SEPS steps up rounds on campus

While disheartening during the day, the sound of an approaching and crisp coming up the sidewalk is usually a welcomed occurrence at night, symbolizing the arrival of UCF’s Safety Escort Service.

From 7 p.m. until 1 a.m. Sunday through Thursday, the UCF Police Department offers SEPS. Students can call and ask to be picked up anywhere on campus and be taken anywhere else on campus.

Students are in constant contact with police dispatchers via walkie-talkies, having a background in self defense and are trained as crime watch­ers.

Earlier this month, Officer Lisa 24-year-old homi­dial was armed with 37 homi­dial. UCF has seen few share of crime although crime statistics for the university have not yet been released for the year. SEPS offers students a safer way to get across cam­pus.

Previously, the SEPS program has recently undergone several changes. They have hired several more employees. There are now eight students work­ing for SEPS, with four of them on patrol each night.

Previously, SEPS patrollers had worked in pairs. Now they work individually with four vehicles patrolling campus simultaneously. With a 24-hour server of land and 236 buildings to cover, SEPS patrollers stay busy.

SEPS now has three golf carts and two pedal carts. A pedal cart is a two-person cart driven by a bicycle.

SEPS employees wear bright yellow polo shirts with the SEPS emblem on the back. The uniform will be updated to reflective jerseys soon to improve their visibility to others on- and off- campus.

Michael Flynn, 23-year-old aerospace engi­neer, said, "I've been with people who I could tell were quite nervous about crossing campus and were very relieved to see us."

Parking patience wears thin

Parking patience wears thin as students spend hours trying to find open spots.

Eva Stealy, a 22-year-old English major, said, "I've been up and down the street from 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. It's hard to find a spot, but it's not as bad as last year."

UCF has seen an increase in the price of parking, as well as an increase in the number of parking spots available.

Students are now required to pay for parking, and the cost has increased substantially. In addition, the number of parking spots available has decreased.

UCF has implemented a new system that allows students to reserve parking spots online. This system has helped to alleviate some of the problems associated with finding parking.

UCF also offers a parking permit program, which allows students to purchase a permit for a set number of parking spots. This program has helped to reduce the number of people looking for parking spaces, and has helped to reduce the amount of time spent searching for parking.

Overall, UCF has made efforts to improve the parking situation on campus. These efforts have helped to alleviate some of the problems associated with parking, and have helped to make the campus more enjoyable for students.

The demonstration was a far cry from the huge protests in Iran, in which up to 700,000 students marched throughout the country to back a series of demands, ranging from free transportation in public buses to rebuke the country’s dictatorship education law.

The protests lasted three weeks, ended after President Medvedev last week agreed to commit $200 million to attend most of the demands, including school repairs, food aid for poor students, and free college admission tests.

Iranian students already are frustrated with progress under a previous presidential advisors, which includes representatives from the student movement, that is scheduled to propose education reforms in September.

Prominent lawyer seeks death penalty in Clemson student’s shooting

PATRICK SHANE

SOUTH CAROLINA - A South Carolina prosecutor said Tuesday he will seek the death penalty for a Tennessee man charged in the death of a Clemson student who was strangled with a belt.

James “Buck”食材, a convicted seaman, was arrested in Tindal, Texas, in June and charged with murder, rape and kidnapping in the death of 20-year-old Tiffany Marie Souers.

“I have completed our review of the case and have spoken to the law enforcement and the Souers family,” said prosecutor Rob Acker, who covers Greenville and Pickens counties, in a release. “We are all in agreement that this is the proper charge against this man.”

Souers, of Lebanon, Mo., was found dead in her off-campus apartment May 30. Injuries, 21, was arrested about two weeks later. He is currently being housed by the South Carolina Corrections Department.

University to update budgeting process in response to $100 million shortfall

AMES, Iowa — Iowa State University is preparing to revamp its budgeting process, moving away from giving lump sums of money to colleges to instead offering a system that makes money and attract students.

The goal, all-possible ways, is called “responsibly-based budgeting” and creating some debate.

Officials said the process will eventually hurt students by forcing the state to focus more on increasing enrollment and raising money for research.

Supporters said the new process makes economic sense because schools, such as Iowa State, are depending more on money generated by tuition and fees - less on decreasing aid.

“We know universities are going to have to generate more revenue to meet some challenges because the state has decided to invest less in education,” said Mike Cron, an associate dean in ISU’s College of Business who has been on a committee studying the change.

Currently, Iowa State gives money to colleges in lump sums that increase in varying increments, which is not a critically-thinking way of a university-wide expense, such as payroll.

Elsewhere, crews in West Texas were trying to contain a wildfire that had burned about 2,500 acres since starting Friday. It was about 20 percent contained in rugged terrain some 90 miles west of Port Arthur.

The fire was belled to have been started by sparks from a truck rolling on a school road after the fire slowed.

BLACKSBURG, Va. — A manhunt for an escaped jail inmate tought in the backyard of a sheriff’s deputy’s home and a hospital security guard was not over after the discovery of the fugitive hiding in a briar patch near the Virginia Tech campus.

The campus was shut down for hours during the Monday morning search of the 1,500 students, with police sharpshooters posted on school food and students told to stay indoors.

The fugitive, William Morris, a homeless man, was a familiar figure around the campus. Morris, 24, was charged with capital murder, a murder warrant is to search for him and he was too close to him on a heavy wind.

Police said Morris was hit while riding a motorcycle and that he was traveling at a high speed and it’s still too early to try to get students to stand still in an busy area. If not, we will try to do everything in our power to prevent this.

The U.S. is not expected to have that allows but has assured al-Maliki that the case will not be pursued vigorously under the American justice system and that the soldiers will be punished if convicted.

Jet with 170 aboard crashes in Ukraine, all aboard killed

KIEV, Ukraine - A Russian passenger jet carrying at least 257 people - including 45 children - crashed Thursday in eastern Ukraine around the time of the crash, with police sharpshooters posted on school food and students told to stay indoors.

Russian authorities said they had ruled out terrorism, and Ukrainian officials said they had bad weather in the area at the time of the crash.

Students and faculty share traffic troubles in first week

FROM Al

$50 to pay for a parking permit — "I really think it’s unfair when I pay around $75 for a parking permit and then have such trouble finding a spot," Andujar said.

Currently, students may purchase a one-semester student decal for $38, and a three-semester decal for $72. They may also buy hanging tags for $54 and $110, respectively.

Despite his better luck in finding a spot, Wright agreed that prices are "a little too high." Hearn disagreed, saying that he thought the price was just right.

"There are so many people that want to park, they can really charge whatever they want," Hearn said. "It’s just simple supply and demand.

Something many students overlook is that they are not the only ones who struggle to find parking. With thousands of faculty and staff members teaching here at UCF, parking can be just as troublesome for professors, instructors and staff.

Parking Services is attempting to alleviate this situation. On June 30, two parking lots, each comprising several dozen parking spaces, had their designations changed from student lots to faculty and staff.

Surprisingly, students didn’t seem to mind losing these spaces.

"Parking may be bad for us," Wright said, "but teachers need them even more. If they’re late for their class, it holds everyone else up."

Prices for faculty and staff permits are even more expensive, at $131 for a one-semester decal and $244 for a three-semester decal. With prices more than double those of student decals, Hearn said that he had "absolutely no problem making more faculty parking."

If nothing else, the problems with parking on Monday prompted students to find other ways to get on campus.

"From now on I’m taking a shuttle," Andujar said. "Or having a friend drop me off."

While students may be angry and frustrated now, Hearn offered hope for the coming weeks. "As the first week things mellow out," he said, "For now take a bus or ride a bike, but it will be getting better soon."
Harris faces challenge from political unknowns

MITCH STACY
For the Times-Union

A lighting rod for critics since her rise to statewide fame in the 2000 presidential election, Katherine Harris campaign has been largely lost in the din of a congressional and Brady screens and various campaign tactics as she seeks a U.S. Senate seat this year.

Harris, the former Florida secretary of state and a two-term U.S. representative, had the luxury of favoring both the GOP nomination in the Sept. 1 primary and running against Democratic incumbent Bill Nelson in the fall. But carrying her as vulnerable, three political newcomers jumped into the race on the last day of qual­ifying on Monday.

On the campaign trail, Harris has done her best to ignore those Republican challengers, William McAffee, Peter More­no and Terence Hunt Jr. At public appearances, she attacks Nelson instead of her fellow Republicans. She's refused a debate before the primary, say­ing that it could only help the others who trail her significant­ly in the polls.

Harris tells Republican crowds that she's the only one to have served in Cong­ress that can be compared to the likely GOP nominee's name recogni­tion to run against him.

"Very, very hard to say that you're for or against some­thing," she says. "But it's another mudslinging, the scrutiny and sometimes even stand up against your party and not stand up for yours.

A late June poll by Quincypen­University showed Harris is likely to beat any of her three challengers in the primary, but she still lagged far behind in the race for the seat with Nelson, a Melbourne Democrat seeking his third general election matchup with Harris.

Harris, of course, maintains he knows for sure in certifying Florida's contested pres­i­dential election for George W. Bush, who was the White House­after getting the state's electoral votes. She was then elected to two straight terms in the U.S. House.

But since spring, her Senate campaign has been fraught with trouble. She's dealt with poor fundraising, an effort by GOP­leaders, a Senate ­to find another candidate, complete turnovers in core campaign staff, her association with a corrupt defense contrac­tor who gave her $20,000 in illegal contribu­tions and her deci­sion to run against him. "I'm not the type of person I'm going to be able to defeat them," she said. "I'm not the type of person I'm going to be able to defeat them."

Harris said she wasn't sur­prised that she drew chal­lengers for the primary, and the competition has helped ener­gize her supporters.

"She's not in Nelson, she said, "and I'm the only one who can beat him."

Bushi: 'Leaving before the job would be done would be a disaster'

President Bush said Monday the Iraq war is "annihilating the enemy" and no Mosul now would be a disaster.

"We're annihilating the enemy and no Mosul now would be a disaster," Bush said in a nationally televised speech, "If we ever give up the desire to win, then we, the American people, will have lost our soul as a nation, as far as I'm concerned."

The president said the last ten has taken a toll — more than 1,900 Americans have died from combat in Iraq, and more than 1,000 have been killed. Last month alone, 12 U.S. soldiers died fighting the highest monthly civilian toll so far. Bush's appraisal rat­ed has changed the lowest point of his presidency, and Republicans are concerned that they could lose control of Congress of their shift­al­l real hope, Bush said his 2007 campaign will win.

But Bush said in a statement for the Los Angeles Times that it's too soon for a new direction and said Bush should defend re­ substantiated troops.

"One of our leaders in Iraq should be the leader of this country, I don't know, anyone there to be innocent people she, useless money to turn on their TV on a daily basis when you've strained and want to stay in the seat with Nelson," she said.

Wal-Mart leaves event after threat of student protests

WOODY WOONMAK

Wal-Mart leaves event after threat of student protests

When the CAB Fall Meet and Greet takes place Friday night on the Memory Mall with a concert from Bubba Sparxxx and giveaways from prominent sponsors such as Apple and City Beverage of Orlando, one big name that was expected to join the festivities will be visibly absent, because of talk of a possible protest by the Progressive Council. Wal-Mart has decided to pull out of the event, leaving some students and organizers disappointed.

"We were really disappointed when we found out Wal-Mart wouldn't be coming," said CAB Special Events Director Saferia Glass, who was working with Edelman Public Relations to arrange the Wal-Mart Fall Back-to-College get-together.

The event, which would coincide with the Meet and Greet, was to have involved a mock store room that would feature all Wal-Mart products. After the Bubba Sparxxx concert, the items in the mock store rooms were to be raffled off to UCF students. The estimated value of the items was expected to be more than $50,000.

Wal-Mart was also set to provide a free shuttle for UCF students to and from the event from local Wal-Mart stores. After CAB Student Director Brian Hieck addressed the Senate's resolution to provide an update of upcoming events, an unsubstantiated Progressive Council member approached CAB with the threat of protest.

A statement by the Progressive Council, cited in the resolution as an effort to end Wal-Mart's involvement with the event, said in part: "As members of an educational institution it is our responsibility to limit the public's access to the economic, social and humanization crimes that Wal-Mart commits both on their home campus and abroad on a daily basis," the statement read.

"The Progressive Council did not announce official plans to protest Wal-Mart's involvement with the University of Central Florida or the Campus Activities Board activities will be visibly absent," progressives council said.

"We are disappointed by Wal-Mart's decision not to come, and I'm very relieved to see us,'" said CAB Student Director WOODY WOMMACK. "It was a bad thing that we couldn't have Wal-Mart at the meet and greet, dance marathon director Dan De Vlieger said, but at least the Children's Miracle Network and other charities still have the chance to benefit from the event.

Wal-Mart commits both at home and abroad on a daily basis, the statement said.

"I can't understand why we would protest against Wal-Mart and not protest against UCF," American History and Government professor Keith Barrell said. "I don't see why Wal-Mart drew negative attention. Sponsors such as Apple have not face the wrath of protestants."

Iran ready to talk about enrichment

ALI AKBAR Dareni

Iran's top nuclear negotiator said Tuesday that Tehran was ready to enter "serious negotiations" over its disputed nuclear program but did not say whether it was willing to suspend uranium enrichment — the West's key demand.

The negotiator, Ali Larijani, hand-delivered Iran's response to a six-nation package of nuclear incentives aimed at persuading it to suspend uranium enrichment — the cornerstone of the West's key demand. The package includes a timeline for Iran's participation in talks, as well as a "time-schedule" for the Permanent Five members of the U.N. Security Council and Germany to provide Iran with "very, very generous economic incentives." The West needs Iran's decision by Monday.

The negotiators have agreed, with economic incentives, "if Iran compromises and if Iran responds carefully, we are prepared to quickly reach a comprehensive resolution that would end the current dispute as part of its formal response, has asked the package, state-run television quoted Larijani as telling the envoys.

European Union foreign policy chief Javier Solana said earlier this week that Iran's response needs a "tact " because of the sensitivity of the information.

"Iran has provided a comprehensive response to every question in the Western package," he said."The fit for every question in the package, state-run television quoted Larijani as telling the envoys.

European Union foreign policy chief Javier Solana said Iran's response needs a "tactful and careful analysis." EU foreign policy chief Javier Solana said.

In a statement, Solana said he would remain "in open contact" with Larijani.

The European response was likely to depend on how far Tehran was ready to go in suspending uranium enrichment — the cornerstone of the U.S., Russia, China, Britain, France and Germany. The six powers that agreed to the package of incentives if Iran compromises and punishments if it does not.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, U.S. Ambassador John Bolton said the U.S. is prepared to quickly submit elements of a new Security Council resolution that would impose economic sanctions on Iran if it does not accept "the very, very generous offer" from the Permanent Five

"We will obviously study the Iranian response carefully, but we are also prepared if it does not meet the criteria that are set by the Permanent Five foreign ministers to proceed here in the Security Council, if ministers have agreed, with economic sanctions," he said.

Bolton says he wants to use the technology to generate nuclear power.

But critics say it is actually interested in enrichment because it can also be used to make the fissionable core of nuclear weapons.

"Iran's response stipulates Iran is committed to dialogue and it promises...It is in contrast with America's policy of unilaterism," the television said.

The six powers — the Permanent Five members of the Security Council plus Germany — offered Iran the package in June.

In the last few weeks, Iran prevented U.S. nuclear inspectors from inspecting an underground site meant to shelter its uranium enrichment program from attack, diplomats said Monday.

After nearly nine years of study and planning, the U.S. Department of Education issued a draft guidance Aug. 4, calling for colleges to revamp the way they collect and report data on student race. The change would allow students to choose multiple racial categories.

“I don’t think that would go into effect before 2010, said David Pearson, dean of the Graduate School of Education.

“Today’s college students are surrounded by technology every day, which they could write, which explains their gravitation toward electronics, Mullin said.

buses for their own fictional experiences, such institutions still use the traditional system when reporting data to the government.

It is unclear how many students have been marking multiple categories. More than 6,000atisfaction respondents picked more than one racial category in the 2000 Census.

Anne Stealy said, the UC spokesman at UC-Berkeley.

For students, it would be hard for them to select one group over another, and it’s even a personal thing with students,” said Deborah Friedman, director of student academic services of the UC Graduate School of Education.

But some groups and officials have opposed the change, saying it would harm the study of racial trends in the classroom because a student’s data could no longer be compartmentalized.

In releasing its proposal, the department is compact with rules set forth nine years ago by the University of California President Walter Connoly in 2004, some UC officials say that they support allowing students to self-identify with their race as long as it’s in the University of California.

The new system of multiple-identity reporting would also ask students whether they are Latino or Hispanic and divide the Asian/Pacific Islander category into two distinct groups.

EVENTS HAPPENS FOR A REASON

From success at Florida to violations at UNLV, Tribble has plenty of experience.

CHRIS HOLTZ
The ESPN cameras are everywhere, and the flashbulbs over the Citrus Bowl hardy put a damper on the electricity coming from the Citrus Bowl. It is Friday night, October 13, 2000, and the Pittsburgh Panthers are looking for their way out of the tunnel, a cascade of boos from the 83,000+ in attendance during for their hard-fought victory. Everything was perfect.

Standing on the sidelines is Keith Tribble, talking to the sideline reporter about his coaches: "Dave [Wannstedt] And that's wearing gold - and blue." Why does he have that Pittsburgh logo on his polo? Not to say that decisions would have been made exactly the same way - they likely wouldn't have been - but just three years before he accepted his first Director of Athletics position at UCF, Tribble was a serious candidate for the same position at the University of Pittsburgh.

"I think it's right that the right person gets the job; it was the right fit for Jeff," Tribble said. But there are no regrets for Tribble, who went on to be the administrative aide to Pitt's athletic director. "I think everything happens for a reason, you know."

Every thing indeed does happen for a reason, and TRIBBLE was certainly a reason.

This year the UCF women's soccer team isn't too short on goals, they're also short on time.

"Last year we won Conference USA and we want to repeat this year," said coach Amanda Cromwell. It might seem like an obvious goal, but with one weekend left of the regular season, something still needs to be determined: whether that goal will be met or not.

"We have to have a better overall performance this year so we can get a big bid," Cromwell said, "but we want to win the conference." Cromwell said.

"I think that the team bonded together and believes in together. It's that team unity, overall talent and everything indeed does happen for a reason, and TRIBBLE was certainly a reason.

Mistakes prove costly in loss against Florida

"What matters is we got bet­ter as a team and we got better individually," Cromwell said. "I think it's important to have to have that."

"I think under the new system it's going to be a lot of quality players," Cromwell said. "We've got a lot of players play well this weekend. Not only did they play well, but they would have beaten the Gators if it wasn't for a few minutes.

"You can't make mistakes against Florida," Cromwell said. "We didn't exploit their mistakes as well as they exploited ours and that's why we lost today.

The team also used the enabling tech to try a few things that they normally wouldn't have during the regular season.

"We got a little lucky today with a three-ball formation," Cromwell said. "We normally have a four-back formation."

"We had the ball in the open net, so we exploited a little bit today. UCF is a fast and strong team and we got caught off shape today."

UCF will have to get in shape and get in shape fast because the road to the NCAA tournament won't be easy.

UCF plays Florida State, ranked first in the Southeast Regional poll, in two weeks but the first real test is right off the bat with the intersectional weekend this week against the Rebels.

"We have all quality, hard-working players right away," Cromwell said. "We want to mask all our talent.

"We are going to be very competitive," Cromwell said. "I think people are going to see what it wants and it's going to really be competitive."

"We don't expect to be competitive," Cromwell said. "We're just going to try our best to make it happen."

Lieberman's senate bid bad for Democrats

Sen. Joe Lieberman, Democrat, recently announced that he will run for the senate seat from Connecticut. His run for the office is not a surprise, as Lieberman has not admitted defeat yet. But as an independent, Lieberman has yet to find his footing.

According to the Connecticut State Party, Lieberman has not admitted defeat. But Lieberman has not admitted defeat. But Lieberman, one of the most talked about campaigns this year, has yet to find his footing. Lieberman is a popular candidate in Connecticut for the ballot midterm.
