Graduate fellows, assistant to get tuition waivers

ANDREW VAN WART
Staff Writer

The new tuition policy was approved for graduate assistants and university graduate fellows, who are full-time students working in graduate research.

The policy would cover all out-of-state tuition fees and in-state tuition for both graduate students and graduate fellows. It would be accomplished through the use of waivers and adjusting current tuition rates, a proposal that is expected to cost about $5 million.

UCF currently waives the tuition of all doctoral students and 33 percent of the tuition costs of masters students who work as assistants or fellows. Beginning this year, the out-of-state portion of tuition for out-of-state master’s students who work as assistants or fellows will be waived; then, in 2007-2008 the portion of the in-state tuition waiver will go from 55 percent to 75 percent and, finally, in 2008-2009, to 80 percent.

Graduate tuition is $201.54 per credit hour, and out-of-state graduate students pay an additional $64.44 per credit hour. The current change is expected to help attract and retain the highest-quality graduate students and would also help to boost the university’s research and research funding.

Also approved at this meeting was a three percent maximum tuition increase for undergraduate students effective Fall 2006.

Tuition for a resident undergraduate student will increase from $713.57 per credit hour to $732.14.

A capital outlay budget for the fiscal year designating construction project expenditures was another topic discussed at this board of trustees meeting. Numbers were revealed regarding each construction project and authorization for the budget was requested. One of the most expensive projects on the list is a new recreation center, which is expected to open in 2007 and will provide a number of services for students, including entertainment rooms and a bowling alley. Also on the agenda at this meeting was the approval of a new boathouse.

Professor praised for work in optics

Peter Delfyett named Science Spectrum’s outstanding minority researcher

Tiffany Palm

Baltimore-based magazine Science Spectrum has once again recognized UCF professor Peter Delfyett as an outstanding minority researcher.

He also holds the University Trustee Chair in CREOL at the College of Science and Engineering.

The contributions that he has made in his career in science and engineering not only have helped him to achieve success in his field, but have also helped to inspire others to pursue careers in science and engineering as well.

While the magazine’s recognition is indeed an honor, it is even more significant because of the impact it has had on the lives of others who have followed in his footsteps.

Delfyett said that the recognition was a great honor to receive and that he was extremely grateful for the opportunity to be recognized for his work.

He also expressed his gratitude to the magazine for recognizing the contributions of minorities in science and engineering.

Delfyett’s work has been so impactful that he has received numerous awards and honors over the years, including fellowships from prestigious organizations such as the National Science Foundation and the National Academy of Sciences.

However, his work has not been limited to academic achievements. He has also been a vocal advocate for the importance of diversity in science and engineering, and has worked to encourage young people from all backgrounds to pursue careers in these fields.

Delfyett’s work has been so impactful that he has received numerous awards and honors over the years, including fellowships from prestigious organizations such as the National Science Foundation and the National Academy of Sciences.

And while his recognition is certainly an honor, he is quick to point out that his greatest accomplishment is not just in his career, but in the lives of the students and colleagues he has inspired along the way.

Hip-hop band sticks to its roots
Backed by a 15-year career, the Roots' live show mixes a mix of current, classic crowd-pleasing hits

While they certainly aren't MTV's hip-hop darlings, the group's popularity isn't fading. For the past 15 years, the band has entertained college audiences with a mix of classic and current hits.

The group's live show is known for its dynamic performances, which are all-too-often fixated on rehashing the same old hacky jokes. Their approach is approachable, as they side-track into hilarious dialogue and creative and diverse collaborations.

The band has been featured on a variety of television series, such as the Six Feet Under and The OC. Their performance at the 2006 Grammys was widely known for her hit "Go." Her latest album, "Vee Meece," has sold over 10 million copies and is currently on the charts.

The band is currently on a tour that includes stops in major cities across the country. They are scheduled to perform at the Fillmore Auditorium in San Francisco on May 29th.

Solo vocalist shows off feet, talent at sold-out show

The women's rowing team's season was considerably bare bones, but this past weekend, the team came together and showed off their skill.

The team members, including captain Kyla Roach and coach Dr. Edward Smith, have been working hard to build a proper boathouse facility that is adequate for the team's basic needs. But this tent is far from adequate for the team's basic needs.

The team members are aware of the situation, but doesn't seem to have taken any action to improve the situation. The team's only hope is the gender equality for women's sports.

The team has recently set back their season, but they are doing what we can to prepare for the season. The team has been training hard and working on improving their skills.

The women's rowing team's season is widely known for their hard work and dedication. The team has been working hard to improve their skills and are looking forward to the upcoming season.

A student from Vietnam thought his handgun was an air gun and killed her sister with a single shot. She later called to the apartment and was identified in local media as a male roommate. When the police arrived, they thought the weapon was not real and took a picture. The woman, Han said, “He didn’t know what had happened to their relationship with the woman.”

The woman was a junior majoring in engineering and she was known to her high school, university, and local police. Investigators would not say whether the woman had been sexually assaulted or experienced some sort of trauma.

The school plans a memorial service to remember the woman. Details will be announced later.

Emergency contraceptive available at UCF for $24

Decision to sell pill prompts students to consider its morality

KITTIE JOHNSON

The Health Center's decision to offer the emergency contraception pill, also known as the morning-after pill, available to the UCF community has sparked some debate among students.

Beth Burwell, president of the Students for Life Club at UCF said that she disagrees with the university's decision to provide ECP to students.

"Everyone should be free to make their own choices," she said. She also pointed out that students may need to use ECP to prevent pregnancy because of difficult circumstances, such as rape.

Rachel Koplin, a freshman theater major, said that people have a right to believe in what they choose and do whatever they want with their own bodies. She said that she believes it is UCF's job to educate its students and allow them to make their own decisions based on what they believe.

According to a national survey by the American College Health Association, birth control pills and condoms are the two most used methods of preventing pregnancy among students.

However, 17 percent of sexually active student surveys indicated that they or their partners had used the emergency contraception pill when other methods failed.

"Emergency contraception pills can prevent pregnancy within 72 hours of unprotected intercourse," said Michael Detelich, clinical director of UCF Health Services.

ECP works in the same fashion as oral contraceptive pills, Detelich said. "The hormones inhibit ovulation, but also reduce the likelihood of fertilization of the egg, and implantation of the fertilized egg into the uterus."

UCF locks up O'Leary with 10-year extension

Contract worth $1 million yearly with up to $500,000 in annual incentives

CHRIS HOYLER
Sports Editor

There are only so many quirks that can be made about George O'Leary and the chain of events that led to his departure at Notre Dame and arrival at UCF before the issue at hand comes to the surface.

And with O'Leary, it signals a three-continent extension with the Golden Knights on Thursday, the jokings are beginning to stop, eyes are beginning to open and the nation is realizing something.

The UCF football program is for real.

"It is with great enthusiasm that we announce this new contract with our head football coach George O'Leary," said UCF Athletic Director Keith Tribble said. "His commitment and dedication to UCF athletics is without question. Last season's numerous turnaround and accomplishments demonstrated to us why he is one of the top football coaches in the nation. We are excited to continue building our legacy with him."

That legacy includes the opening of an on-campus stadium next year and the defense of a division championship beginning in 1999.

The extension of O'Leary's contract through 2013 is another huge step toward legitimacy for a school that seemingly spent years chasing it.

"I am very happy to sign on at UCF for the future years, and hopefully we can continue to grow both on the football field and academically in the classrooms," O'Leary said.

The growth came in a huge sport last season, when the Knights broke off a 0-2 start to finish 9-3 in the regular season, winning the Conference USA East Division and hosting the inaugural C-USA Championship Game. Losses to Tulsa in that game and Nevada in the Sheraton Hawai'i Bowl have done little to temper expectations for this coming season. UCF has already been pegged to repeat as C-USA East Division Champions by Sporting News.

UCF President John Hitt said that the process of the extension began while former athletic director Steve Nee and UCF Sports Editor Chris Hoyler were named to the board in 1998.

"He had thoughts of leaving, he had the door open for the first time in Bergman's 24 years, but the process that's up and down is up.

"Football has the talent of filling the void left behind by baseball, and even before the summer begins they've done a good job of picking up the ball and running."

They picked up the loose ball with the signing of the three-game series with Texas, including the 2000 opener at Texas Stadium, another marquee game on the go.

"It was a national story talking about the defending National Champions."

They signed toward the end with Thursday's announcement of George O'Leary's contract extension through the middle of the next decade, it was shocking, but for all the right reasons.

From the moment O'Leary accepted the UCF coaching job, he was here simply to rebuild his program - a mid-major coach became a little cooler. Why leave a good mid-major conference?

"For over two decades, it has been about the best of everything - coaching, recruiting, facilities, support system, etc."

The biggest move of several things changed O'Leary's profile and he held the door open for the first time in Bergman's 24 years, but the process that's up and down is up.

"Football has the talent of filling the void left behind by baseball, and even before the summer begins they've done a good job of picking up the ball and running."
Stage is set for O'Leary to build legacy for himself, UCF football

The opportunities were not there.

UCF's commitment to the football program remained undeterred, and it is beginning to bear fruit.

It's a testament to the work they've done at UCF for the past five years.

O'Leary earned national headlines after his team's win over Florida State in the Chick-fil-A Bowl.

The term "legacy" was used by both athletic director Keith Fox and O'Leary himself.

"He has a great shot to grab the program," O'Leary said in a press release.

"I think we've got a chance," Fox said.

"We're at a really good spot and we're excited about the future," O'Leary said.

"We've got a lot to build on," Fox said.

O'Leary's ability to turn the program around is evident.

"He's done a remarkable job," Fox said.

"He's the right man for the job," O'Leary said.

The 2016 season was a step in the right direction.

"We've got a lot of work to do," O'Leary said.

"We're looking forward to the challenge," Fox said.

Provide Frisbee-fun key to wholesome summer exercise

In the time since computer-generated imagery became popular and proliferated itself throughout the movie industry, the use of scale models, matte paintings, and other tactile special effects has declined in favor of films that could be characterized as "cartoony." When a franchise such as the Star Wars or Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles comes around until you're sweating with exhilaration, you can always play Frisbee, regardless of weight, height or athletic ability. Playing USF would be a waste of time, playing Texas a dream come true for UCF

If you're a graduate student, USF will be a dream come true. With few exceptions, graduate students aren't rich people. USF is in the best interest of UCF for us to attract and keep a bit of the best, not because we're afraid of interesting itself throughout the school and facility. Two, recruits are dreaming they said. Dreams are great and one of the original alumni that helped found the school and facility. Playing USF does nothing for either graduate or in-state tuition. Playing Texas on opening day is exactly what does to UCF.

National attention reason enough to play in new UCF stadium opening. I agree with Chris McKay I'm suspicious of playing TX. If we make a respectable showing against them, we'll accomplish our goal. Part of getting better is to get better and be good at something. It is hosting its annual league tournament every Wednesday night along with our fallen heroes. I think you know how to build a successful program. It is a day to remember who has attended the school and facility. Two, recruits are dreaming they said. Saw some extraordinary plays. USF might just have Texas in the right place to day to day to day to day, they told us 12 years ago that we'd never have a stadium on campus! Keep dreaming they said. Dreams are great and playing Texas on opening day is exactly what does to UCF.
