Medical school approval excites students, faculty

Board of Governors voted Thursday to approve school, 15-1

MARY KNOWLES

New Rollin' Around

Make way for the M.D.s—UCF won the right Thursday to create a medical school for Orlando and Central Florida. The university, which has been working to establish a medical school for several years, was one of 116 applicants chosen out of 355 institutions to join the University of California system, according to the Florida Board of Governors.

Richard Crotty called the proposal the first step in the creation of the medical school. "We're not missing any opportunities," the governor said. "We're very excited about the approval." He added that the medical school will provide "education, employment and opportunities in central Florida to provide an academic center of excellence." It will also attract the business community and "will provide an impetus and an incentive to the university to come up with the ideas and the means to make it happen," he said.

The approval was the result of a four-year effort, which included an extensive study by the Florida Board of Governors, the Florida Commission on Higher Education, and the Florida Legislature to expand other state medical schools. The approval was also the result of a recent study conducted by the Florida Board of Governors, which oversees Florida's public and private medical schools. The study was intended to determine whether creating new medical schools would effectively address the states' medical needs.

David Harty, chair of the Board of Governors, said the university was "very pleased" with the approval and that it was "a great day for the university and the community." Harty said the board had "worked very hard" to ensure that the medical school would be "a great asset" to the university and the community.

"We're very excited about the opportunity to create a medical school," Harty said. "We're very pleased that the University of California has chosen us to be one of the institutions to participate in this program." He added that the university would "do everything we can to make this happen." Harty said the university would "continue to work with the University of California and the Florida Board of Governors to ensure that the medical school is successful." He also said the university would "continue to work with the state to ensure that the medical school is successful."

WebCT provides online learning and class interaction, but it also contains many negative aspects that are sometimes overlooked by its users.

"Many students have complained that the server is quickly and clumsily shutting them out of the system," Schutz said. "I even tried directing them to the WebCT people for help, but the help was not provided. The student computer can't even verify, which makes me uncomfortable."

During final examinations last semester, Schutz ran into even more problems with WebCT. He had to score 60 of his student's tests by hand and submit 60 grade changes because the tests were being submitted without the final test answers being saved for these students.

But the worst problem Schutz experienced with WebCT was for the inexcusability of the Web site.

"WebCT is supposed to allow instructors the opportunity to keep the correct answers private," Schutz said. "But it has a built-in loophole which the students discovered, allowing them to put together a key of correct answers which they posted on an off-campus Web site," Schutz said.

As if the quiz answers being exposed weren't enough, Schutz also found out that students were sharing the privileges of the at-home quizes.

"I discovered that some students were taking advantage of the test-yourself-at-home features by actually taking the quizzes at home, using their books and other reference materials, but I have not found a way to do that without opening up the process to abuse," Schutz said.

This was the last straw for Schutz. This semester, he took WebCT completely out of his curriculum and will not go back to using such a site that lacks so much security.

"The success of the test-yourself-at-home feature by actually taking the quizzes at home, using their books and other reference materials, but I have not found a way to do that without opening up the process to abuse," Schutz said.

Along with the technical difficulties that come with the Web site, there are more problems than students realize.

Linguistics professor David Bowes remarked on the layout deficiency of WebCT.

"The actual design of course pages is hypnotic, to say the least, and there are several unnecessary rigidities built into the system regarding things like layout and the relationships between content pages," Bowes said.

Bowes said WebCT is a medium to transfer information to his students rather than a quiz distrubutor. He feels that the testing section of WebCT is inadequate.

"The quiz system is horridly thought-out — I mean, a multiple choice quiz answer separately for it to count?" he said. "I just thought up that particular bit of torture."

Another problem Bowes encountered is WebCT's inability to work with phonetic and metrical trees.

"One thing that's important to note in support for character arts other than the basic characters is limited," he said.

"This causes problems for those like me, who need to describe things using, for example, phonetic, characters or metrical trees."

WebCT also sits in an uncomfortable place with students.

Some say that the processes of saving quiz answers on the Web site can provide nothing but harm.

"When I take WebCT quizzes, I feel like I was wasting my time because the answer-saving method on WebCT makes a 30-minute quiz turn into a 45-minute ordeal," junior Luis Bares said.

"I prefer to be face-to-face with my teacher," she said. "I can deal with WebCT if I have to, but it is definitely not a replacement for classroom learning."

This semester Yuhr has a quiz system that does not fit WebCT as an answer-saving method. Her teacher informed the students that tests and Web assignments would be graded periodically through WebCT.

"I have most about these WebCT tests is that you can't go back and change an answer once you have submitted it," Yuhr said.

"It is unfair to hold me to my first guess. It's not like real testing, where you can change your answer throughout the testing time, so what's the point of not letting you go the Web?"

For teachers, WebCT can be helpful in keeping track of students' grades and making students aware of those grades. It also provides a convenient method for teachers to communicate with the students.

WebCT is supposed to go under a makeover soon. This upgrade should fix its technical problems, making it easier for both teachers and students to use the program.

Conference offered advice to professional women

The spectrum of women who are attending the conference is diverse. Women who are attending the conference are always very friendly and approachable, and they have Gigabyte and always a card with them to pass out. You can always benefit from a conference, it doesn't matter what your age is, you are always getting something out of it.

On Saturday there were various workshops covering topics such as, "How to look so the average person thinks "You are in control" even though you don't learn in engineering school."

UCP associate professor of industrial engineering, Bob McCool-Selden attended the audience to a talk on "Women's Equity Program rules.

There was also a Multicultural and global world session. The conference wrapped up with a General Session of the Orlando Science Center on Saturday afternoon.

"It is something that I am glad to be a part of because if it wasn't for the SWF, I wouldn't have a lot more opportunities in engineering," Androff said.

"There are just so many people that you just relate to, you're going to like the rest of SWF family that we do."

"The festival was designed to be appealing and inviting to everyone, from the biggest and best electronic dance music artists, the time has come to expand the festival's format and continue the growth of the Ultra Music Festival. This year's event included two days of music, with performances by headliners such as The Prodigy, Paul Van Dyk, and The Chemical Brothers. The festival also hosted a variety of electronic dance music artists, including Tiesto, Moby, The Crystal Method, and The Avalanches. The festival concluded with a massive after-party event that featured performances by the biggest names in electronic dance music. Overall, the festival was a huge success, with thousands of people in attendance and a sold-out atmosphere. The festival has continued to grow in popularity each year, and it is one of the largest electronic dance music festivals in the world."
Pre-Quidditch, Segways were Roman chariots

Faculty and staff had a chance to participate in the event during their lunch break.

"I think CAB is a great organization that brings many important cultural events as well as fun to the university," program coordinator in the office of undergraduate studies Mary Price said. "Holding the Segway was a lot of fun, and I think they should do more events like these."

This is the second year that CAB has incorporated Segways into an event.

"The idea came about last year when CAB hosted a March of Rome-themed event," Christodoulou said. "The Segways were used as chariots, and students raced them."

CAB hosts themed events where students are able to win prizes such as DVDs, movie passes, pizza, shirts and T-shirts. "It is a great theme and a lot of fun," SGA Senator Brian Peterson said. "It adds so much more by having students participate and then showing a movie rather than just showing a movie alone."

CAB is made up of 11 committees that plan, coordinate and set up events such as concerts, Open Mic Knights and events at UCF. All CAB events are free to UCF students.

"I think more people should get involved with CAB," Peterson said. "It's a great way to get involved on campus."

Showcase of Undergraduate Research Excellence

Celebrating undergraduate research and creativity across the curriculum.

Thursday, March 30, 2006, 2-5 p.m.
Student Union, Pegasus Ballroom

The third annual Showcase of Undergraduate Research Excellence is a poster- or display-based forum for UCF undergraduates to present current and recently completed research and creative projects to the entire university community.

UCF Undergraduates from all disciplines—from engineering to the life sciences, from visual arts to the humanities—who are or have been enrolled in a significant research and creative projects will present their findings. Questions will be fielded from 2-5 p.m. at the Student Union, Pegasus Ballroom.

Substantial scholarships will be awarded to the best Showcase projects at the 2006 UCF Research Week.

For more information about the Showcase, please call the Office of Undergraduate Studies, 407-823-4107 or visit www.undergraduatestudies.ucf.edu/research/home.html

Showcase projects will be judged according to the following criteria:

Clear focus or central question
The presentation explicitly states what the project accomplished or will accomplish. There is a clear controlling idea, hypothesis, or objective.

Sound methodology
Approach to the project knowledgeably conveys how the project is to be executed or what constitutes "evidence" in the discipline and how it is obtained.

Clear presentation of results/product/performance or expected outcomes
Details about the project are presented in an organized, fresh, and thoughtful manner. Mastery of the subject is evident. The project can be understood by both someone knowledgeable in the field and also by a reasonably informed non-specialist.

Progress on project to date
Project is complete or can be completed in a reasonable amount of time.

Contribution to the field or discussion of potential impact
There is an exploration of the significance or use of the project. Why is the project of interest or worth doing; or of what new knowledge, understanding, or insight will be or was gained.

Athletic Director Steve Orsini leaves UCF for Conference USA rival Southern Methodist

ORSINI BOLTS FOR THE MUSTANGS

Orsini's UCF Legacy

Steve Orsini’s tenure at UCF will go down as one of the most successful in the school's history. Under his leadership, the Knights have become a legitimate powerhouse in the American Athletic Conference, with back-to-back conference championships and multiple NCAA tournament berths.

Orsini's departure to Conference USA will be a significant loss for UCF, as he has been instrumental in building the school's athletic program into a national force. The search for his replacement has already begun, and the university is looking for someone who can carry on the legacy he has established.

GONE FOR 'GREENER PASTURES'

There are plenty of reasons why he could have stayed, but was the real issue money?

The game of life is filled with constant transitions. It's what makes every day so great; you never know what to expect. The only common denominator in life, and especially in the world of sports right now, is that anything can happen at any time.

Athletes, administrators and even franchises are now more than ever, willing to pack up camp and move onto greater pastures. Take a look at your favorite NFL team.

Still, despite the prosperity for change that we currently face in the world of sports, it was a big surprise to see UCF Athletic Director Steve Orsini jump ship Friday night.

Herold's first season in the black and gold has been crowned with inevitable growing pains. Combining in-season coaching changes, Herold had walked 29 batters in 14 innings. He also has in no small part given pitches to go with ERA over 5.00.

After another frustrating night on Tuesday against the Florida Gators, Herold said that he and pitching coach Craig Comer were working on some of the young staff. Barnes has beenérieu the fourth of the year.

It's no new day that an athletic director jumps from one school to another in the same conference -- SMU also is completing the first year in Conference USA -- especially when the school he is jumping to is one much older and much greater. Doesn't get any worse, SMU is a nice school.

Prominent UCF figure serves kids and administration

ZACH MOORE

The man who didn't pitch from over the horizon, floor is flying off the top of the pool and the hamburgers are floating as they burn in the sky. Just as the clock struck 11, both Barnes arrives at the UCF Recreation and Wellness Center for her morning workout and teaching session.

An ultramarathoner, Barnes starts to crew over the horizon, numerous people, walk, their bodies turned into smalls, some in talks and others meeting in an office.

Once she finished her workout, Barnes will make her way to the locker room to check out her drawers for her gym clothes as she will head to the gym for an hour and a half.

Four years ago Barnes started to use a method of swimming, known as total immersion, to help with her training.

In the four years since learning this technique, Barnes has become a creature of habit and has maintained a routine between 100 and 150 students.

Herold earns first career win over UCF

BRIAN MURPHY

The first weekend road trip for Golden Knight baseball this year has had its ups and downs.

On Friday, a costly drop led to a 2-5 loss. The NC State Wolfpack will likely have extra energy on Saturday.

Mitch Herold picked the Knights up on Saturday, defying the odds.

Herold's first season in the black and gold has been crowned with inevitable growing pains. Combining in-season coaching changes, Herold had walked 29 batters in 14 innings. He also has in no small part given pitches to go with ERA over 5.00.

After another frustrating night on Tuesday against the Florida Gators, Herold said that he and pitching coach Craig Comer were working on some of the young staff. Barnes has beenérieu the fourth of the year.

The total immersion technique was used for the first time this season and has been successful for the last four years of his life building, but because of where he went, Southern Methodist University.

Losing streak hits 12 as softball is swept by Houston

MELISSA HETMAN

Two weeks ago, the women's softball team had a lot to look forward to.

Since they were riding a 12-game losing streak at the time, but they were getting ready to play their first Conference USA game in their brand-new complex.

Today, those fears have been replaced with excitement, the feeling that the only thing they can do is go.

After a three-game sweep this week by CUSA rival Houston, the Knights, now 5-27 in regular season play and 8-9 in conference, know they still have something to prove.

In the weekend's first game Saturday, the Houston Cougars won no time as they jumped to a 4-0 lead in the top of the second off three hits, a walk and three hit batters.

A single and a hit batter loaded the bases for the Cougars in the top of the second.

After Houston's Angel Shamblin was thrown at home, Katie Batson was hit by a pitch allowing a run to score. Houston's Edina Herdnek was answered with a home run double to center field.

The Knights were able to get one run across in the 3rd, when Ashley Baker and Amber Lush hit back-to-back doubles.

The Cougars, however, answered right back in their half of the fifth with one run off a single and sacrifice bunt keeping the final score at 5-4.

Magen Panos repeated the loss for the Knights as she pitched just two innings while giving up four runs on three hits.

Game two on Saturday would see the Cougars take the lead in the fifth of a Shannon Sittel single up the middle.

The Knights and the Cougars then went to extra innings, with UCF sweeping the Cougars again 5-4.

Rumors say Orsini's salary doubled

UCP's first year in C-USA has been filled with ups and downs, but the football team and men's basketball team at UCP finished with better records than its successive teams at SMU. Oh, and did I mention that SMU's much basketball program is currently under NCAA Investigation for possible recruiting violations?

Orsini's move to SMU is certainly a change for the football program. At first glance, Orsini's departure from UCP would seem to be a slap in the face, as SMU is in dire need of a coach who is not good enough for SMU.

But with Orsini's departure, speculation recorded in Orlando, the隐隐约约 administration disregarded Orsini by allowing him to take the entire program and now they're looking for a new coach from outside the university.

Despite the uncertainty of the situation, coaching history in Dallas, Orsini left UCP after two-and-a-half years, giving the Cougars the opportunity to receive double the money at SMU and his departure begins to make more sense.

UCP's senior Beth Barnes helps fuel the Knights this year as one of the most active seniors on campus. Barnes works with students on her free time during the week while spending her days in the president's office.

"My favorite part of the job is working with the students," Barnes said. "I enjoy meeting new people and being able to help them with their needs."

Barnes spent her first three years on campus as a member of the women's basketball team. She attended the university for four years and then returned to finish her degree in four years.

On the basketball court, Barnes was a key player for the Knights, leading the team in scoring and assists. She was named to the All-Conference team twice and was a key contributor to the team's success.

On the court, Barnes was known for her leadership and ability to make others around her feel comfortable. She was a role model for younger players and was always willing to lend a helping hand. She was also known for her dedication to the team and her work ethic.

Off the court, Barnes was just as dedicated. She worked at the university's communications office and was involved in various campus organizations. She was a mentor for younger students and was always available to help them with their needs.

Barnes said that her time at UCF has been filled with ups and downs, but both have been rewarding. She is grateful for the opportunity to have been a part of the university's history and is excited to see what the future holds for both herself and the university.
10th-inning heroics take series

CHRIS HOLLER

It wasn’t easy, but the UCF baseball team earned a very important series win, defeating Tulane 2-1 on Sunday and scoring on a wild pitch. In the fifth, with Vazquez on second, Bates doubled to right, giving the Knights a 1-0 lead in the fifth of the game. After a rough start, Bono set the table for freshman Kiko Arrieta, which spelled the sacrifice bunt from senior catcher Matt Horwath. Sophomore Sam Demel, the staff ace-to-throw a two-out, two-run single.

But, while Peterson’s streak of not allowing runs was extended to 11 innings, the Horwitz allowed the Knights to tie the game in the ninth inning with an unearned run. Second baseman Matt Horwitz’s throwing error allowed Steven Tyson to advance to second on his single, and he was later driven in by Bryn Kervin’s single through the right side. The Knights will return to Orlando to take on conference rival Stetson on Tuesday night. First pitch is set for 6:30 p.m. at Bergman Field.

Tigers fall short of Final Four

As the at-large remaining hope for a seventh basketball championship for LSU in 2005-06, the Memphis Tigers lost in the Oakland regional final Saturday. The UCLA Bruins advanced with a 50-65 victory.

Run support not there as Bascoum struggles

First Base

In terms of support, junior Matt Ray powered the UCF offense. Ray started with a single to lead off the game. After singleing again, Ray moved to third on a groundout and scored on a wild pitch. In the fifth, with the run on the corner, junior Matt Ray doubled down the left-field line to drive in freshman Eric Kallendorf. Sophomore center fielder Tyson Auer followed that up with an RBI groundout, and Bono set the table for freshman Kiko Arrieta, which spelled the sacrifice bunt from senior catcher Matt Horwath. Sophomore Sam Demel, the staff ace-to-throw a two-out, two-run single.

Pickup on steam

Well, we're now two weeks away from the National League opener against Houston. Dusty Baker is not only anxious to see where his team stands, but he also wants to see how his players are adapting to the new rules.

Unfathomable bill will not help Florida students succeed

The Florida House passed a bill Thursday that would secure the state a federal education policy by requiring high school students to declare a major just like college students will. But the news is not great for students who are thinking of declaring majors in the future or who are not sure about what they want to study.

"It was one of those ideas that after I heard about it, I thought, 'Why didn't I think of this?"' said Rep. Matt Will, R-Dade. "It's something that needs to be looked at." Will said the bill was introduced by Rep. James Grant, R-Miami, who said he was concerned about the state's education policy.

The bill, which would require high school students to declare a major in order to graduate, has been met with mixed reactions from educators and students alike. While some support the idea of setting students on a path early on, others argue that it would stifle their creativity and limit their options.

"I don't think it's going to hurt anyone," said Will. "It will give them a better idea of what they want to do." But others are concerned that it could lead to high drop-out rates and make college more expensive for students.

"That's one of the reasons we have so many people leaving college," said Will. "You have to have a plan to know where you're going." But critics argue that the bill is a thinly veiled attempt to force students to choose a major too early in their high school careers.

"It's too early to make such a decision," said Will. "I don't think it's going to hurt anyone," said Will. But others are concerned that it could lead to high drop-out rates and make college more expensive for students.

All good things come to an end, but I'm going out in style

From the rule of man to fantasy baseball, nothing's sacred

As any time with the future comics to a close over the next few weeks, I'll be playing down my column by so many of my best quotes. Doesn't cause too much hardship or too many question-induced ailments. Truth be told, I am too bored and I am looking forward to my upcoming coursework as a matter. Actually, I've written a number of opinions right now, and, while being a marker isn't one of them, I still like to do about it and parent that I can main grown adults.

I've had a lot of fun over the past few years, and I've especially appreciated the many friends that I've made while I've helped me remember that there are people in this world who don't grope the ideology behind landing a sense of humor if it saved their lives. These people have really helped me thrive to where I've ended up.

My outlook on life is that people do what they're asked, more or less. As my time at this spectacular college newspaper has taught me that I am good at being a smartass. If that's what I meant to be, then so be it.

My only regret, though, is that I actually let some people get too close. I wish I could act bad and stop the world back to a rewind time so I could go back and slap the heck out of myself and tell me not to care what other people think.

I guess this is my advice to every college student who is: an abnormally long time to figure out what they want to do with their lives. Life's too short to care about other people's Hills.

Serious life lesson sids, I don't know where I'll be in one month, but I do know I'm going to try to make the most of those next few weeks for the sake of the lives I enjoy. I always tell him how I make his classes interesting with my linguistic sense of humor. I'm probably going to slow

No further ado, I offer you the first in my final installment of columns.

For a while, I've wanted to write an entire column devoted to the unwritten laws of football. I haven't, obviously, but mostly for the sake of being labeled as too extroverted and usually impractical.

But I have to throw one thing out there that every man needs to know. Proper means to toilet or personal or bathroom etiquette dictates that it is never acceptable to talk to another man whilst he is taking care of business. I don't think that I need to drive any further into this situation, but I just had to throw it out there...

At press time, my NCAA Tournament bracket was being looked at by the people from the Gainesville Book of World Records for being the first sheet of paper to ever fall flat.

Also, I found it with a handwritten note that read, "Football, cruel world, but I can't believe how stupid Burnzy is."

On another NCAA basketball note, there has been an ongoing argument as to whether Diana R. J. Robinson or Gussie's Adams Morrison deserves the Player of the Year award.

Sure, we could look at the numbers and existing eras or the impact they had on their respective teams, but I have a better solution. Let's give this award based on who helped their team choose away its national championship hopes five weeks, I'd be planning on my column by so many of my best quotes.
