Game-day traffic fears arise

Students, UCF officials, local residents chat about stadium traffic

LADEN LAFRANTZ
Staff Writer

The opening of a $10-million renovation to the UCF football stadium is seeing mixed reviews from community members and UCF officials concerned about traffic, and parking during the football season.

In an effort to inform students and the general public about their plans for gameday, UCF held an open house at its downtown east campus on July 29 in the first-floor gallery of the Visual Arts Building.

UCF is working closely with PBS&J, a contracted firm that is planning how the traffic will be directed in and around campus during the gamedays. Their goal is to minimize the impact of the traffic on the game attendees as well as the residents of communities surrounding the stadium.

At the open house, community members were able to speak with representatives from PBS&J, GameDay Management, the UCF Athletics Department and members from the UCF Transportation Management Department.

There were five separate stations set up for galley addresses, how traffic will be handled when the stadium is full. Students, UCF officials, local residents chat about stadium traffic.

“Those in the gallery address how traffic problems, parking, safety and student traffic problems are handled. Students, UCF officials, local residents chat about stadium traffic.”

UCF student charged with Academic Village arson

A student who had left the building an hour before each fire, was eventually named as a suspect by UCF detectives assigned to reviewing the first on college campus.

“The first fire was started at 9:30 a.m. July 29 when a student was found with a fire extinguisher. The second fire was started at 9:30 a.m. July 3 in the second-floor lounge of the Academic Village Apartments building 310. The fire was started on a couch and was put out with a fire extinguisher.”

New policy requires undeclared majors to see a adviser after 45 credits

ERIC SHIMER
Staff Writer

UCF students who have not declared a major will have holds placed on their account after earning 45 credits, according to a new policy being implemented by Undergraduate Advising and Exploration.

“It’s a new policy does not force undeclared students to declare a major once the limit of 45 credits has been surpassed. Students need only meet with an advisor to discuss the status of their academic and major situation to have the holds removed.”

High schoolers get lessons on rocket science

Students work with physicist to develop hybrid-fuel rocket

Crystal Potts
Staff Writer

Six students from the Harlem Children Society along with a UCF physicist are working on a hybrid fueled rocket engine.

Louise Shackelford, Folasade Alceloko, Christian Garcia, Leslie Lieberman, Kujtime Muzhaku, and Jackie Taquazha Fair are participating in a summer hands-on research program.

The students perform beginning sor John Brandenburg. These students along with others from HCS are participating in a summer hands-on research program.

The students were assigned different jobs for the project. Alceloko is researching the basics of hydro rockets and the others will be working on the chemical aspect of the design.

Garcia said There are two types of rocket fuels, solid and liquid. The liquid fuel is a gelatin propellant, is a combination of (plastic) bags just in case we had a leak at the top of the moment.”

She also said that she would stay up until 3 some mornings because she was worried she would have to evacuate the building of the building because of the fire.

Cary Jacob, an 18-year-old psychology major living in building 310, laughed at Danasy’s motives but was relieved to at Damsky’s motive but was relieved to know how it feels to not know what you want to do with the rest of your life. "I think it was a good way to meet some students who are undecided," she said.

"It’s not meant to be a punishment or something of that nature. It’s not a bad thing," she said.

Abi Roberts, a Physiology major living in the first-floor lounge of the Visual Arts Building, was another female who was relieved to have a chance to find herself after the first fire.

"I think if we’re added extra pressure to find myself if we have no clue, it’s not a good thing," she said.

Roberts hopes to double major in theater and public relations, however, she remains undecided because theater applies for the fall, according to the changing affidavit.

Cartoon calls to viewers’ interest: attention-deficit child

Robot Chicken's 15-minute episodes modeled after frantic channel surfing

It's 11:00 on a Sunday night and there's nothing to do! Watch the TV on to Cartoon Network, chew on a Ritz and indulge the inner child with Robot Chicken. What's that Robot Chicken is a stop-motion animation show created by Cartoon Network’s Adult Swim block. It uses a combination of stop-motion animation and a variety of formats, including claymation and Stop Motion, to create a surreal and satirical take on popular culture. The show is known for its dark humor and lowbrow satire, featuring characters like Saddam Hussein, Michael Jackson, and Donald Trump in humorous and often surreal situations. The show is broadcast on both Adult Swim and Cartoon Network.

Policy nudges students to consider careers; students unsure of effects

Kane is set on mastering in photography to earn a professional degree from UCF, however, Kane believes he would be forced to move to the Daytona campus for some classes. Therefore, he has considered transferring to Valencia Community College to earn his photography degree. Kane also acknowledged that the new policy might be enough to finalize the decision to transfer, "I don’t think it will be a popular policy with students," Kane said.

Chris Lord, 22, spent the first two years of his educational career at UCF undeclared before he finally declared on legal studies. After first hearing of the policy affecting students in the same position as he once was, Lord immediately responded negatively, much like Kane, "I think it’s very bad," Lord said. "It forces you to transfer when you’re not even ready." However, the latter could be considered the implications of the new policy for students like the 22-year-old Robert Winstead and Robert Laurent. It has its pros and cons, "But it can help students get themselves on the right track," Lord said.

The crowd surfing that had peaked during Fish had once more given way to massed heads rooked very hard and very loud with impressive vigor as they went on even longer than that. With all, including their most recognizable and some unrecognizable by some of the fans, they had agreed to be less aggressively accompanied by the emergency medical staff of EMTs projected above the stage. As far as the conclusion considered hardcore punk, I can’t say there were any. Not exactly. What is it hardcore? I don’t even think that I’m thinking. Either way, no matter what core you were fans of, Fish and Animal certainly got some satisfaction, as they were. They are proud of the new policy in the foreseeable future.

Studies program, hosted the students. This was the university’s first summer participating.

“It’s the first year that 35 students decided to have us volunteer in other states and it’s been interesting,” Alahkeda said.

Trachykar is president and CEO of HCS. He is a research scientist at the internationally acclaimed Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York City.

Alex Gordon, a sophomore at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, has been a part of HCS for three years. She said HCS has helped her experience the arts and sciences, which she otherwise might not have had the chance to and has shown them where they can reach their goals.

Alahkeda is interested in mechanical engineering.

“My interest in the sciences started in elementary school,” he said. “I was first interested in drawing and then I became interested in cars. I needed a major that would incorporate drawing and machines so I chose mechanical engineering.”

“One thing that peaked my interest in the trend was the virtual reality experiments, it’s something we’re headed in the next few years and I think to be a part of it I know that it will be a huge market when it happens.”

Garcia, 16, attends school at Brooklyn Technical High School. He’s his first year being a part of HCS.

“I am interested in a lot of sciences. However, I am not sure what I want to study,” he said.

He said visiting UCF opened his eyes to possibil-ties. “The tour put the university on my No. 1 list. If I get accepted with a scholarship, I would jump on the opportunity to attend UCF,” Garcia said.

Damsky, 18, is a junior at Stepinac’s Institute of Technology.

“He is major in chemistry. He has been with HCS for almost four years.

“There has always been more of a math and science type of person,” he said. “I really enjoyed the virtual reality simulation. That was really interesting.”

Mushak, 15, has been part of HCS for two years. She is a student at Manhattan Hunter Science High School and is interested in astrophysics.

Ben, 18, is a junior at Providence College.

“Getting a job, becoming a medical examiner. The students are being housed for free in Cocoa Beach.”

from the stadium.

There will be four color­ designed parking zones on gameday. Each person will have a designated zone according to hit or her ticket. It is estimated that for a sold-out game, 12,000 parking spaces will be needed.

Erik Waller from Gameway Management, the firm working on the parking situation, said it was working with PBS&J in order to figure out which parking lots and garages are going to be used on game days. “As it stands, there’s enough parking on campus, but we have to take into consideration those who will use the campus for game days for its intended use,” she said. “We will still have students using other campus facilities besides the stadium, and they are going to need somewhere to park as well.”

Jane Tookins, a life of UCF student and a resident of Wedgewood, which is 12 miles from UCF, said she wasn’t worried about the traffic from the stadium at all, “It sure beats the Citrus Bowl,” she said.

Her husband, Albert Dal­lana, feels the same way, “I think we’re in good hands,” he said.

As seniors ticket holders, the couple is entitled about the new stadium. “You just have to remember to leave early so you will get a good spot,” Dal-lina said.

Juan Palmier, a UCF senior, says the roads are too crowded already. “It will be cool when the games local now, but not sure if you expect to get to work on Saturday,” he said.

UCF will still have at least one more open house before they make their final decisions.

same building. That fire was also started on a couch, but was put out with the sprinkler system. The second fire was also started on a couch, but was put out with the sprinkler system.

“We free on the third floor as we were like, ‘oh, we’re next, it’s been three days… we thought it was a trick,” Peter said.

Arson was suspected because the damage from the second fire was “identical to the first incident,” according to a flier posted on bedroom doors in building No. The incident was handled as a first-degree arson because the building was occupied.

If convicted, he faces a maximum of 20 years in prison and a maximum of $30,000 in fines. He has been charged with two counts of first-degree arson.

Roop said that Damsky has been put on academic suspension.

The process took several years and the finished product will cost a projected $6 million. But the days of dead grass and sand pits hosting one of the nation's top intramural sports programs is gone with the introduction of turf at UCF. A childhood dream of landscape architecture student is now being played on the new intramural Momentum 51 fields. The fields, made by Sportexe, are a blend consisting of ASTROTURF which are located behind the current IM Sports fields is setting the pace for what looks to be a huge grand opening of the RWC fields on July 10th. These fields were funded by student CITF contributions. RWC Associate Director Jim Peters son said, "We invested in these new fields due to the fact that the current fields couldn't be maintained well enough, leading to sandpits and dead grass.”

C-USA champs return nine on D

CHRIS MOHLER, Sports

Paul Smith dropped back to pass. Five steps and his feet were planted. He wrote a novel. He was a hot dog and washed it down with a soda. He changed his major. But, most importantly, he scanned the field.

Then, with the case of a 10-year pro, he found tight end Garrett Mills for one of his eight catches and 77 of his 112 yards.

Now on that Saturday in Orlando, with the nation watching, Smith was just wrapping up his second season in college.

Now, back for his junior year, Smith is looking to lead his Tulsa Golden Hurricane to another Conference USA Championship, and they have the experience to challenge any team in the nation.

There are nine starters back on offense, with only one starter lost on the defensive line. "We invested in a total of 11 players," Tulsa coach Steve Kragthorpe runs a 3-4-5 defense, and the most important team in the players in the system is the defensive line.Head coach Todd Landers and the linebacker and the cornerbacks.

That is another point in giving the Golden Hurricane. At nose guard, 6-foot-4, 345-pound Terrel Nunn, who emerged as a starter in C-USA in the 2005 Championship Game and will be the biggest one-on-one match-up the Owls will face. Smith had seven tackles and two sacks in over 700 snaps on the season last year in the pressure watch list for the Butkus Award (Outstanding Defensive Player of the Year) and the Jim Thorpe Award (Outstanding Defensive Back of the Year). Smith was the key piece in the introduction of turf at the Barbra Landers' fifth yellow jersey of the season so far. He picked up where another junior year pro, he found tight end Smith was just wrapping up his second season in college. But, most importantly, he scanned the field.

He picked up where another assistant coach, Nick Bunting, who racked up 22 tackles and seven sacks in the September opener against Oregon State and the Owls averaged more than 21 yards a return. Smith was just wrapping up his second season in college. But, most importantly, he scanned the field.

He picked up where another offensive coordinator job, Butch Davis, who lost on the defensive line. "We invested in a total of 11 players," Tulsa coach Steve Kragthorpe said, "to keep the defense on the field. If we put the players on the field, we win more.

"What we were looking for is to be as close to grass as we can get," said Moore, "to provide the best product for our students to use that expectation." Wilkening said.

Intramural Sports Graduate Assistant Steve Anderson (no relation) mentioned how this turf is much safer than the current grass field IM Sports uses.

"We installed these new fields due to the fact that the current fields couldn't be maintained well enough, leading to sandpits and dead grass," Anderson said.

About the Fields

The new turf fields aren't the same AstroTurf you grew up watching on television on Saturday afternoon. These brand-new fields are Momentum 51 fields made by Sportexe, which is the same company who made the fields for the Baltimore Ravens, New Orleans Saints, and the University of Southern Mississippi. The "grass" portion of the turf consists of 70 percent rubber and 30 percent sand which is on top of an infilled surface which is completely made up of ground rubber. This turf plays similar to grass, as the rubber and sand mixture provides a consistent and safe playing surface, unlike pebbles and grates of artificial turf. The next phase of the plan will cost $8.2 million and the majority of this will come from the SGA. The final phase's cost and funding is currently unknown and will not be known until the first two phases are completed. Within the next five years, you will be witness to more expansion and more growth of the IM Sports program.

Landis lands eighth straight Tour de France title for U.S.

PARIS — Floyd Landis won the Tour de France on Sunday, keeping cycling's most prestigious title in American hands for the eighth straight time.

The 35-year-old Landis cruised to victory on the Champs-Elysees, a day after regaining the yellow jersey and building an insurmountable lead in the final time trial.

"Never stop believing," Landis said from atop the victory podium.

As the season opens, celebrity chefs will appear in the mix for a more enjoyable experience. For the fans, the addition of lights allows 7- on-7 football to be played at nighttime.

Nighttime Football

During 7-on-7 games last season, almost 200 simply vanished at night. During 7-on-7 games, the lights were dim, the atmosphere was different. It was a slow progression into the real thing, with new surfaces and new technology.

That time deficit was a factor in the final spring depth chart, said Jarod Jarod, a former punter for the Owls. "We knew what we could do, but we had to backfire after Landis lost 10 on a fumble."

israeli violence toward Lebanon justified, may bring about permanent end of Hezbollah

The situation has almost hit the fan. A week ago, Hezbollah's attacks in Israel have killed eight soldiers on July 12. The Israeli government and Lebanon's Hezbollah killied eight soldiers on July 12. In fact, Israel's response to Hezbollah's aggression has been a pragmatism effort to reduce the region more difficult. It has prompted the Lebanese government to use their rockets across the border into Israel, and Hezbollah has shown more and more civilians.
