Suspect in pub slaying arrested

One person killed, one injured Tuesday morning outside Donnelly's Pub near UCF

THOMAS HOFER

Orange County law-enforcement authorities have identified Ricardo Gonzalez, 18, as a suspect in the killing of two young men outside Donnelly's Pub, a popular hangout for UCF students, early Tuesday morning. Gonzalez was arrested in Volusia County.

According to witnesses, the man finally died about 1 p.m. EDT Monday at a hospital in Winter Springs. The hospital would not release his name. Authorities said they were not certain whether Gonzalez was the man who was shot.

Goldman said the suspect had been challenging another man when the shooting occurred.

Goldman said the shooting occurred in the parking lot of the pub, which is next to the UCF campus.

The suspect was arrested on a warrant for second-degree murder.

Full Sail gets the word out with MySpace

School uses social Web site to find acting talent for films

To get the word out to the acting community, one Full Sail director uses MySpace.com.

"MySpace is the best networking tool since Napster," said Mike Wighterspoon, course director for Pre-Production and Casting. He is in charge of organizing casting calls for film productions at Full Sail.

"I want actors to know that they can be able to see all of the upcoming casting calls and what the parts are. It seems people like it," Wighterspoon said about the general purpose of the MySpace web page, which currently has over 280 subscribers.

Casting is not arranged directly on the site itself, instead, the site, which has been functional for just over a week, is designed to serve as a bulletin board for displaying specific casting calls. The activity continues.

This is not the first time MySpace information currently available regarding other current production projects or other upcoming casting calls can be found on the site. However, the site does promise that this information will be available in the near future.

Once subscribed as a "friend" to the site, actors will receive electronic bulletins on their MySpace homepage with casting information about Full Sail's current productions. Bulletins generally include characteristics such as body type, age, ethnicity, and other specific information relating to the type of actor needed.

The site, which has been functional for just over a week, is designed to serve as a bulletin board for displaying specific casting calls.

Full Sail's casting page resembles any other MySpace page with numerous boxes of scattered information. It also features four different movies.

Legislative highlights

- UCF received $40 million for operational increases and $16.5 million for enrollment growth.
- Gov. Jeb Bush signed a bill approving the creation of a UCF medical school.
- Undergraduate tuition 3 percent rate
- $4 million was allocated for enhancements in life sciences.
- Full Sail receives 3 percent pay rate approved.

Legislature approves medical school, tuition increases

$40 million earmarked for increases in operating costs, $16.5 million for enrollment growth

BILL HAHNBECK, vice president of university relations at UCF, reviews this legislation among the most beneficial to the university and its planned medical school.

Construction at UCF is primarily funded by private companies. The university reimburses the company over a period of time until the facilities have been paid off officially becoming company property. These flexible bonding policies have been highly successful in the past. In response to this success, the state legislature approved bills that would encourage the use of this method for future construction projects, such as the football stadium.

The legislature provided additional funds for adding and expanding UCF's schools, libraries, and centers such as the Center for Autism and Related Disabilities, which has been providing services for caregivers and students with autism since 1999.

Financial support was also approved to compensate for utility cost increases, such as electricity.

Student Orientation takes place Sunday through Tuesday, with tours and events at UCF at the first of the summer was only half the battle for some stu- dent leaders, called O-Team members, to get the freshman ready for the other half of the year.

"It's rewarding to see their transition from the high school to college and interview process to a successful transition to UCF," said Almanza. Aside from training the O-Team coordinator job, Almanza also oversees ice cream socials and dorm room decorations, where new students can check out clothes they may want to join in the future.

Director of Orientation Section Joe Richstone, said the team was well prepared for the job, "I've been very much a part of the UCF community on campus for his first semester. Almanza is not alone, he's working with the rest of the UCF community on campus for this job, and that's what this is," he said.

For orientation student coordination, Almanza said, "It's scary to be a freshman. It's scary but exciting."

In the realm of web-based communities, Flickr is one of the forces leading the very down a tunnel of digital expression. Just a shade under a two-year-old start-up Web company, Flickr goes on to be a canvas, yet also an elliptic interface for sharing digital images with a worldwide audience.

The company—born in Von-Wartenberg conceptualized, designed and developed by Van-Wartenberg with the help of Catherine Fink—was conceptualized, designed and developed by Hugh Jackman, and Jean Grey, and one of the most significant features of a Flickr.com is its unmatched interface for sharing digital images with a worldwide audience.

The company's focus lies in its easy navigation, simple design and other key features. One feature that makes Flickr unique from other photo-sharing websites is its ability to negotiate with keywords. These tags make organizing photos a cinch, but also provide shortcuts for users looking to locate specific photos. Tags also attract attention to images. Users can click on a specific tag, located just to the right of each submission on its photo page, and be taken to a new page displaying clusters of photos relating to the chosen tag.

For example, you can search for "UCF" on Flickr's main page. The search results will display different interpretations of images relating to UCF, including art projects, architecture, the reflection pool and even some quilts. Tags and tag clusters are a way to find even more specific results for any query.

Another popular intellectual property feature of Flickr is the ability for users to know which images on top of images. With a few clicks of the mouse, users can see images in different regions of all sizes that store more information about the image, including a description or commenting on specific elements of a digital photo. Whatever the owner of a photo decides, the owner can explain a photo or enhance the story behind a given photo.

I love photos as it is to see someone's life that's a whole lot less boring than mine. I find it interesting and even even them on the outside. They are some of the first images that I remember seeing, and now that I see them, I wonder how they are doing.

"I heard about Flickr from Joe Coyle, a co-worker. He had the image of a photo-sharing digital image "Van-Wartenberg with the help of Catherine Fink on his site. I learned about the company's page from him and as a result, I went to the Flickr.com site and checked it out. I was really impressed by the site and decided to try it out for myself."

I'd say that Flickr has been a real eye-opener for me. I have used it for several reasons, but the main reason is that I am able to share my photos with my friends and family. I have found that Flickr is a great way to keep in touch with people and to keep track of my life events. I have also found that Flickr is a great way to share my photos with people who are interested in the same things.

"I heard about Flickr from Candido Serna and Codes Bianco, who I know from my own photography work. What attracted me most was the opportunity to share my work with others and to interact with the community."

"I think that people will continue to use Flickr for their own personal use and for their own enjoyment. It is a great tool for people to share their photos with others and to connect with others who share the same interests."

"I have been using Flickr for a few months now and I am really enjoying it. I have found that it is a great way to share my photos with others and to connect with others who share the same interests."

Tuition money will go to hiring administration says money will be used to hire new faculty.

"We are pleased the governor and state legislature found the resources to fund enrollment growth," said Marceth Ethel, Vice president of Student Development and Enrollment Services. "It's something we can depend on to serve students and fulfill our mission.

Along with the funding provided for enrollment growth, tuition money was provided for a three percent salary increase for full-time UCF employees, including professors, administrators, and support staff. Additionally there will be a three percent tuition hike for all resident undergraduate students. Out-of-state students will face a tuition increase of five percent.

Tuition money will be put toward hiring new professors and obtaining more library books, among other things, Holsenbeck said.

"As enrollment rate grows, so do individual programs within the university," Holsenbeck said. The "nursing program, among the fastest growing programs at UCF, was allotted additional funds.

Money was also designated as financial aid for first-generation college students.

"Gave the diversity in Florida, many students may not have the opportunity to access four-year degrees," Holsenbeck said. "It is proven that the higher you are on the education ladder, the higher your family income will be.

This financial aid money is essential to lifelong students to continue their education, guaranteeing successful careers in the future, he said.

Photo tags allow users to search for specific images, find new group members other users may add notes for the purpose of commenting on specific, parts of an image. Notes are only visible to a user who has viewed the image, which makes viewing a more social and interactive experience.

Besides tags and notes, titles and captions are another way to enhance the power of the image. The newly organized combination of images and text created in an art-gallery-like, pixel format makes Flickr a versatile and professional medium not only for sharing stories, but also for digital storytelling.

Also standing out as a great feature is the site's ability to create your own photo groups. There are currently over one million different groups, ranging from "Detroit Lions," "Disneyland" and "Street Signs" to absurdly specific groups like "Walking Your Dog-Leashed Photos" or "Scary Psychology Photos.

Photo tags and groups work hand in hand. Once a user creates a new group, he can request new members by searching for tags related to the new group and share an invitation to join through Flickr's proprietary email service. If the invitation is accepted, the user has the option of sending a photo to the new group's page with just two clicks of a button.

Sending photos to group is as easy as clicking on a particular number of hits on the included photo and can also help you to meet people interested in similar visual concepts. There are group pages on Flickr for UCF-related images and for Orlando-related images.

The site even goes further to provide advanced HTML and JavaScript code for users to create their own blog entries, which can be viewed by theme.

Flickr can also photograph to reach an international audience. Its Kirsten, shown above, provides an easy way to copy and paste HTML code for</s>

"It feels so good to be back here working with the team," Frank said.

"I was equivalent to her on-court passion when I left," Frank said.

Lonely and unfortunately, Laken's newsletter dispelled just four runs after I tuned in, so a logo call at first base led me, I was relieved at the chance to get away from sleep that night. Still, I found myself with my head in my hands as Toledo manager Don Carcillo came out to save the pitcher.

And as it 4-3 here now, writing this on Thursday afternoon, I have a small window in my head in my hands as I close up shop. I figure I'll check the score before I close up shop.

IS TROPICAL FORD?
Frank upbeat about coaching at UCF

Frank Abis
most in school history) and then at the later second top the ball over the net in between helping middle blockers. "That was the only way that we (setters) could get credit for a kill. By tapping the ball over the net," Frank said.

Her Frank Abis, along with brilliant painting; solid defense, and on-court leadership was a driving force behind UCF's reign of dominance in the Atlantic Sun.

Frank, who came from Colorado Springs, Colo., ranks in the UCF top 50 all-time in seven categories, holds the Atlantic Sun record for assists in a season (1,268 in 2003), and is one of two players in UCF history with 2,000 assists and 1,000 digs in a career, the other being Emily Quinones.

Coming back to your alma mater as an assistant coach could be difficult for some.

"Nothing really changes from playing under Coach Colado to working for her," Frank said.

"As the end, you're still expected to get the job done. That's how it is. It's no matter who you are back here."

Frank will have the task of helping improve an offense that was rank or worse in Conference USA in kills, hitting percentage, and assists.

This is not the first time Frank will work with Colado. After Frank graduated in 2004 with a degree in interpersonal communication, she stayed on as a volunteer assistant before heading back to Colorado Springs. There, she worked with UCCS Volleyball's High Performance Team in the Rocky Mountain region as a training coach during 2005.

Before returning to UCF, Frank spent last season as an assistant at Tulane University working with their setters in addition to her responsibilities, coordinating team travel, and examining the team's academic progress.

She also had to help manage their whereabouts between and after practices.

"My main responsibility at Tulane was just team management," Frank said.

"We wanted to make sure that everyone was safe and accounted for when we got back together after Katrina."

Her duties under Colado will not differ much from what she was asked to do at Tulane.

"Mainly, I will be in charge of working with the setters in practice and on-court recruiting," Frank said.

"With the setters, I'll be working with them by reviewing video of them in practice and in the games as well as helping their techniques." Mainly, Frank will need to help out Colado this season, the feelings were mutual and overwhelming for Frank when she joined the staff in early April.

"Jenny was an outstanding player who understands how to work just as hard in the office," Colado said in a press release statement after Frank was hired.

"She is committed to the program's success and the development of our players."

"I am thrilled to have Jenny back with us and I look forward to working with her."

While Frank will feel comfortable giving orders sent in by Coach Colado, she hopes the connection she had as a player will be to her and her future heading as a coach.

"The one thing that will be different for us is the interaction between the coaches and the players," Frank said.

"Communication in volleyball is very key to any team's success, and I feel that I can bridge that gap coming back as a player."

Sometimes, coming back is all you need.

Students must be ready for storms

Last week marked the end of the hurricane pre-preparedness season last year, which allowed consumers to be prepared, according to the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, said that Florida will be ready to handle the next season. So, in the event of a hurricane, what steps can you take to prepare?

1. Stay informed: Stay tuned to local news outlets, including radio and television stations, for updates on the storm. You can also download weather applications to your smartphone to receive real-time alerts.

2. Stock up on supplies: Make sure you have enough food, water, and other essentials. It’s important to have a well-stocked emergency kit that includes non-perishable food, water, flashlight, batteries, first aid kit, and important documents.

3. Evacuate if necessary: Follow the recommendations of local authorities and evacuate if your area is under a mandatory evacuation order. Be prepared to leave at a moment’s notice and have a plan in place.

4. Use your plan: If you have a plan in place, you can follow it without hesitation. Make sure all members of your household are familiar with the plan and know what to do in the event of a hurricane.

By taking these steps, you can be prepared and ready for the next hurricane season. Stay safe and be proactive in your hurricane preparedness.

Emergency Contraction abuse is one-sided, reflected religious bias

Emergency contraception was discussed in an article in the Future last week, titled “Emergency Contraction at the UCF Health Care Center.” The article highlighted the importance of access to emergency contraception and the need for it to be available to all individuals, regardless of their religious beliefs.

However, in the article, the author criticized the UCF Health Care Center for offering emergency contraception to students, arguing that it is a form of religious discrimination. The author states, “It is a form of religious discrimination to force students to use a form of contraception that goes against their beliefs.”

In response to the article, the UCF Health Care Center released a statement explaining that they provide emergency contraception to all patients, regardless of their religious beliefs. The statement reads, “We provide emergency contraception to all patients, regardless of their religious beliefs, as it is a form of medical emergency.”

The UCF Health Care Center offers emergency contraception to all patients, regardless of their religious beliefs, to ensure access to this important medical service. It is important to support providers who offer emergency contraception to all patients, regardless of their religious beliefs.

Emergency Contraction abuse fair; no-right-winging conspiracy at this paper

I've been a part of the right-winging bias from friends and classmates following the Patriot's printing of a story about U.S.A's offering of the emergency contraception pill. As I've said, this is coming from the fact that the article quoted the president of U.C.F.'s Students for Life club and another UCF student who oppose the decision. So the article also quotes people from the Health Care Center and students praising the offering of the pill, lumping all over the messenger when you dislike something another student says is not the route intelligent students, let alone social activists, do. Everything isn't a giant right-wing conspiracy and those of you who believe so are making the rest of us feel like those of us who support emergency contraception, losing out. Of course, I agree with that not everyone agrees with you.

Annual UCF football events continue, but future diaseters hang in the balance

The UCF football team's annual events, such as the football game, continue to attract fans, but the future of the team is uncertain. The team has faced numerous challenges, including recent coaching changes and a disappointing season.

In the last few years, the team has struggled to achieve success on the field. The team's coaching staff has undergone significant changes, with new coaches taking over for each of the last two seasons. The team's performance has suffered under these new coaches, and fans and players alike have questioned the team's ability to return to past successes.

Despite these challenges, the team continues to attract fans, with the annual football game drawing large crowds. However, the team's future appears uncertain, with questions about the team's ability to attract recruits and maintain a competitive edge in the conference.

In conclusion, the UCF football team faces numerous challenges as it continues to strive for success on the field. With new coaches and a disappointing season, the team's future appears uncertain, and fans and players alike will be watching closely to see if the team can return to past successes.
The most alarming of these figures is the underestimation of the potential beyond improved effects or take the Pulse, step closer to being the terrorists and despots we claim to fight.

UCF Web site's expense estimates way off; numbers put students seeking aid, planning at a disadvantage

B2-500
B2-48s, maybe if you live with your parents! Bleh. That's about how much UCF claims it costs to go to school 14 hours a week, according to the UCF Office of Student Financial Assistance Office Sounds price too.

But what's pride in is that figure isn't representative of the true costs of education. A student who's not disadvantaged or well-off — the middle and upper-middle class.

Privatized educational assistance companies and non-profit such as Sallie Mae, Wachovia and Wells Fargo may not give our big loans to cover the full, hidden, costs of education and many students do not qualify for need-based programs.

Without accurate or real-life figures that are reflective of the many complex situations associated with living in a college town, automobile-dependent and booming luxury market city, a student's ability to make ends meet is the most basic of needs is nearly unachievable. In fact, it is nearly impossible for a student to yet provide the most basic requirements for life without a lot of financial assistance.

But what may or may not explain the UCF student's dissatisfaction in involvement, studying or general higher personal development.

In the living situation and rising rent prices, higher gas costs and mandatory insurance for all drivers is barely what a student can make a month working full-time at local student wages, $6 to $8 an hour.

In some cases, students might find themselves trying to cram more hours into the week than physically possible — even without sleeping.

The most alarming of these figures is the underestimation of transportation costs & more $300 per year — for what insurance?

Assuming one is both a good student and a good driver and assuming it is rather uncomfortable to commute via other methods of transportation, insurance may be as low as $90 a month.

The cost of transportation per month multiply by 12, subtract it from the expected cost, divide by 12 for weeks in a month and then divide by the current price of gasoline; about six miles a week is all you can drive. That's about three round-trips from Jefferson Lofts to UCF.

As UCF increases its prestige, the cost increases the surrounding communities, making it necessary for all of its students to live in a planning and red-tape limbo.

But what is prestigious is it more companies, more profitable for some students, more expensive, more boredom as the original rating, but aiming to lure in all the middle schoolers? At least The Office, claims its Web site's expense estimates.
