Hitt released from hospital; heart surgery successful
President thanks doctors during press conference

Staff Writer

UCF President John Hitt was released early Thursday evening from Florida Hospital after suffering a heart attack June 30.
Hitt said he was released from the hospital since he had a heart attack while riding his bicycle in the Central Florida Research Park adjacent to the East Orlando Campus.

Hitt treated at the scene, then airlifted to the hospital.

According to Dr. Hans Seiferin, one of the doctors who treated Hitt at the hospital, the president had a heart attack with complete blockage of the artery going to the front of his heart.

“We opened the artery, removed the blockage and put in three stents,” Seiferin said during a news conference Thursday morning. “We have excellent results, and his functions are fairly normal.”

Dr. Kerry Schwartz also treated Hitt. “After making sure he didn’t have any significant heart rhythms and his blood pressure was fine, we decided to let Hitt go home with his family,” he said.

Calling himself “very lucky” to have had his cell phone when he had his heart attack, Hitt said he was extremely grateful for the care he received at Florida Hospital.

“I would like to thank everyone for the care we gave to one of our most respected guests,” said Dr. John Hitt, UCF’s president and a heart surgeon. “We are happy to report that he is now recovering at home.”

Taking time between school, work can enhance resumes, expand worldviews
Opportunities for a ‘gap year’ range from volunteering in Africa to planting trees in Canada; Web sites offer information

Thomas Hoffer

After years of hard work, most students feel good about college when they graduate, and many look forward to a year off after graduation to tour the world.

But not Christian Knightly. After graduating from UCF in 2005, he sold his car, canceled his lease and traveled around the world for six months.

By the end of his trip, Knightly had visited 20 countries, seen over 200 different cities and had learned about 12 different languages. He said he was one of the few students who actually benefited from a gap year.

"I feel America is very safe outside of the world. We all live in one giant bubble where we have everything. We can get whatever we want whenever we want. In other countries, it's just not like that," Knightly said.

Online groups specializing in gap years don’t just offer opportunities; they also pitch them to students.

The center for gap years started a contest in which people get to travel on a free inter-city ticket through Western Europe and Morocco for a month if they are willing to write and publish a diary on the experience.

"I expose me to the world," he said. "I feel America is very safe outside of the world. We all live in one giant bubble where we have everything. We can get whatever we want whenever we want. In other countries, it's just not like that," Knightly said.

CLAST not meant to burden college career, director says

UCF offers many services to prepare students for CLAST, but some still have trouble passing, argue exam's existence

JENNIFER ALVIRA
Central Florida

It's 7:05 a.m., a time when most college students are just barely out of bed for early morning classes, let alone on exams. A large white sign taped to the inside of UCF's Computation building briefly outlines assigned classrooms, but inside, many students could be found standing in the halls, some were desperately cramming for the test, while others calmly sat against the building's cold walls.

Finally, the test administrators open the classroom doors, allowing students to file in and out, admittance rules in order, names and two forms of identification. Pencils and test booklets are distributed to test takers as a blanket of silence covers the room.

But this isn't just any exam, it's the College-Level Academic Skills Test. Every college student in the state of Florida is required to satisfy the CLAST requirement if they are seeking an associate of arts degree or a bachelor's degree. Without passing score, exemption or an approved waiver, graduation is unachievable.

To accentuate, a test of this importance can lead to stress. Others view the CLAST as just another test to their college career, director says Jennifer Wright, assistant director for the Student Academic Resource Center.

"The one thing that I'll say is that it shouldn't truly add stress to the students' lives," Wright said.

But Rubinski says that her students more when they can't "pass the CLAST exam," McMahon said. "But it is easy to us because I took the review series to it was really helpful.

Because of the services available, if the CLAST exam shouldn't be a burden to a student's college career, said Jennifer Wright, assistant director for the Student Academic Resource Center. "The one thing that I'll say is that it shouldn't truly add stress to the students' lives," Wright said.

According to UCF's University Testing Center Web site, a student is eligible to take the CLAST exam after they have completed 18 credit hours and the exam must be sat before 60 credit hours are taken. If a student has not passed the exam after an additional 30 credit hours, UCF restricts future enrollment into classes.

Rachel Rubinski, a compar- tive politics and international relations major, said the CLAST requirement can be stressful.

"I took off of work, and I studied to make sure I passed because it got to the point where I needed to sign up for classes, like I'm in my third year of college and I need to graduate," Rubinski said.

Bobby Petty, assistant direc- tor of the University Testing Center, said students usually come before it starts affecting their grade.

"Because a student can take the exam as early as earning 18 credit hours, there's less chance of a student having to face retention in college for the next time," Petty said. "One of the basic requirements for consideration for a waiver of a CLAST exam is that a stu- dent must have taken a specific subject at least four times.

To help students pass on their first try, the Student Aca- demic Resource Center offers the best services to help pre- pare students for the CLAST exam. Petry said. These services include tutoring, computer software, study guides andvideos.

Mathematics major Heather McMahon said similar tools helped her pass the test.

"I didn't mind doing it [the CLAST exam]," McMahon said. "But it was easy to me because I took the review series to it was really helpful.

Mark Polio, associate vice president of student development and retention, said that few people do not meet the requirement. "It says something about our teachers and students, which is good," he said.

However, McMahon said the test should not discourage anyone. "I think the CLAST exam should go away just because there are so many tests now," McMahon said. "I feel like I'm back in elementary school. I had to take the SATs and this test, and this test, you know, and my dad's a teacher and he'll say 'that's all we do now is just testing, testing.' It's annoying we're supposed to be prepared for college exams.

Jenise Stago, who earned her master's and bachelor's degrees in social work from UCF, said a student's grades are more important.

"I don't really think that the [CLAST] exam was necessary," Stago said. "I think that we should judge people based on the grades that they made in college or high school.

The CLAST exam is a timed test that is administered three times a year.

Test administrators write each test and stop times on a data erase board, which allows students to work on each question.

Students hope they never have to take another CLAST exam ever, supporting each other with their frustrations.

"It's the last thing I want to do ever," said a student. "It's been so stressful."

Intramural Dodgeball is one of the most popular sports played at UCF, yet its rise in participation isn't shocking.

I don't know if I can take Redick in Orlando.

In this space last week, I said that the NBA Draft is the hardest part of the sport to judge the day after.

Yet, that's exactly what I did when Dick Vitale's irate face made me want to puke.

I know, at some point during the 2006 NBA Draft on Wednesday night, I would see Dick V speaking in his usual-loving, digital set on "J.R. Smith versus North Carolina" mode.

I just prayed that it wouldn't come after the 11th pick in the first round.

But when David Stern stepped to the podium at 8:42 p.m., there was no saving that this would change.

Yet even if the Magic took Roddick, I wouldn't have been surprised. The team was so close to getting a real shooter in a top-15 player.

And if Dick V didn't expect it, then I didn't either.

I also didn't expect the number of Boilermakers we have left on our Top 100 list.

We thought logically that it wouldn't last, but for the $100,000 I wish we got, they'll probably get a few Boilermakers from that list.

Sure, for the teams that will come as part of two tournaments.

The weights are being slammed, the sprites are being run, and hope springs eternal for the 119 teams that play Division I-A football.

S ummer workouts are firing up and everyone is undefeated.

"Stephanie is a wonderful person and a great role model for girls," said the number one finisher.

"She is the third new member of the tandem, joining Eric Campbell and Lauren Thompson," said A.P. Wilson.

"Stephanie is a wonderful person with a wonderful attitude," said Colado's partner.

"She is a competitor and jumps very well. She has the potential to make an immediate impact in our programs," said Colado.

In the 2005 season, Serna played in 39 games (nine starts) and in matches.

Volleyball releases 2006 schedules, adds transfer

BRIAN MURPHY

As UCF volleyball coach Matt Colado prepars for his second year in Conference USA, he announced his team's 2006 schedule on Wednesday.

After a disappointing 7-15 record last year, the Golden Knights hope that an improved schedule will lead to a change in their results. The Knights will play their first seven games in the UCFArena and will have a total of 15 home matches in 2006.

But the team has lost 10 home matches all season and did not make it home until Sept. 27.

Maybe it is for the best that the Knights get to sleep in their own beds often.

They will need to be at the top of their game to tackle some tough opponents. The Knights will play in the prestigious 2006 NCAA Women's College Cup.

The Knights will play in the USTA Champions-Title Cup and will play in the top-27 home matches.

"It's going to be a challenge," said Colado. "We are so excited to be playing in the tournament this season. Colado said in a press release. "This will give our fans many more opportunities to come out and cheer us on."

The good, the bad, the ridiculous

O

r Saturday, almost 200 new state laws went into effect. Some are bad and some are, to be fair,M ewsworthy. Here are a few:

- The Florida Lottery gained some weight, fattened by a new requirement that $1.77 million safely held in reserve.
- The state will be required to pay its lottery winners in a single lump sum, not in installments. Former winners had complained that installments were, in some cases, worth less than a lump.
- “If you want to keep your kids safe, you need to get them a car seat,” one legislator said. Other legislators were not so sure about the effectiveness of car seats.
- The state passed a law that says “no person shall be convicted of a crime...” The precise meaning of “shall” was left to the discretion of the courts.
- The state passed a law that says that “no child shall be left unattended in a vehicle.” The precise meaning of “unattended” was left to the discretion of the courts.
- The state passed a law that says “no person shall possess a weapon that is not a firearm.” The precise meaning of “weapon” was left to the discretion of the courts.
- The state passed a law that says “no person shall be allowed to be out of school during school hours.” The precise meaning of “school hours” was left to the discretion of the courts.

Man on the Street shows ignorance, indifference, business as usual

The “Man on the Street” section in Monday’s paper was one of the most disappointing things I have seen in a long time. It says a lot about the prevailing attitudes of indifference and inattentiveness around this campus and our country. Dear God, I also say it a lot about the quality of the students this university is choosing to admit to.

The excuse range from the lame to the laughable, but all are too predictable in this culture of convenience:

“I have people riding bikes that make me sick. I didn’t know you, better, that person sounds like something more akin to a 10-year-old after a traumatic collision with a bike. “I don’t want to look like a grandma.” Yeah, because I saw a girl getting a ticket on the side of the road, the first image that pops into my mind is my 20-year-old granddaughter paddling away, trying to keep her destinations from falling out. “This isn’t a state in which to live.” People still崽 to eat.

The one person who didn’t say something moronic or make a transparent excuse falls into the common category of the empathetheric, i.e., hyper-considerative possible believers. Bikes are good. But I don’t see it. It is hardly debatable that that no matter how strong we may be about something, it is often the act of ultimately matter the most.

So, much of an influence on the student body as it would be admirable if everybody would read Florida has published an article about the unrefined bike-folk culture. It is a reminder of the way in which we are held. If these six students are an accurate reflection of the sentiments of this campus (and the country), then it is little wonder why the professors’ demand for higher...
