Honors College gets new crop of scholars

Freshmen drawn to program by scholarships, reserved dorm, smaller classes

TROY MILLER

This is the first

Among the roughly 4,000 freshmen recently admitted to UCF, a few are of some of the best and brightest high school students in the country thanks to the ranks of the Burnett Honors College.

With an average SAT score of 1534, the incoming class includes 27 National Merit Scholars, 63 AP Scholars and eight National Hispanic Scholars.

While UCF’s name recognition has been steadily increasing, its rigorous student academic accomplishments qualified them for admission to more prestigious universities. So the question here is: What is it about UCF that hired these students in Orlando?

UCF makes no secret to it. It actively courts these students, often using scholarships as a way to get students to take a closer look at the school. “For me, choosing to come here was a money issue,” said sophomore Jennifer Sorenson, 19. My first choice was the University of Florida, and even though I got admitted, UCF offered me much more money.”

Admissions to the honors program is competitive, with only 2,367 of the incoming class officially placed into the honors college. After students are admitted, however, they usually find that their hard work has been worthwhile, partly because of the perks they are offered.

One of the perks that UCF offers students in the honors program is the option to live in a residence hall that is reserved for students in the honors college.

Well Rounded

Students crowd the Student Union during the school year’s end. “Backwards” can be found, unfurled and placed on the Student Union. Taking place from about 3 to 5 p.m., students who had not seen one another since the end of the spring semester took the chance to catch up. While African-American students often take part, many other students did as well.

There was once a time when women were not allowed to attend college or have any jobs. This is not the case today. Not only is female enrollment in college beginning to surpass that of males, one of the amounts in varying fields is in engineering, if not surpassing the number of males.

However, one of the few majors that remains male dominated at UCF and in the rest of the nation is engineering.

According to the Journal of Engineering Education, the percentage of women in engineering majors has increased since 1995. There were 4,268 men and 2,117 women in the College of Engineering and Computer Science at UCF in 2006, meaning women made up about 46 percent of the majors. In 2001, the preliminary fall enrollment shows 328 men and 697 women, or 35 percent of this major.

According to the American Society for Engineering Education, UCF ranks 40th among 341 colleges for the number of undergraduate engineering degrees awarded to women.

The reason UCF may be ranked in the top 12 percent for women graduating with a bachelor’s degree in engineering is in part due to the fact that the University of Engineering, which provides support to women engineering students.

In 2005, the UCF chapter received the 2nd place award for Outstanding Collegiate Section from the SWE national organization.

In conjunction with UCF’s effort to acquire more minorities, SWE’s outreach program brings in gifts of all ages to encourage them to excel in math and science.

Students are not just learning about science; they are also learning about the political world. UCF’s students are no exception.

The sharp decline in the level of accepted minority acceptance rates last year has dropped the minority acceptance rates since last year’s figures, however, are the racial percentage ages that average into the top 20 percent. The acceptance rates of the two largest minority groups at UCF appear to be falling faster than those of white students.

Black acceptance rates were down 33 percent this year, while Hispanic acceptance rates fell 18 percent and 35 percent. Acceptance rates of white students were down 29 percent, less than the 33 percent drop for African-Americans which includes the racial groups in all.

The steep decline in the level of accepted students stems from having more applicants to choose from and more applicants who consider UCF their first-choice school, according to Assistant Vice President of Admissions Gordon Chavis.

“With more and more students applying to choose from, UCF has had the good fortune to become more competitive,” Chavis said. “In the last year, the average SAT score rose to 1300. That’s an increase of 25 points.”

Paper or plastic? Cash or change? Republicans or Democrats?

How many times can you remember your local checkout clerk asking about your political affiliation in reference to your everyday purchases?

Politics has moved beyond the voting booth and into the realms of your marriage acqui­ sitions.

New sites GOPazon.com and DEMazon.com offer the same things that you would expect, buy every day, with an added perk of 99 cents going back to your political party of choice.

The host-picks option is cost­ extra. These college students want students to know the different policies that support or allow both left­ or­ right­ leaning policies.

GOPazon is affiliated with the Heritage Foundation, and DEMazon’s connection is to the Center for American Progress. Neither parties are specifically the parties they support. Contributions do not equal membership in any political party. For example, you can face­ to­ face a different organization backing the entire party.

So how much effect can your 99-cent contribution to the initiative of your choice really make? Not much, unless many more people begin shopping through those sites.

Michael Mendioso, president of the College Democrats, says the way to make an impact is to increase numbers. Five hours ringing doorbells and making phone calls for a local representative is more valuable to a political party than a sample of cents from textbook purchases.

“If you want to make a differ­ ence, make a difference,” Mendioso said. “Get out there and take your time and energy and really that’s what they need and that’s what’s the biggest contribution you can give.”

The question then remains: Are these sites really a good

May cause burning with urination, genital pain or painful discharge. In women, genital infection may cause burning with urination, vaginal discharge, pelvic pain or spotting. In women, the infection can potentially ascend to the fallopian tubes and lead to a serious genital tract infection that can result in severe pain and potentially a life-threatening infection.

Additionally, there are concerns that untreated chlamydia can impair future fertility and sometimes be associated with an unusual autoimmune disease called Reiter's syndrome.

This condition is associated with eye, joint and heart problems.

Consistent proper use of condoms will reduce the risk of chlamydia. In the college population, we will often see patients who relate that they are having "serial monogamy," or a series of single relations over time. Since chlamydia may be asymptomatic, this initial monogamy provides no protection against the infection.

There are a variety of tests that can screen for chlamydia. A culture can be obtained from the site, or with genital chlamydia, a sample of urine can be tested. At Health Services we encourage sexually active college students who relate that they are having a "monogamous" relationship, but in reality they are having sexual intercourse. This translates to potentially thousands of students at UCF who may be infected.

I have heard that chlamydia is a common infection, please tell me more.

Nearly one out of four persons infected with chlamydia have no symptoms. Nearly three out of five persons infected with chlamydia have no symptoms.

Large studies have shown that up to 30 percent of sexually active college students may be carrying this infection. In a small study at UCF last spring we detected a 5.8 percent incidence of chlamydia.

This translates to potentially thousands of students at UCF who may be infected. In men, genital infection may cause burning with urination, genital pain or painful discharge. In women, genital infection may cause burning with urination, vaginal discharge, pelvic pain or spotting.

WASHINGTON — Women may buy the morning-after pill without a prescription — but only if they’re 18 or older, federal health officials ruled Thursday, capping a contentious 3-year effort to ease access to the emergency contraceptive.

Girls 17 and younger will need a doctor’s note to buy the pill, called Plan B, the Food and Drug Administration told manufacturers Barr Pharmaceuticals Inc.

The compromise decision is a partial victory for women’s advocacy and medical groups that see eliminating sales restrictions could cut in half the nation’s number of unintended pregnancies. Opponents had argued that wider access could increase promiscuity.

The pills are a concentrated dose of the same drug found in many regular birth-control pills. When a woman takes the pills within 72 hours of unprotected sex, they can lower the risk of pregnancy by up to 89 percent. If she already is pregnant, the pills have no effect.

The earlier it’s taken, the more effective Plan B is. But it can be hard to find a doctor to write a prescription in time, especially on weekends and holidays. Hence the push to allow nonprescription sales.

Barr has said it hopes to begin nonprescription sales of Plan B by the end of the year. The pills will be sold only from behind the counter at pharmacies — so the pharmacist can check photo identification — but not at convenience stores or gas stations.

There isn’t enough scientific evidence that young teens can safely use Plan B without a doctor’s supervision, Dr. Andrew von Eschenbach, the FDA acting commissioner, said in a memo.

But Barr did prove that over-the-counter use is safe for older teens and adults — and licensed pharmacies are used to checking for proof of age 18 before selling tobacco and certain other products, von Eschenbach wrote in explaining the agency’s age cutoff.

“Any approach should help ensure safe and effective use of the product,” he concluded.

Plan B’s maker was disappointed that FDA imposed the age restriction and pledged to continue working with the agency to try to eliminate it.

“We will still feel that Plan B should be available to a broad by those 18 years of age and older as an over-the-counter pill,” said Bruce L. Drumwright, Barr’s chairman.

As a condition of approval, Barr agreed to track whether pharmacies are enforcing the age restriction, by among other things, sending anonymous shoppers to buy Plan B. FDA said there is no need for formal tracking at least twice in the first year of sales and annually thereafter, and report stores that break the rules to their state pharmacy licensing boards.

Nine states — Washington, California, New Mexico, Alaska, Hawaii, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Vermont — already allow women of any age to buy Plan B without a doctor’s prescription from certain pharmacies.

Proponents of those pharmacy access programs believe that wider access could give younger women an opportunity to avoid an unwanted pregnancy.

FDA spokesman Chris Wray said the agency needed to determine how to enforce those age restrictions.

FDA’s approval of Plan B sparked a filmmaking. Critics charged that political ideology had trumped science, while reproductive-rights groups used the occasion to urge voters to elect a Democratic president who would reverse the agency’s decision.

The FDA approved prescrip­tion-only sales of Plan B in 1999, and the drug is sold nationwide without a doctor’s note began in 2003. That year, the agency’s independent scientific advisers overwhelmingly backed non­prescription sales for all ages, and FDA’s staff scientists agreed.

But high-ranking officials rejected that decision, citing concern about young teens’ use of the pills without a doctors oversight. Barr urged, asking that women and older be allowed to buy Plan B without a prescription. Then, last August, the FDA reinstated its final decision indefinitely, saying the agency needed to determine how to enforce those age restrictions.

But opponents of wider availability, including the pro-life group Concerned Women for America, said Plan B’s wider availability could give young women a false sense of security, since it isn’t as effective as regular birth control.

Still, nationwide nonprescription sales were widely considered a huge step forward.

Andrew Bridges, an FDA spokesperson, said Barr is to conduct that for­mation and the agency’s new head.

“Statutory rape is a very seri­ous problem. This decision is going to allow statutory rape victims to rely on this drug to cover up their abuse,” Wright said.

SWE to hold annual kickoff to gain female involvement

The program also shows how the younger students can use their creativity and make a difference through engineering.

These outreach programs have speakers, workshops and activities to provide girls with more information about the field.

Also, SWE holds an annual kickoff that is open to engineering majors as well as majors in mathematics, physics, chemistry and other sciences.

"This is an opportunity for women to view the success of other women in their field."

The kickoff will be held Wednesday, August 30 at 7 p.m., in the Cape Florida Ballroom in the Student Union.

There will be speakers, door prizes, free food and lots of information. This is an opportunity for women in the science fields be in the company of each other.

Although women are hard to come by in engineering, Dr. Reinhart said that if women were given the same opportunity to help humanity it may become more appealing.

"It's something, it's how the field is viewed," Beth Regan, vice president of the UCF chapter of SWE said, "We have to go by the numbers, you want to buy something and have it benefit the Heritage Foundation, go for it." he said. "It's your choice. It's a free country and you can use your money however you feel necessary."

SAT scores among reasons for lower acceptance rates

"There seems to be a lot less minority students," L.J. Chappelle, a 22-year-old African American student, said. "It's not just at UCF that the number of black students seems to be declining."

"At FSU it's the same way." Chappelle said. "They don't want more black students. It's a fact."

"But this conflicts with a recent report that the black population at the University of Florida is up substantially."

"Through USDA fewer students have been accepted to UCF this year, the official figures, based on how many students actually enrolled in classes, won't be available for another month."

INTRODUCING KEITH TRIBBLE: PART 3 OF 3

Fan base starts on campus

Students the target in race to catch UF, FSU, Miami

CHRIS HOYT
Sports Editor

It’s the scene every fall Monday on UCF’s main campus in Orlando. After an hour of searching for a parking spot, a vehicle stops on campus and takes a walk starting from the Student Union.

As they check the campus, this person spots some students wearing orange and purple hats, others with garnet and gold jerseys and the occasional green, white and orange T-shirt.

Based on this scene, it would be easy to assume that UCF doesn’t have its own athletic program. While there are no statistics to back this up, it seems as if everyone is so into the University of Florida, Florida State University and the University of Miami ORL as there are of UCF something that won’t change with just one winning football season.

Keith Tribble took that walk when he took over as UCF director of athletics in June and by the time he got to his office on the other side of campus, the conclusion was simple.

“One of things I’ve noticed in my short tenure here is that very few students wear UCF shirts.” Tribble said.

“That’s very uncommon. You give a lot of students and students will wear either the colors or the name of the university. I’m not really concerned about the reason why, it’s not really important, what is important is that we know what the challenges are from a team, about a team, and the competition they faced and what they learned in the team’s scrimmage this weekend. It is that we know what the challenges are, what we’re doing here, and it’s very exciting.”

Keith Erwin said.

Although the team, including the six returning from last season, had a different season as freshman, to this year’s squad.

“We are talented, we are fast, we are strong, we are athletic, but we are young.” Erwin said.

Ranked as the 29th recruiting class by the National College Soccer News, the Golden Knights will introduce 19 newcomers, 15 of whom are freshmen, to this year’s squad. They have the potential of what we’re doing here, and it’s exciting.”

Coach Erwin will look not only to his young to fresh faces to step up their game but to the leadership of the six returning players.

“I think our strength really is our depth the outside, and I know the freshmen are working on the outside, and the freshmen are working on the outside.” Erwin said.

In doing so, the Knights will weigh much of their success on the handshaking of the six returning players.

“I think there’s the most important thing is that we know what the challenges are,” Erwin said. “What we know is what it’s going to take. We are talented, we are fast, we are strong, we are athletic, but we are young.”

Erwin said.

What to expect: in mostWebSocket games, originally to continue in 2005 but turned over to 2.0 in 2004-05.

Four

August polls are absolutely useless

Throughout the season, the Future ran a series in this section highlighting the preseason, Top 10 for the college football season.

You probably didn’t notice, since you were likely where I wanted to be as far away from Orlando as possible. But, just as I didn’t let you blind with this column, I’ll sum up my musings succinctly: I completely disagree with the coaches and the Associated Press.

Here are a few examples.

“The Louisiana State Tigers are ranked ninth by the coaches and eighth by the AP. I have them 27th.”

The Navy Midshipmen did not receive a single vote in either poll. “I have them 65th.”

The Louisville Cardinals are ranked 15th in both polls. Now, as you may know, if you’re one of those UCF fans that will wish the Big East that every opportunity you’ll want to stop reading before I tell you where I have them. “I have Louisville taking the No. 1 spot on my preseason poll, going 13-2-0 and winning the National Championship. I have town, ranked 30th and 35th by the coaches and AP. I completely disagree with the coaches.”

Keith Tribble took that walk when he took over as UCF director of athletics in June and by the time he got to his office on the other side of campus, the conclusion was simple.

Bowden still searching for starters

Three positions open as 'Noles get ready for opener

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — With less than two weeks until Florida State opens its season in Miami, many questions still have not been answered in the tight end, place-kicker, and punter positions.

Coach Bobby Bowden said he hopes to decide who will start at each position by the end of the week, but was not sure if that was going to happen.

The longer tight end Charlie Graham is expected to start, but it is undecided right tackle, with Andrew White the likely starter. The Florida State offensive line will be forced to start one of two true freshman, either Carl Pierson or Brandon Warren, on Sept. 4 vs. Miami.

Bowden said that if Pierson has the inside track to start, Graham will be unable to go. Bowden opened up competition at right tackle after a poor performance by starter Terry Cominsky in the Orange Bowl. Cominsky missed two field goals in overtime and an extra point in regulation in Florida State's triple overtime 26-23 loss to Louisville, have been in a heated battle since spring practice at the punter position.

Bowden will have another opportunity to evaluate his kickers and punters on Thursday during the team's special teams scrimmage.

MIAMI (AP) — Former University of Miami linebacker Willie Williams has enrolled at a community college in California, his new coach said Wednesday.

Williams is attending West Los Angeles College, coach Craig Austin said.

"He is an immediate impact player who made the defensive play at the tempo and level, and that was just the first day of practice," Austin said. "I'm extremely excited that he's here in the program." Austin said he did not expect Williams' behavior to be a problem.

Williams asked Miami to release him from his scholarship last season, ending a saga that started in February 2004, when his record of 11 arrests was revealed publicly on the Florida State campus.

Middle Blocker

While many feel that out­side hitter is the star of the show, and deepest position, the spirit of preparing and training for the middle blockers, in 2006, is strong.

They have a mix of the right combinations in CUSA in the form of experienced senior Jenry Herport, along with CUSA fresh­man Cassie Colado. They had walk-on Jenry Herport in the back row and Cassie Colado finished third in the nation, blocks and assa­ssins, junior from a senior, Maria, was also a solid front line leader.

As one of four seniors on this team, Mitchell under­stands the importance of her role.

"I think it's really important that you show your program works so that they can fill up the next year to your next group of freshmen to and from our team," she said.

Her partner on the front­row is sophomore Leah Alexander, who also has a solid freshman counterpart in Cassie Colado.

"We have a great chemistry and it's going to be a big deal," said senior Joe Maddon said.

Alongside Mitchell and Herport, the Knights look to bring freshman Lauren Williams, Mary/Kelly/Attacker, and Birmingham-Southern transfer Stephanie Serra for added frontcourt strength. Serna will play in matches in conference season as a Panther, yet her back-to-back at double-digit kill performances (11.51 kills per set) make her a solid presence.

LETT’S BE FRANK

Social crowd sways to local band John Frank

August 18 wasn’t just a regular Friday night at The Social. People of different ages gathered for the performances of several bands with many attendees focused on one in particular. Even professors were among the mix waiting to hear musical group John Frank.
Summer disappointments with unlikeable movies and underwhelming titles

WILLIAM GOSS

Personally, this summer brought out one of the most disappointing, meaningful experiences in years. Finally, a movie with genuine thrills, chills, and excitement, with great special effects, solid performances and a relentless pace, a film with all those pitch-perfect elements of a classic blockbuster.

It featured Samuel L. Jackson.

And it was released in 1994. For a fortunate few, a mid-night screening of SuperPatriot: the AMC Loews Universal 20 on the first weekend of June proved to be more entertaining and last longer than the previous month’s releases, and it would eventually manage to be a better experience than just about every other film that would light up the screen of the rest of the summer. (Then again, it didn’t hurt that it was still at the time a great chance to check out every line of Sam’s dialogues.)

However, as this summer movie season dragged on, the lights went out on the only thing dimming, as too many unlikeable movies, too few nauseatingly-funny flicks, and a hearty helping of underwhelming titles ended up constituting what could arguably be considered the most disappointing cinematic summer in recent memory.

Every year, you look for that one out-of-body experience, like the Star Wars or Raiders of the Lost Ark, and then you watch something like that,” said Roger Moors, the Orlando Sentinel’s resident movie critic. “This was a summer where people could get sucked out over a movie like Snake on a Plane just because of the title.”

Steve Schneider, film critic for Orlando Weekly, said the appointment is relative, because “it’s hard to see that it’s a disappointing summer when there were so few things I held out hope for and after having such a good action-adventure film like ‘Miami Vice’

‘How can anyone be disappointed in this time? ‘Cool Hand Luke’ era, when you’re in the business or even remotely interested, you already know everything about everything! In this day and age, unless you deliberately avoid all information about a movie, you can’t escape it.”

CAB makes Sparxxx fly

Meet-N-Greet welcomes all students

WOODY WOINNACK

What better way to kick off the 2006-07 school year than with a big party? That's what the Campus Activities Board, better known as CAB, will be doing tonight at 6 p.m., in the Memory Mall on campus.

The event is the annual CAB Meet-N-Greet, and every UCF student is invited. The Meet-N-Greet will feature a live performance by top-selling artist, Bobbie Sparxxx, free giveaways from CAB, Disney and Apple, free food and even bounce-house type inflatables.

In past years, the Meet-N-Greet was just that — a small, casual event usually with a movie showing, but this year is different.

"We wanted to do something a little more," said CAB Student Director Brian Hicks. "We're expecting close to 1,000 students ... This is going to be the biggest Meet-N-Greet ever.

Many acts were considered but ultimately Sparxxx was selected. "We wanted to have a pop or hip-hop act because homecoming is bringing in an alternative group," Hicks said. However, when pressed to reveal the acts for homecoming, Hicks was mum. "You'll have to wait a few more weeks," he said.

The House of Blues was integral in bringing Sparxxx to the Meet-N-Greet.

"They're our music partner. They help us bring all of our acts," Hicks said.

All CAB committees will be at the event with free staff and opportunities to get involved. "We always need more people to get involved," said Cinema Director Evi Christodoulou. "Some of the concert committee members are even going to act as mentors (Bobbie Sparxxx)." The event will be alcohol-free with all beverages being supplied by City Beverages of Orlando.

Bobbie Sparxxx, whose current album, The Charm, is close to reaching platinum status, is best know for the hit song "Mr. New Booy" with featured production from Lil Jon and additional vocals from the Ying Yang Twins. Other hits from Sparxxx include "Ugly," which features vocals and production from mega-producer Timbaland, and the hit single "Hey Pe Pe." Sparxxx is currently signed to The Purple Ronnie Label, which is run by Outkast member Big Boi. In addition to Bobbie Sparxxx, two other acts will be performing on stage, the musical groups Stump and Greyacoustic.

The event will kick off another busy year for CAB, which is known around campus for bringing famous speakers, comedians and musicians to UCF at no cost to the students. Future events include a screening of the movie The Break-Up, a speed-dating event, and featured speakers Danny and Melanie from the MTV show The Real World. CAB is funded through activity and service fees charged to all students with the cost of notation. For more details about how to get involved with CAB or information on future events visit www.cab.ucf.edu.

Rory on Fast Track into the Mainstream

KATIE PATRICK

Their name is Rory and they hail from Alleman Springs. They are a five-piece pop-punk band on their way to going mainstream.

The band has signed with One Eleven Records and is releasing its debut album, We're Up To No Good, We're Up To No Good on Sept. 12. Rory's album was produced by some big names, including Matt Thorrpe (Moton-City Soundtrack, Moe), John Artika (Glee Big Fish) and Matt Malpass of the West End. Rory is on track to the big time.

One song on the album says "top chart." It is "Dela Vezouer," or as it is better known, Fall Out Boy with a pinch of Taking Back Sunday. "Dela Vezouer" is the title track, and the first single Rory will release off the album, which will be released, Sept 12.

"Everybody Blasted Me And It Didn't Even Hurt." The title alone does the song justice. Stabbing each other and betreyal seem to be common themes in pop-punk lyrics, nothing anyone hasn't already heard.

What it boils down to is the songs are almost exactly like the other bands. Just replaced with different words. Rory is just the collection on a long train of bands to talk the same topics, but it still gives the same overall sound when it has the talent to break away from the pack and make a name for itself.

Rory has catchy lyrics and good musicians. You can even claim some sound points by knowing the bands music before it hit the mainstream. So if you are growing tired of waling for Fall Out Boy to produce their next album and need a fresh taste of pop-punk fii, check out Rory.

It's about new experiences, your independence and being responsible. If you're over 21, please drink responsibly.

Is Paola's worth the wait?

Grill has large portions of delicious comfort food, slow service

ALEXANDRA SCHWARTZ

I know good food. As a close friend once put it, "if it was reinvented in heaven, I would want my last meal prepared by you." The downside to having a character that you admire is that every restaurant I attend it under strict scrutiny. I recently found myself in the position of walking in and must prove its worthiness for my continued patronage.

Paola's Grill is a quaint, little restaurant perpendicular to Disney's Animal Kingdom Trail. Walking in, I have a clear view of a Delicious sign and about 30 tables. The walls are yellow brick, off set by the rustic red window shutters. With such colors as yellow and red tend to invoke saucy appeal, but cool colors such as blue and green do the opposite. Do you think McDonald's came up with the "Goldfinn Arch" on the red background?
The food at Paola's is authentic and plentiful. The menu items are limited but varied enough so that these are something for everyone. My favorite is the Combo No. 3, which includes half a roasted chicken, two side dishes and a soda for $5. The chicken is juicy and cooked to perfection. Though a little dry, but the sweet plantains make up for it with their juicy, tangy sweetness.

Other menu items include "salte encabreado" (creek simmered with corn), "chicharrones de pollo" (bits and pieces of "sassy" seasoned chicken). Don't forget to turn the menu over to read about the sandwiches and beverages. They offer "jugos naturales" (natural juices) in pomegranate, aracena and tamarind flavors. For patrons 21 and older, I recommend the sangria, a mixture of wine and fruit.

For atmosphere and large portions of comfort food, this is a great restaurant. The seating in our visit, the service did not match the food. Although the restaurant's one waiter was friendly and accommodating, we found him apologizing for having us wait about 25 minutes before taking our order. Only two other tables were occupied when we arrived, a party of about 12 and a table of four. No one was eating. About 20 minutes after we arrived, two males lazily danced out of the kitchen and were presented before two diners in the group of 12. Overhearing one of them say, "We waited for half an hour, go ahead and start, it will get cold," it was disconcerting to realize that my guest and I would be there for the long haul.

How could the kitchen have been "hurried up," as we were told, when only three tables was occupied? The wait was ridiculous.

Even if you have room, you might not get to try a dessert. When we requested the "saco leches" (three milk's cake), we were told we would be eager to tell you, "time over and over again."

The three-bit band had additions to its performance that night. Throwing a saxophone, a tambourine and a flute into the musical package of the classic bass, guitar and drums fused the melodies into a hypnotic trance, making the audience follow the solos through the emotional lyrics.

Along with the highly involved fans were some important onlookers. Vocalist/guitarist John Frank’s parents were on the scene, supporting their son for the first time at The Social. The proud parents gloated as they watched their son perform his heart out at 11 p.m., a little past their bed times.

Having influences such as the rock gods themselves, Led Zeppelin, as well as The Beatles, James Taylor, Pearl Jam and Nirvana, the band classifies itself as indie while the sounds it produced came across as a lighter James Taylor with a touch of emo pop.

Songs with lyrics such as a guy screaming that his girlfriend is “treating me like I am her goddamn Superman” and “I don’t want to be the one staring down the lonely gun” clearly identify an aura while focusing on relationships.

Despite the somewhat emo lyrics, the crowd seemed to dive more into the flow of the music.

An unexpected jam session broke out toward the end of the set, blowing away skeptics of the band’s abilities and turning the free-spirited, relaxed environment into an unpredictable arena of musical energy spiraling around the listeners. The guys even came back to perform more songs at the crowd’s request. As if the music reverberating off the walls wasn’t enough noise for the crowd, people shouted and cheered over the clamor in their ears, becoming one with the movement of ideas and emotions of the band, a moment every show wants to achieve.

John Frank’s first album, released in May, can be purchased on the upcoming website of the band, johnfrankmusic.com. One of the band’s singles is freely available on its MySpace site, http://www.myspace.com/johnfrankmusic, and is iTunes compatible. With the ability to reach such a diverse group of people, John Frank’s performances can escalate. Future dates of local venues can be found on the MySpace site.

So the next time you want to hear a laudable rock/emo/pop local band, or want to drink a cold one and rub elbows with UCF students and maybe even a professor, check out the upcoming shows and support your local bands.
Pirates, Da Vinci, MI:3 fall short never really truly surprised or disappointed.

Critical response managed to be uneven to make a once-interesting interest in the case of some of the biggest moneymakers. On Boston Simmons, a site that gathers review, awards a critic to an "ingentiously successful" case. The critic's note: "agreed on the genuine triumphant against its own Formula of the Dead Man's Chest. The second three-quarters of the movie brought in over twice as much money as Da Vinci.

The self-righteous weren't so lengthy, and review, with a new story arc filling the framework again, that could be enjoyed by the history of its history and the history of its audience. There was a certain amount of trouble in the second two-thirds of the movie, which brought in over twice as much money as Da Vinci.

"They should get an editor for the second act, because it just clicks down to fit in those storylines and makes them money off of a better movie, like someone at Warner Bros. demanded that - 'Superman' is in and 'Superman' comes in under two hours. 'Pirates', could not be trimmed down to something as a 90-minute movie of what's now, which feels like a director's cut, with all those scenes you're normally left out for the DVD.

'How are we two back-to-back openings of 'Monsters Inc., The Ball, and Rapunzel? Everyone's been talking about the overload of animated films, and they all come out to be about the same quality with the same subject matter and are almost all mediocre. 'Over the Hedge, a rather unimpressive summer movie, and I really liked Monster's Inc., which was the only one of the summer movies I've ever seen, because it's a classic horror movie.'

'Corl was a disappoint­ instance that Schneider said, "but going in, I hope to admit that I didn't think, and I thought better than that, just wasn't impressed, I think being an extra hour of the film. The Hedge ended up being about three times as long, and was the same original and enjoyable, but there was no need to keep building to a point where the audience would probably feel like they're going to end up there."

Moore and Schneider agreed on the genuine appeal of horror/animation successfully The Devil Wears Prada and the financially failure Mission: Impossible III was opposed to the first two, MI:3 wasn't as about memorable stunts, but generally suspense, and great characters, which happens to cost less," Schneider said, "and it was a good example of a real cozy spot in the right direction of populating a star vehicle with enough, other people besides Tom Cruise who, while he's there and it's his movie, it's not an instant winner project like 'Mission Impossible III' was, and it keeps the team spirit of the original show.

"It's a film that doesn't make us wish that it got the satisfaction it deserved, for a movie that exists outside of Disney, you bought two of these, no easier answer here.

'Blackwood has demstrated its knack for enter­tainment in its first and second, but never really as a cohesive piece.

"When everyone talks about, and I hate to say it but you can absolutely hear, that term, not to overlook the fact that a film that ends up being the biggest commercial success of the year was a failure," Schneider said. "But the ground the ground was paved and then it was set in a direction that until the last minute, because Pirates there everyone would have been on board, and it worked really well, but everything that the plot and almost everything that the 'First' Pirates of the Caribbean is a solid self-contained movie that exists outside of Disney, and there's no indication that Pirates of the Caribbean 3 may be any better than this one.

Then there was worst of the highly anticipated release of Snakes on a Plane, which wasn't reviewed for critics as a film's profile, the distribution, New Line Cinema, assumed that you couldn't possibly overlap with the first. Snakes ended up garnering better reviews and doing well above expectations.

'People are reading too much into the 'NOPE' grosses,' Schneider said. "It was a film that just as easily could've made the other way.

"A film not being screened isn't only indicative of a bad screening, but a studio doesn't have the test, but more, and there are those great genre films that are being hidden from us, because they assume we won't like them." Schneider, along with Moore and other colleagues, has added to the demand to give a shot to less work. The movie, which Liongate is proceeding to consist from prints, just as Warner Bros. will, with its remake of The Whaler Girl. Warner Bros. did not, however, hide. The film will be produced by a production company, which means that a creative creature, from reviewers, from before that some, crites were laughing aloud at the movie's sheer ineptitude, even to the point where one colleague stood up and began to sing his boos against the back wall of the theatre.

"And Snakes were two terrible movies that made for two of the best screenings I can remember," Schneider said. Warner Bros. also managed to underperform with its previous summer releases, to a lesser degree in base with Superman Returns and to a greater degree in May with Poseidon. There was no shortage of foul fare to take up screens and fill up theaters or flop trying, including The Break-Up, Click, The Four and the Fourth, Tadap, Little Miss, Nice, Me, & Anyspoke, Phone Home, Spy Guy, and Motel Girls, just to name a few. Movie of those films has a Rotunna score above 20 in 10 percent, and now have garnered a rating above two times when reviewed by myself, Schneider, or Moore, who noted that "This is what Woody Allen likes about how critics will tear up a movie just because it's them." Down comes the curtain on a rather unremitting summer slate. As Schneider said, "Ultimately, if any movie's good, I don't care if the fans are over­ exposed or how much the budget was or what other movies came before it.

With those words, here's to hoping that next summer's lineup is special, remarkably, and other tent poles are a good deal fuller than this year, if not, dinosaurs could very well find because they're already extinct, and the ancient remains of the block­ bust-100-000-000 members. At checkout enter promo code: UCF
