UCF Wakeboarding Club given $3,300 to send members to three competitions

By STAFF WRITER

Considered to be the No. 1 wakeboarding team on the national circuit, the UCF Wake­ boarding Club is currently in the process of raising funds to send some of itsÐmembers to the national competition. Although the team typically competes against other collegiate teams, this event will be held at the World Wakeboarding Championship and recognized by the College Wakeboarders of America (CWA).

At the national competition, the UCF team will be competing individually against other teams. The competition is a weeklong event, which is held at the World Wakeboarding Championship in Key West, Florida.

The event will begin on November 1st and will end on November 6th. The competition will consist of six events: slalom, U-turn, superman, and two team events: hot boot and 360.

The team will be looking for donations from the UCF community in order to raise the necessary funds for travel and competition expenses. The team has set a goal of raising $3,300, and any contributions will be greatly appreciated.

Located in the Student Union, the UCF Wakeboarding Club meets weekly to practice and train for upcoming competitions. The club is open to any student who is interested in the sport of wakeboarding.

The club fundraises by hosting events such as the annual Wake-Crazy Night, where attendees can enjoy food, games, and Live music. They also participate in fund-raising events hosted by other clubs on campus.

The club’s main sponsor is the UCF Recreation and Wellness Center, which provides funding and support for the team. The members are also committed to raising funds through personal sponsorships and various fundraising events.

The team’s success is a result of the hard work and dedication of its members. They train tirelessly to improve their skills and compete at the highest level.

The UCF Wakeboarding Club is proud to represent UCF at the national competition and hopes to bring home the title of national champions.

If you would like to support the UCF Wakeboarding Club, please contact the club president at 407-823-5491.

Volunteer UCF hosts tournament for Darfur awareness

MELISSA ARDOIA
Assistant Editor

Volunteer UCF hosted a 3-on-3 basketball tournament raising over $800 in proceeds benefiting Victim of the Niger Famine as well as Darfur Awareness Week. The tournament was held on Feb. 11 at the Recreation and Wellness Center's Academic Village basketball courts and was an all-day event. The winning team was Larry Toby, made up of Marc Theodore, Jefferson Arita, Marc Holmes and Frank Pachero.

The money raised today will go toward purchasing materials for Darfur Awareness Week and a humanitarian agency to help the victims said Amer Zufari, Volunteer UCF's director of Hunger and Homelessness. "As of right now, we are their only hope. Their lives depend on what is being sent to them from other places."

According to U.N. estimates, 110,000 people have died in the conflict in Darfur and 18 million people have been displaced. In Niger, nearly 35 million people are facing famine conditions.

"We hoped more students would come to support such a worthy cause," Zufari said. "But we are thankful for those that came out and made a difference to a victim.

UCF students created their own teams and paid an entrance fee of $10 per player. I hope that the little money that I helped raise will make a difference to a victim of the Niger famine and raise more awareness around the UCF campus in regards to Darfur Awareness Week."

UCF's Student Government Association Student Body president, Matt De Vlieger invited New Flyer to demonstrate alternative-fuel technology. His president De Vlieger invited New Flyer to demonstrate alternative-fuel technology. His president

Because it is still very rare that humans get infected from the avian influenza, there is almost no immediate protection for humans. The HSI virus is resistant to amantadine and rimantadine, two anti-influenza medications commonly used for influenza. However, other medications would probably work to treat avian flu.

There is no commercially available vaccine to protect humans against H5N1 virus that exists in Asia and Europe. Research studies are under way.

Winner dreams of Broadway shows

Career in electrical engineering, possibly helping to construct lights for Broadway shows, is Jennifer Clementi’s favorite dream. She said she plans to perform for various events in the state to perform for veterans and to help the judges that I won the crown. For a reason, I need to make a difference as Miss UCF.

Some senior students buy and sell Barbie dolls. Clementi was interested in the projects that have meant the most to her.

Teacher never lacks volunteers; faculty cheers efforts

"It’s really a paradox, isn’t it?" (The young woman) said. "Everything seems to be a victory," she added. "I’ve already seen the light. It has moved from the suspensor to the suspender and challenge."

Furthermore, Clementi observed that the murder mysteries have offended some, nearly all of the students. Korosy’s classes. At time as a dance, Clementi is reflecting on how to fight the projects that have meant the most to her.

Miss UCF 2005, Hartzler is also proud of her academic career in the Honors College, due to the projects that have meant the most to her.

Hitt, Hickey defend decision to appoint Hernandez dean

Former Associate Dean Jose Hernandez, however, was given a five-year appointment in 2002 as an dean of CAH without faculty input or evaluation. When the faculty heard the news, said an associate professor of philosophy, they "were surprised."
Hitt and Hickey defended Hernandez's appointment, although unusual circumstances called for unusual action.

"This was never about qualifications," said Bradley Pitman, an associate professor and a former chair of the philosophy department. "This is about a collegial process where faculty have a voice in their leadership.

When the College of Sciences emerged from the split of Arts and Sciences, Peter Panouillac, who had headed UCF's Institute for Economic Competitiveness, was named interim dean during the nationwide search for Seidel's successor, who may not even be in place by the 2006-07 academic year.

"I do not understand why circumstances were different in Arts and Humanities than in Sciences," Pitman said.

Hitt, however, liked the idea of having someone with close business experience.

"There have been a lot of questions and concerns," Seidel said. "I think the concept of a business dean would help with the finances."

Gomes brings international flavor to UCF women's team

Transfer forward has taken a long road to get to UCF

BRIAN HUSSEY / Staff

Basketball was born in the U.S., but every level of the game has a foreign influence.

Foreign players made up 13 percent of the NCAA 2006-07 opening-day rosters. According to the NCAA, 452 foreign players have appeared on Division I men's basketball teams this season, but leagues around the world have also taken notice.

Most recently, there is the case of Baylor University's senior forward, Sophia Young. Coming from the tiny island nation of the Grenadines, Young was made up of foreign blood, which she was able to MVP in last season's Final Four.

And now, for the first time in her college career, the UCF women's basketball team has a piece of the international game in junior forward Juliana Gomes.

A native of Sao Paulo, Brazil, where soccer is life, Gomes started playing basketball at the age of 12. It didn't start out as a love of the game but because of an innate passion to play basketball.

"From my friends," Gomes said, "everybody started playing basketball, and I was like, Oh, let's try it.

As her enjoyment for basketball grew, so did her skills.

At a senior in high school, Gomes demonstrated her ability to play as she averaged 34 points, 10 rebounds and six assists a game. Her contributions helped lead that team to a 37-6 record and a championship.

At the age of 18, Gomes was recruited by the very small school of Eastern Oklahoma State College.

"I was told for the first time to come to the United States to have a different experience," Gomes said, "and then I also wanted to help my family." In sports, there are tons of stories that follow the soap-opera riches script: A player comes to the U.S. for the promise of a country, leaving behind a rough upbringing and looking to help pave the way for their path.

But that was not the case for Gomes. Although she, like a construction worker, was the last source of revenue in support Gomes, her brother Heluah and their neighbors she has no gripes about her family, friends, the Guilherme family, especially her parents.

"People from really perfect family," she said.

"Although the know that I would have to leave her perfect family in Sao Paulo, Gomes accepted the opportunity to come to the U.S. and play ball in the Great Plains.

In her two seasons in Oklahoma, Gomes posted more solid numbers by averaging 11 points and five rebounds per game.

And now, for the first time in her college career, the UCF women's basketball team has a piece of the international game in junior forward Juliana Gomes.

Gomes' arrival also contributed to the void in the Knights' front court.

"Forward Shelby Weber. Yet," Striegler said. "It's hard to really want to go back when she was officially recruited to come to UCF. Gomes decided to take the step up to the D-1 program. She left a school with 2000 students, in case she scored 4500. Yet her butt was kicked and she would keep her from seeing her family once again.

"The summer time, it is time to go home," Gomes said.

"I want to my junior college and then I didn't have any time to go back to Brazil and come to the University of Oklahoma and win things, so I didn't have time to go back.

Also, with so many schools competing for the services of the best the world has to offer, finding that game-changing player outside of the U.S. has become more difficult than ever.

'Some people have to go to another country to talk to and persuade that player to play for their school. The higher cost of an overseas plane ticket might be hard to square in a tight recruiting budget.'

And now, the Knights are pleased with Gomes. Although her statistics are modest (she is averaging 4.4 points and 3.7 rebounds through 21 games this season), Striegler is pleased with how Gomes is playing the game in her first year with the Knights.

"She is really not a typical player," Striegler said. "The typical foreign player really doesn't like to be physical very much, and Juliana can be more physical."

"I think that I have goteen a lot better with Coach Gail because she teaches me better, she really does."

"I have been a lot more comfortable with her, because she really helps me up and not worried about anything."

"I think that I can do more better, but I know I am getting better," Gomes said.

Gomes' best statistical game came on Nov. 28 in just her fifth game at this higher level. In a losing effort versus Santa Clara, Gomes recorded a double-double with 11 points and 10 rebounds.

Next season, there will be a void in the Knights' front court with the graduation of forward Shelby Weber. Yet, the Knights are hopeful that Weber's departures will lead to Gomes' arrival.

'Looking how she is progressing, that looks like a real possibility for 2007. By then, she will have hopefully found the time to visit Sao Paulo.'

Coach Golightly led a few strides on her heels, and the team seemed to be playing with a nothing-to-lose attitude.

That all changed with about nine minutes remaining when the Knights could not hang onto their lead back to back on a couple of occasions through solid defense and scoring from six to seven points.

The Knights who played registered 37 points a game.

The Knights were able to keep Dodds from getting into a rhythm. They also held her scoreless on several occasions.

To the Knights, giving up seven runs in six innings.

The Knights will be able to get back to UCF for the first half of the season.

The tournament was scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. on Friday, with play to continue until 5 p.m. each day.

Michael Brown now moot point

Micheal Brown, the former head of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee should, in his words, be the "scourge of the human soul." Brown, who resigned in 2006 after an investigation into his handling of Hurricane Katrina, made the comments in a letter to the committee.

"I believe that the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee should be the scourge of the human soul," Brown said. "I understand that you are conducting an investigation into my actions during the 2005 hurricane season, and I believe that it is important for you to conduct a thorough and impartial investigation.

"I am confident that you will find that I acted in good faith and that I did not engage in any misconduct or abuse of authority," Brown said. "I am also confident that you will find that I did not intentionally or recklessly fail to carry out my duties in an effective and efficient manner.

"I am committed to cooperating fully with your investigation," Brown said. "I will provide you with any information that you may request, and I will answer any questions that you may have.

"I believe that the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee should be the scourge of the human soul," Brown said. "I believe that it is important for you to conduct a thorough and impartial investigation, and I am confident that you will find that I acted in good faith and that I did not engage in any misconduct or abuse of authority."
Arguing over media attention wastes precious time, effort.

There are basically a million ways this could be argued. The statistics can be broken down until we reach the smallest percentages, and there are certainly more numbers that the Court TV Web site involves making generalizations about the types of people who watch the show and the general nature there is no doubt that Jenn's disappearance is something we all want to believe them or even process.

The greatest facts of Jenn's disappearance is that it's surprising and there are too many people affected by it. I called into the radio show and reminded everyone that Jenn has more friends than anyone could ever pray for in their lives. Unfortunately, while 800,000 juveniles and 15,000 adults disappear each year, many don't have the friends and family that Jenn has. I wish it weren't true, but it is.

The reason people are putting fliers all around Orlando is that Jenn is an amazing person. She has always had an awesome impact on the people around her. I have plenty of stories about her through-out all of the years we have been friends, and not a single story shies a bad light on her.

She isn't statistic to her friends, and those who are closely involved with the case would certainly agree that they won't give up until they see her back to us.

My fondest memory of Jenn is when she was a freshman and I had remained close friends with her and her friends through-out the years. Everyone has felt this way, but they never believe that anything that a disappearance could ever occur.

People in front of you always joke about groupies. There are always women in sororities who hang out with a certain fraternity more than any other. They always hang out with my fraternity. She wasn't one of the groupies, she was a sister to all of us who lived in the house.

I don't know if all of those groupies are dealing with what I am right now. I barely talk to any of the roommates anymore. What do I know is that I've had many nights with pierced girls, and all I'm looking for is one more nameless conversation about Jenn.

My fondest memory of Jenn was one night we spent just talking and shooting the breeze until 5 a.m. We were watching movies in my room at my fraternity house and she listened to me complain about every girl problem I was having, which was mainly one involving one of her sisters.

At one point, Jenn told me that she wished I were her big brother. For anyone unfamiliar with Greek Life and girls take "guards" and "little" as a route of guiding each other through social and aca-demic situations.

I would have taken Jenn as my little sister, but I was already surrounded for having a few too many sisters. I had seven little sisters as of that night, and we decided it was for the best that we just be good friends.

Well, I take my good friend, I miss this woman who would make fun of me for being so uptight when one of my "big" sisters started dur­ing one of my brothers. I miss the woman who would slap me because I spilled a drink on her during a social at Jane's Mac's. But I pray that she'll stop me one more time. I pray every day that she comes back to us. I pray that I never see her mother crying on the news again. I pray that I never see her father begging for help on the morning news. I pray that I never see the police asking for information on sub­stan­ce over again.

More than anything, I pray for the person who caused this convulsion to be responsible for this travesty.

I wish her or she would just come forward and take the punishment that he or she deserves. I know I'm asking too much, but this convulsion deserves to be stored in pub­lic.

Supporting capital punish­ment might seem immature or offensive, but put yourself in the shoes of Jenn's best friends. Imagining having someone you love taken from you for no reason and then tell me that you're not angry. I'm true. Not a day goes by that I don't cry over what has happened. For retribution. I want the person who made Jenn disap­pear to suffer unpleasing pain because Jenn's friends are dealing with more pain than anyone could ever imagin­e.

In a perfect world, no one should have to worry about their friends going through their daily routines unthreat­ened. We shouldn't have to spend our time wondering who could commit such an atrocious crime to such a good person.

It happens too much, and it happens to the wrong people. If you have one spare day in your week, then please give it to the search for Jenn. Keep our fliers or just keep an eye out.

The police are still looking for a "person of interest" who has been shown on local tele­vision news programs. Who knows whether this person will solve what happened, but my heart is better than giving up all hope. Anything will help in this search.

Thank you to everyone who has given him to the cause. More than 1,400 people volunteered to help search the city and pass out fliers over the past two weeks and that's the perfect example of how many people care about Jenn and what kind of person she is. There has never been more that all of us can do. We can't sit still as a society until we can punish the people he has hurt.

To catch one person who hurt the society of good people like Jenn would be significant to the number of cases, because it would allow an entire community to be.
