Senate bill aims to beef up interest for biannual Meet the Dean event

Colleges will combine to accommodate increasing attendance at weeklong series

Tiffany Deck

This March, students will get a chance to learn about their college clubs, meet the dean of their college and talk to their student senators while enjoying free food at a Student Government Association-sponsored event called Meet the Dean. This week, the Senate votes on the bill to provide food for the event.

Meet the Dean is a meeting that takes place every semester in each college, but it is usually only a closed session between student senators and the dean of the college to talk about what needs improvement. One new change this semester is that clubs will be invited to the closed session to add their input.

Also new to this semester, each closed session is going to be followed by an event for students that will take place in the atrium of their college building. Students will be able to meet their dean and the student senators who represent their college while also getting to learn about clubs and organizations that will have display tables set up. Free food will be set out for students.

The six events are to place March 16. Because of size, a few of the colleges are going to combine for some events.

Rebecca Crosby has recently brought the title of Miss Florida Wheelchair to UCF, a school already known for its beauty queens.

Crosby, a 35-year-old graduate student earning her master's degree in social work, is a passionate advocate for the disabled, and she is using her title of Miss Florida Wheelchair to bring attention to the cause.

Crosby's platform seeks "access to open minds" among the average citizen and those with disabilities.

"We're not really as different," Crosby said.

While the contestants may be no different than the average citizen, the pageant itself offers a unique alternative to the stereotypical evening of gowns and ball gowns.

One of the primary differences cited by Crosby is that the pageant takes place in an informal setting.

There is not much separation among the contestants and the judges," Crosby said.

This year, the pageant took place over two days, with five contestants being observed by the judges at a series of workshops. "There were three judging sessions before the actual on-stage pageant, as well as some workshops," Crosby said.

Miss Florida Wheelchair no pageant grade

The Miss Florida Wheelchair pageant lasts two days, with the contestants being observed by five judges in an informal setting. There are three judging sessions before the on-stage performances.

So, the contestants create a short speech and answer two questions, one a general question and the other is about disability advocacy.

With the good support we've had, there's never anything to really worry about," Crosby said.

According to Tanya O'Shake, Dance Marathon director, Crosby was chosen because she "lives to play up a crowd." According to the 2012 dates will be auctioned off at the event. The date range from restaurant gift cards to individual services, such as dinner cooked by the participant. Other dates include a skydiving trip, Disney theme park tickets, Universal theme park tickets, tickets to see an Atlanta Braves spring training game and tickets to see one UCF football game.

"I'm very excited to be hosting our event Monday night," Epstein said via e-mail. "I just hope people come out, have fun and help out a great cause."

"I'm very excited to be hosting our event Monday night," Epstein said via e-mail. "I just hope people come out, have fun and help out a great cause."

The issue arose when The Florida International University 7:45 p.m. on Sept. 15 for creating an online Facebook group titled "Victor: free to UCF students with several other awards, for his campaign finance reform."

"I'm very excited to be hosting our event Monday night," Epstein said via e-mail. "I just hope people come out, have fun and help out a great cause."

Thanks to Dance Marathon, some lucky UCF students won't be lonely this Valentine's Day. UCF students will be auctioned off at Dance Marathon's 2nd annual Date Auction at 7 p.m. today. The event will be held in the student union and all money raised at the auction will go to Greater Orlando Children's Miracle Network and UCF Dance Marathon.

The bidding war will begin when each individual steps onto the stage to be introduced by the night's host, Brad Epstein, Dance Marathon corporate relations director. Epstein will read some entertaining facts about the person being sold off, talk about what the participant's date will consist of and then the date will go to the highest bidder.

McCain returns to UCF for Freedom Forum town hall

Students look forward to hearing from pair of Republican senators at the Union

Tiffany Beck

Today at 11 a.m., Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., will be at UCF to speak at an event called the Freedom Forum town hall meeting in the Cape Florida Ballroom located in the Student Union. Sen. Mel Martinez, D-Fla., who organized the event, will introduce McCain. It is open to the public and will last about an hour.

The event is hosted by UCF and Student Government Association. Martinez left Cuba when he was 35 years old through Operation Peter Pan. The operation helped him and more than 4,000 other children flee communist Cuba between the years of 1990 and 1992.

His Freedom Forum event coincides with the 50th anniversary of his arrival in the U.S.

McKean, the keynote speaker at today's event, has been a senator since 1986, like a Vietnam veteran who spent almost six years as a prisoner of war in Hanoi. He was approved the Purple Heart, along with several other awards, for his military service.

He is humbly unsuccessful for the Republican nomination for president in 2000. He is nonetheless called a "maverick" senator for his willingness to vote differently from his party and is well known for his strong stance on the issue of campaign finance reform.

"It seems like a great opportunity to see someone famous," UCF political science associate professor Sean Lavin said.

Muslims protest Muhammad cartoons

In Denmark, the cartoon depicting Mohammed, published in the weekly Jyllands- Posten, was broadcast on television and the internet.

In the Islamic world, the cartoon sparked widespread condemnation and a wave of violence. The cartoon, which depicted Mohammed as a terrorist or a devil, was seen as an insult to Muslims, who regard Mohammed as the prophet of Islam.

In Pakistan, the government banned the cartoon and ordered schools to remove any material that could be interpreted as offensive to Muslims. In some areas, protests turned violent, withIDEA ABADALLA

DID YOU KNOW...?

- The US with 5% of the world’s population consumes 45% of the gasoline produced on earth
- By 2040, the number of cars in the world is estimated to quadruple to 3.2 billion from 800 million today
- Overall US automotive fuel efficiency has fallen 8% since 1988
- Known oil production and reserves will barely meet world-wide demand through the year 2030
- Over $220 billion dollars per year is spent purchasing foreign oil, with $40 billion going to Saudi Arabia alone

As educated consumers and voters, we have the power to effect change one purchase, one vote at a time. Before you buy that next car, truck, van or SUV consider the long-term impacts. We can make a considerable dent in our consumption and dependency by buying more fuel efficient vehicles, starting today. Next, demand that our elected officials know the importance of this issue. It’s time to declare our nation’s second independence and make Middle East oil strategically irrelevant.

Embracing Indian cultures

Marisa Gregory

With the help of other multicultural clubs on campus, the Indian Student Association presented an International Evening last Friday. The night consisted of music and dancing from a few different cultures, as well as a chance to try different foods.

Chhendi Khatri, president of the Indian Students Association, said that the night gave everyone an opportunity to see a part of themselves in each other. "When you spend time with people from another culture, you realize that you’re more alike than you think, but also at the same time, you have so many unique differences," Khatri said. "I think we take it for granted that we have so many differences. Sometimes people prefer to stay with people similar to them, but honestly, when you actually get to know someone, you really value those differences. It’s nice to step into someone else’s shoes sometimes."

"Their culture is really friendly and it seems very social-oriented, like dancing and having fun together," Amy Conner said of the night. "My friend is Indian. He tells me that it’s a big deal for friends to all get together. Everyone eats together and socializes. I think it’s really cool!"

Josh Money had his focus on the dance. "I enjoyed the music tonight as much as I would have enjoyed listening to my own CD collection," Money said. "My favorite act tonight was the young Indian girl. She was so young but could probably have easily fought a young Michael Jackson!"

Seven-year-old Vidisha Reddy seemed to win a lot of hearts that night. In a gold-studded outfit, she performed a traditional form of Indian dance called Wasti. "It was fun," Reddy said, "if you’ve got a gift, you should use it."

To some of the audience members, the night hit a place called home. "I’m from Pakistan, so the night felt very real to me," Jenalid Hakem said. "The smell of the food brought back some memories. Everyone was dressed really nice, and it seemed like everyone was having a good time."

Khatri said the main goal for the night was to reach out and show people how much everyone has in common. According to Money, that goal was met. "It was an incredible opportunity to see music and culture from all over the world, but especially India," he said. "Sometimes when we think of other cultures that are different from our own, we tend to view them as different or strange because we consider ours normal. If you take a step back and look at the larger picture, how do you define something as weird or strange? I think tonight gave everyone an opportunity to experience the music and dance of other cultures, two art forms that tend to be understood universally."

FEELING THE BURN

With Rose injured, UCF puts up solid performance against Blazers, but falls 75-68 to the second-best team in Conference USA

ANDY VASQUEZ

It has been said that there are no moral victories in the world of sports. That may be true, but it’s hard to imagine that the UCF men’s basketball team against nothing future starfire during UF’s 75-68 loss to the Blazers Saturday afternoon. It was UF’s second game of the season and it was defeated by a healthy score of 75-68 to the second-best team in Conference USA.

Playing without arguably their best player — senior guard Justin Rose, who was out with a shoulder injury — the Knights took on the second-best team in Conference USA, but they couldn’t overcome UAB’s hot shooting.

With Rose injured, the Knights had no choice but to dig deep and replace him with senior guard Justin Fife. Fife had a solid performance, scoring 12 points and making three three-pointers in the first five minutes.

On paper, the Knights were favored to win the game, but they couldn’t come through.

After an embarrassing 32-point loss to UAB earlier in the season, the Knights had to come out of the gates hot, making eight of 13 three-pointers in the first half.

However, the Knights faltered in the second half, suffering a seven-point deficit at the half.

UCF coach Mike Hopkins said that the Knights were able to make adjustments in the second half, but they couldn’t overcome the deficit.

“After a few seconds of silence, O’Donnell opens up, “Let’s do it again.” “Someone has to make it happen,” Hopkins said.

Despite a few more要想在attend dance, O’Donnell and his teammates moved on toward another set of doors.

It’s a little embarrassing,” O’Donnell said, about the experience. “But sometimes you just have to find a way, we would play.

For UCF point guard O’Donnell, hard work on and off the court is part of the sacrifice he makes to be an athlete

CRYSTAL ESPINOSA

Mike O’Donnell, starting point guard for the UCF men’s basketball team, had a long day. He had been up for more than 12 hours, and after a draining day of practice and travel, he had to fly to New Orleans.

Standing among some of his towering teammates, O’Donnell said, “It was an embarrassing loss.”

But the Knights didn’t let the loss get to them. They came out of the gates hot, making eight of 13 three-pointers in the first half.

“I think it’s the best game he’s played in his career,” UCF coach Karch Kiraly said. “He was on fire.”

O’Donnell made some big shoes to fill when he was named the starter.

“Without Justin, it’s hard to imagine that the team could do it,” O’Donnell said. “But the team is capable of making it happen.”

UCF put up a good fight, but they couldn’t overcome UAB’s hot shooting.

“The team is capable of making it happen,” O’Donnell said. “But the team is capable of making it happen.”

UCF coach Mike Hopkins said that the Knights were able to make adjustments in the second half, but they couldn’t overcome the deficit.

“After a few seconds of silence, O’Donnell opens up, “Let’s do it again.” “Someone has to make it happen,” Hopkins said.

Despite a few more attempts to dance, O’Donnell and his teammates moved on toward another set of doors.

It’s a little embarrassing,” O’Donnell said, about the experience. “But sometimes you just have to find a way, we would play.

For UCF point guard O’Donnell, hard work on and off the court is part of the sacrifice he makes to be an athlete

Mike O’Donnell, starting point guard for the UCF men’s basketball team, had a long day. He had been up for more than 12 hours, and after a draining day of practice and travel, he had to fly to New Orleans.

Standing among some of his towering teammates, O’Donnell said, “It was an embarrassing loss.”

But the Knights didn’t let the loss get to them. They came out of the gates hot, making eight of 13 three-pointers in the first half.

Points in paint allow UAB to win

In a closer-than-expected game, the Blazers did a better job of handling the ball when it was turned over, finishing with 17 turnovers to UAB’s 21. But the Blazers still couldn’t overtake the Owls, as they made only five-of-17 3-pointers, finishing with 17 points from beyond the arc.

The Knights are 5-16, 3-7 in Conference USA.

Seniors forward Anthony Williams and guard Josh Williams scored in the lane to tie the game, before UAB came out on top. The Blazers’ 3-pointer put them ahead by 31 points, but only three of his points came after halftime. Oklahoma had 53 points, with 19 of them coming from 3-pointers or fewer than 70 percent.

The Owls, who are coming off a loss to Memphis on Saturday, hit just 50 percent from the field, the second fewest in a game this season. They still led offensively, and we weren’t as much a high-scoring team and their defense. After finishing at 54 percent from the field, the Owls shot 54.2 percent from the field and had a 45-35 rebounding advantage that was even larger than the final margin.

The Owls had a season-high 34 rebounds in the first half, but 12 of them came from Kevin Henderson and Isaiah Redick, who added 26 and 23 points, respectively. UAB’s defense limited the Owls to 2-of-14 from 3-point range.

The defense for Houston UAB is the most dominant in the country. The Blazers’ 17 turnovers came from 3-pointers, and 3-7 in Conference USA.

The Blazers are trying to end the season on a high note. The Owls’ 88-ADMIT-IT.

The Owls are currently looking for a win, with only four UCF games left this season. They are coming off a loss to Memphis on Saturday, when they made just 6-of-14 3-pointers, finishing with 17 points from beyond the arc.

MIKE DONNELL
WORTHY BASKETBALL PLAYER

2001, O’Donnell faced a new cycle. He had to find a way to wake up on time for practice and get to the gym, all while managing his studies. It was a constant cycle of screaming at you and challenging you from the time you wake up to the time you go to bed. It was tough, but he learned to make it work.

“Being a student athlete is all about sacrifice. It’s about what you’ll give up to get something better.”

— MIKE DONNELL, WORTHY BASKETBALL PLAYER

O’Donnell has weights at 5:45 a.m. and practices as late as possible, O’Donnell is forced to schedule his classes during his free periods and have heat packs placed on his legs. Despite the sacrifice and pain, O’Donnell is already a success at a Division I school.

“Being a student athlete is all about sacrifice. It’s about what you’ll give up to get something better. There’s always going to be another party, but there will never be another game against the University of Florida.”

— MIKE DONNELL, WORTHY BASKETBALL PLAYER

On the day after a game, O’Donnell would stretch for miles and have heat packs placed on his legs. He would then take a nap and have heat packs placed on his legs again. O’Donnell is working on his time management skills.

“The thud heard around the country in the post-game press conference was first created at age 11. O’Donnell’s number and face are imprinted on it. When he comes back in, it’s like a spark of much excitement. And O’Donnell, said. "I’ve had some teachers who have told me that I shouldn’t have the test." But when we talk about sacrifice, we have to realize that we have to make sacrifices. We have to give up something."

In the days following his State of the Union address, President George W. Bush has announced that his administration sees the nation’s debt problem as more than $10 billion for additional support towards the war in Iraq.

In discussing Bush’s plan, Sen. George W. Bush and the National Security Council has stepped up their efforts to fund Bush’s $1 trillion war in Iraq. Despite the Bush administration’s efforts, the debate on war funding has been a contentious issue.

George W. Bush has said in a post-State of the Union address that the nation’s alarming deficit is due to the Bush administration’s need to increase the national debt, and to lessen the country’s dependency on foreign energy resources.

The minimum legal definition of probable cause is that the evidence presented to the courts be such that it would likely lead a reasonable person to believe that the suspect committed the crime.

"This means that one-sixth of the nation’s retired are about to hit a major milestone on Social Security Administration have disclosed on our home soil should not be left to chance. Instead, Bush and Congress continue to pump money into a war that simply shouldn’t be continued.

But it’s not, this money is needed to fund Bush’s efforts to save the U.S. military and to continue the war in Iraq. However, experts have warned of the potential for significant additional support towards the $1 trillion war in Iraq.

In other words, most of Bush’s support for the war has been based on false leads. This has made it difficult for citizens to support the war.

However, according to the Bush’s report, domestic spying is “unnecessary,” and “money that should already be spent elsewhere.”

Jenkins’ mother says thanks

Many days and a few months have passed since Sept. 24, 2001, when my son, Officer Mark Jenkins, was killed. My heart is left standing to feel as the numbers is going away a little bit at a time. I am now reading the newspaper articles written about the incident. I want to thank you for the comments on how he helped the students.

Mario was very proud of being an officer of the law, and helping students out when they consisted too much alcohol was on top of his list. I remember his father telling me not to be a hawksbill, and Mark responded, “I am not bad. Help me in as much as I can, but you have to remember still have to follow the law” as he was doing that day at the game with volunteers.

One of the articles said that he was trying to stop a fight, and somehow he was surrounded with students screaming and throwing love cans at him, etc.

Did they know he was a policeman and represented some kind of authority? I believe so, because he said “Please, I am a cop, end of course, things didn’t go well for him, and we know what his disbar was, I do want to add to you, the noise involved in the melee, to remember for the coming football season to be a more responsible student, and don’t drink so much that your actions will be the beginning of an end of the human life. I hope our experiences will teach us all to raise our standards.

What happened to the John Cusack who was a role model for us all?

One of the many benefits of being a campus paper is that many people would agree, in good old distant days, a campus-offered movie channel that aired some of the latest Hollywood movies.

As a seasoned insomniac, I like to take advantage of this channel to catch up on movies that I would never spend a penny on in theaters. In the past week, I’ve been able to rewatch The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo and The Hangover. The films are about the many things I would have done to avoid spending that time.

The Saturday night, I caught an entirely different nighttime of a movie that left me genuinely surprised at what happened to my favorite actor of all time. I know I was surprised because I was too fine to much for my money. I was surprised because I have already intrinsically etched every Gina, Girl, Will Forte, and I ended up choosing to watch John Cusack’s latest Love Dogs.

Cusack’s characters have always been the perfect example of the lovable loser, the underdog where people fell for and cheered for when they got the girl in the end. As I was tearing my eyes out of my face, though, I couldn’t help but ask myself why such a great actor would want to continue making such dwarf piddle. Was the pool of cinematic good, completely dry when he was offered this script? Did he have a great thread of actors doing “safe” roles before, but nothing really grabbed his attention to this chick flick for piddle.

Cusack’s portfolio is laden with fantastic characters like Remy Ochlockonee and One Crazy Summer, and anyone who can’t recognize the importance of the sci-fi genre in any Anything Else is not emotionally cold. I’ll accept that every actor does have bad hours or there. But I gave Cusack my respect after he made the choice to play the completely ridiculous High School Musical. Love Don’t Cost a Thing came out of left field and hit me like an angry ground-proclaimed ladies’ man, Tucker Max. For those of you not familiar with his work, you can catch up on his interesting blogs and other fun tales on http://www.tuckermax.com.

When you’re done reading up on him, please feel free to keep telling me how offensive I am. I am, and here is the New York Times’ best-selling author.

Buffy and Leona Lewis have ended their relationship, much like I think most things in real life. After being involved in a dud here or there. But I can’t help but absorb my mind-numbingly terrible Horrible Bosses, unlike the typical getting higher than a space shuttle and playing the bongos naked—every man has that right.

Don’t get me wrong, one of my greatest views is the chick flick. I love Streepsville. It’s done of my favorite movies. Sometimes I like to step in on the DVD player and engulf myself in a bucket of Haagen-Daz and pray for Kate Beckinsale to find that glow.

All I’m saying is that great acts like Cusack, who define what every real-life lovable loser wants to be, need to stick to the tactics, unless it involves getting higher than a space shuttle and playing the bongos naked—every man has that right.

But here’s what’s really baffling to me about this year’s Super Bowl. Why is it necessary for ESPN to provide on-hour of pregame coverage?

Honestly, in the first hour alone, I watched Ron Jaworski re-enact plays with Jimmy Smith. Larry Johnson and Richard Seymour by the way, the comment in fashion sense between Smith and Johnson was staggering, almost to the point that I hope to wonder if ESPN paid a pulp to Johnson by not telling him to dress up.

The rest of the hour was, seriously, not even, disconcerting, eating habits of players growing up to game day. I found it hard to leave that players like to eat as much as possible for breakfast that morning.

Of all, by all means feel free to let me know what kind of in-print 2014 Super Bowl you hope and whether or not Matt Handel would care if people are staring at him bald spot.

Next you have all about just stick to the game!

Prepare Yourself For a Future in Podiatric Medicine

If you’re planning a career in medicine, consider the field of podiatry. You could manage your own podiatric practice, work in a hospital or clinic, or attend an athletic team. As a podiatric physician, you diagnose, treat, and prevent disorders and injuries to the foot and ankle.

One of the two podiatry programs in the nation affiliated with a comprehensive university, Barry University’s program in podiatric medicine offers you extensive research facilities, distinguished hospital and medical center affiliations, and excellent opportunities for residency programs and externships across the United States.

As a student at Barry University, you join a caring, Catholic community on a graceful, green campus in Miami Shores, Florida.

Find out about Barry University. Visit us at www.barry.edu/podiatry
