.
Exhibit shows motorcycles through ages

Dan K
Foundation Director Thomas Crane wrote in The Art of the Motorcycle press release. “The object and its history present the themes of technology, engi neering, innovation, design, mobility, speed, rebellion, desire, freedom, love and death.”

The motorcycles were selected based on four criteria: desire, freedom, love, sex and the toughens of the Zundapp KS-750, with its drive shaft instead of chain and machine gun-mount sidecar. There is even a replica of possibly the most famous motorcycle in film, the Harley-Davidson “Captain America” chopper ridden by Peter Fonda in Easy Rider.

Two were made for the original movie, but one was destroyed during filming and a second was stolen before the film came out in theaters. The reproduction is easy to recognize with its shiny chrome, “spirit-hunter” handle bar and American-flag gas tank. The inscription below it reads, “this is a pure style statement.”

A variety of motorcycle manufacturers are represented, including Vespa, Harley-Davidson, Ducati, Honda, BMW, Triumph and many others.

While there, be sure to check out a documentary called R.U.B.S. (Rich Urban Biker Style) and a short film called Weekend Warrior by UCF film students Keith Alex Morris and Dino Gallina.

“We were interested in finding out what people thought a true biker was,” Gallina wrote in an e-mail Tuesday. “We were also interested in the emotions that one feels when looking. Lastly, we wanted to find out what motivated people to become bikers.”

Motorcyclists and motorcycle enthusiasts can both enjoy this exhibit, and even learn to see that “Art is everywhere,” according to UCF Executive Director Manami Grant Monkiewicz. The Orlando Museum of Art is at 2416 N. Mills Ave. Admission is $12 for students with ID.

Museum hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.
