Students flock to bird flu drill

Delay due to holdup in plan as a whole, director says

Many student drivers have been anticipating the opening of the new parking garage near the main entrance of campus since last year when it was announced that they were going to have to wait a little longer.

The parking garage has been delayed. Some students were disappointed that the construction company was not doing more to speed up the process.

The parking garage was supposed to be finished by the start of the fall semester, but it has not been completed yet.

The garage was held up because the whole plan was on hold until the environmental issues could be fixed.

"The garage was held up because the whole plan was on hold until the environmental issues could be fixed," said John Clark, director of Parking Services.

Clark also said that the construction of the garage has been delayed due to the environmental issues.

The parking garage is expected to be completed by the end of the fall semester.

Terror attacks attempts in Britain reverberate in Central Florida's tourism

ALEX WALKER

The flurry of terror-related events in Britain on Aug. 31 that disrupted the suspect's pur­ suit of a new wedding on Wed­ nesday. The man was searched at a fair in the country and found to have a bomb.

The attack was thought to be the latest in a string of incidents in the region.

Abraham Pizam, dean of the Rosen College of Hospitality Management, said the British term will only make these events worse.

"This attack will have a dramatic impact on Central Florida's tourism economy," Pizam said.

Although Florida's Depart­ ment of Law Enforcement issued a travel alert for the region, Pizam said that the attack could have a negative impact on the local economy.

Changest to SAT Lead to Lower Scores

By LAWRENCE CAPETONI, COLLEGE BOARD PRESIDENT

When a new test is introduced, students usually vary their test-taking behavior in a variety of ways and this affects scores.

The initial indication SAT scores were down this year because students were performing at a lower level on the new exam. The results come after it was announced the College Board had pointed the biggest score increase in 20 years on the old ACT exam. The ACT, which also is accepted by almost all colleges that require standardized tests, generally is more focused on material covered in high school classes than the SAT, which is more of a measure of general ability. But more students in traditional SAT states like Connecticut and New Jersey appear to be taking both exams to try to improve their applications to selective colleges.

The College Board noted the drop in math scores amounts to one-tenth of one question and the reading test to 0.02 percent, but that the SAT math scores were down this year because of the new test.

The drop in critical reading scores from 580 to 460 while math dropped from 520 to 500 is due to the new exam. The College Board noted the drop in math scores amounts to one-tenth of one question and the reading test to 0.02 percent, but that the SAT math scores were down this year because of the new test.
The ever-growing waistlines of Americans expanded a little bit more in 2006 as 30 states registered an increase in obesity among adults.

The findings led some health care experts to dispute the notion Tuesday that obesity is simply a personal choice. They say that finding ways to improve these needs more attirons from the gove-nment and employers as well as the food and beverage industries.

The organization that tracked obesity on a state-by-state basis, Trust for America's Health, said better information and access are the keys to improving health.

"Populations are not equal," said Levi's organization found that nine of the 30 states with the highest obesity rates are in the South. Mississippi continued to lead the way. An estimated 28.6 percent of adults there are considered obese, Levi's followed by Alabama and West Virginia.

Meanwhile, Colorado remains the leanest state. About 16.9 percent of its adults are considered obese. That mark was up slightly from last year's report, but not enough to be considered statistically significant.

"The only state that experienced a decrease in the percentage of obese adults last year was Nevada.

"Obesity now exceeds 25 percent in 11 states, which should sound some serious alarm bells" Levi said.

Health officials warn that a high incidence of obesity in a particular state doesn't mean it treats the issue less seriously than others. States have different challenges to contend with, said Dr. Janet Collins of the Centers for Disease Controlled and Prevention.

"Policies are not equal in terms of implementing these health problems," Collins said. "Low-income populations tend to experience all the health problems we worry about at greater rates."

NASA resumes plans for launch

MIKE SCHNEIDER

Five hours after starting space shuttle Atlantis on a slow crawl toward its hangar, NASA changed course Tuesday and sent it back to the launch pad, saying the forecast for Tropical Storm Ernesto had improved.

"The hurricane track has taken it further west to where the winds have diminished and where we can tolerate them at the pad," said NASA spokesman Bill Johnson.

Ernesto's peak winds were expected to be less than 79 mph, the threshold at which it is mandatory to move the shuttle indoors, said NASA spokesman Bruce Buckingham.

It takes eight days of preparations for liftoff once the shuttle returns to the launch pad. That means NASA has about a day if it is to launch Atlantis by Sept. 7. If Atlantis does not take off by then, NASA may have to wait for weeks, because a Russian spacecraft is scheduled to travel to the space station next month with two new crew members, and the orbiting outpost would be too crowded for a visit by the shuttle.

NASA is negotiating with the Russians over the launch dates of both the shuttle and the Soyuz spacecraft.

These risks range from possible pregnancy to travelers returning from Vietnam within the last 10 days. In order to better identify the risks, every 20th participant was given a blue problem sheet indicating a special risk.

President’s Leadership Council volunteer and participating Camerata Long was non-selectively for a selected risk screening and had to be processed via a different set of standards.

"It's important to participate in something like this," Long said. "If anything were to happen, this kind of plan would help for a lot of different medical emergencies and not just virus fly."

The gravity of the issue is what inspired graduate student Craig Finch to participate in the drill.

"The avian flul pandemic has the potential to be the worst crisis we’ve seen in a long time," he said. "I’m participating because I want to help community and health care providers in any way I can."

"I learned about avian flu in microbiology and it seems really important to know what to do in case of an outbreak," she said. "In the airport, it’s important to worry about all the time, but I do it when I’m flying.

"However, not all participants were concerned about the onset of a pandemic. Curiosity ignited the interest of Camerata Long’s roommate, Carrie Conrad."

"I was walking through the airport with a baby and a told me about what was going on and said she needed 1000 people," Conrad said. "It sounded interesting, so I said I’d help out."

The last 25 students to arrive for the flight only had two minutes before the plane took off.

"I have an hour between classes and didn’t have anything else to do," Mazzie said. "I don’t really worry about it all the time, but I do it when I’m flying.

"It's a really well-publicized event. We’re going to help student organizations and Greek Life. It’s a unique event and people want to be a part of that," Register vice-chair and drill coordinator Claudia Witter said in a press conference.

"We know that if we fail to do it well, we fail to do it at all," she said. "We’ve been preparing for this since March. Much, much longer, I’m very confident that if the need arises, we’ll be ready."
Airport hassles may keep tourists away

"If security issues are constant from page news, people become scared. Fear is a huge noise. So is the hassle of travel," Fishman said.

And it's no small surprise that hassle plays a major factor in people's travel plans. A TSA representative told the Orlando Sentinel that the security agency is searching for and refining a "long-term solution," but in the meantime, the airport lines at security checkpoints are far more impressive than at any theme park attraction.

British airports faced similar delays in the immediate wake of the terrorist attacks; transatlantic flights have banned many common objects, from beverages and toothpaste, to cell phones and MP3 players, to laptops and books.

I suspect some British tourists will elect to stay home," Fishman said, "or simply travel within Europe by train.

Despite whatever instances must be taken to get to Central Florida, though, Wurst is confident that once vacationers arrive, "it's a whole new world.

"I really didn't notice any drastic changes in the day-to-day on the property," he said.

Airport Hassles May Keep Tourists Away

Katherine Wurst, manager of the Student Health Services, doesn't feel this project is a huge long-term solution. "We're always dealing with building the stadium and other issues, so it's basically reducing my quality of life," she said.

Students do have another alternative to accessing the campus for a parking spot to no avail. Parking services has provided two "Park & Ride" locations in the Central Florida Research Park. One is located at the Partnership II building off Technology Drive, and the other is in front of the Computational Building on Research Parkway. Shuttle services is free, and the buses stop every four minutes. The buses drop off students near the Student Health Services and Biology buildings on campus, and they also pick up there when students are ready to return to their cars.

The current construction on the parking garage at the entrance of campus is shown here. The opening of the parking garage was anticipated as students struggle to find parking during the first weeks of school.
Senior QB runs offense with nine returning starters

Steven Moffett has had quite a journey in becoming the starting quarterback of a burgeoning college football program. A highly-touted player coming out of Winter Park High School, Moffett has run the emotional gamut at UCF. Pass catchers lack experience with Smith’s confidence and competitiveness, he wants to be more of a leader this year. "Last year was one of the most frustrating games because we knew we were better," he said. "This year we just kind of have to put them back in their place."

But they are bringing in players that are as talented or maybe averaged double-figure points, for coach Mike di Stefano. "The whole team was upset after the Michelle Smith headman. "You think we realized we needed to do things better in order to win," di Stefano said. "For Friday the Knights play an in-state rival, Florida Atlantic, a team they should have beaten last year but didn’t.

Sometimes major government institutions need to be reformed. This phenomenon is especially pronounced while it is often slow and painful, can only lead to a more efficient client and streamlined government processes. The public can lead to a government that truly serves the citizens.

That is the Fair Tax plan.

Fair Tax is a proposal to replace the federal income tax with a national sales tax. The Fair Tax is a simple tax on the goods and services people buy. A single prosperity tax would be imposed on the consumption, not on the income. The Fair Tax plan would replace the federal income tax and many federal taxes with a single consumption tax. Under the Fair Tax proposal, there would be no more income taxes on business.

And without tax costs to levy, the adverse effects for the lobby lobbies would be cut down dramatically. Lobby costs would be cut down, taxes on business would be reduced, and taxes on normal people would be reduced.

The elimination of the current government collects revenue. If it were passed, it would eliminate the Internal Revenue Service and add the income tax.

Instead, our government would be funded through a 23 percent national sales tax on goods. What this means is if you pick a gallon of milk for one dollar, you pay one dollar. The tax affects the first good a person touches and the next good you spend.

Keep in mind that this is a change to a traditional sales tax. The federal government would collect the tax at the point of sale, not the point of purchase. The state government would currently do.

The nationwide sales tax truly is. this has to be a built-in incentive. Our state and local governments could be left with only a tiny useful tax burden.

The mechanics of doing this is simple. Each flight, every citizen of the country would check from the government a form to show how many goods you have to pay the state government.

The foreign poverty guidelines already calculate how much income people have to spend on necessities. The Fair Tax proposal would need to be adjusted to determine taxes.

For example, the poverty level for a three-person-family is $20,000. This family would receive a monthly tax rebate of $441. The person who would pay the tax has a single prosperity tax.

Realistically, there would be a number of flat-rate deductions passed.

For example, the economy would get a much needed boost, businesses have historically made decisions based on how they will be taxed.

For example, the Foreign Motors of German manufacture motors and an American company with a separate administration that a German company.

The result of that was an underwater Florida, which is lost in quantum theory. The reason the American government has a tax rate on sales tax.

The outstanding jobs by American employers by allowing our economy from the inside. The Fair Tax would allow for the company to compete with the U.S. tax rate of 15 percent.

This would bring American companies home from foreign companies to move American companies with our companies.

For example, the advantage of the American economy would be improved. The American society will improve.

We should help to improve the quality of life for all people. Reduced sales tax on the power to destroy.

The Forbes.com editor.

 Forbes.com editor: The success of women are bad housewives.

Ladies, aren't you happy when your man makes all the money and you have to work for a job? Aren't you more satisfied when you don't have to work? You won't work if your man won't work. We need a society that's fair and equal, and women don't have to work. They have to work, and it's not fair and equal.

If you're pressed by questions, you're not the only one. In his Friday article "Don't Marry a Career Woman," Michael Noer claimed that women "even those with weakly connected to the 'man himself.'" The man's role is to support the woman's career plans. He maintained that "women of average intelligence and intelligence are fiercely competitive in the market."

By discrediting the benefits of healthy foods are more expensive than junk food. If you're ever too ravenous to your body, you have a first food.

Scientists have also linked asthma to obesity. These genes make it easier for a woman to gain weight and harder for a person to lose it. From simple statistics, asthma can be a major problem for many people.

But now that food is plentiful in America, these same genes work against a person when they try to live a healthier life.

Now scientists are exploring the link between certain bacteria found in everyone's digestive tract to decide if the prebiotic dietary fiber, which is part of the human gut, can play a key role in survival in human environments.

Of course, none of this is about the benefits of food for all Americans. It is about the fact that the prevalence of obesity among the poor is one determinant of whether or not a person will be healthy.

Genetics, class and microbe make up a person's diet. Food is one of the true evolutionary hangovers and allow someone to be thankful.

For some people, being thin is just too stressful. But being healthy is. We need to recognize that differences are more understanding of the challenges they face.
