To SOO UCF football fans, a visit to ‘The Swamp’ is a golden opportunity to witness one sweet victory

Tiffani Anderson
Contributing Writer

This semester, 300 lucky UCF students have been attending games alongside their classmates in the Student Escort Program, or SEPS. The Student Escort Program offers tickets to students for select football games, providing them with a safe escort back to campus. However, this program has faced criticism from some students, who believe it is not fair to distribute tickets to students based on their gender. A recent incident involving a male student being denied a ride has sparked controversy, leading some to question the fairness of the program.

The Student Escort Program, or SEPS, is designed to provide students with a safe escort back to campus, but Christopher Downing, a UCF student, was denied a ride because he is a male. Downing, who was in the Student Escort Program, was denied a ride after being denied a ride by SEPS. This has prompted some students to question the fairness of the program, especially after the recent incident involving a male student being denied a ride.

Talabani says fighting will abate by 07; Iraqi forces could handle violence

REBECCA SANTANA in Baghdad

Coalition forces handed over control of Iraq's armed forces to the government Thursday, a move that U.S. officials have hailed as a crucial milestone on the country's difficult road to independence.

Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki signed a document taking control of Iraq's small and air forces and the 8th Iraqi Army Division, based in the south. However, it is still unclear how rapidly the Iraqi forces will be prepared to take over their own security.

"From today forward, the Iraqi military responsibilities will be increasingly conceived and led by Iraqis," Gen. George Casey, the top U.S. commander in Iraq, at a ceremony.

Handing over control of the country's security to Iraqi forces is vital to any eventual drawdown of U.S. forces here.

After disbursing the remaining Iraqi army following the U.S.-led invasion in 2003, coalition forces have been training the new Iraqi military.

However, it is unclear exactly how quickly Iraqi forces will be prepared to take over their own security.

Previously, the U.S.-led Multinational Forces in Iraq commanded by Casey, gave over the Iraqi army forces through a Joint American-Iranian headquarters as a chain of command. Senior U.S. coalition officers coordinated allied army divisions but Iraqi units were command by Iraqi officers.

The new chain of command flows directly from the prime minister in his role as Iraqi commander in chief through the Ministry to the Iraqi military headquarters. From there, the orders go to Iraqi units on the ground. Initially, this would apply only to the 8th Iraqi Army Division, the air force and the navy.

The other nine Iraqi divisions remain under U.S. command with authority gradually being transferred. U.S. military officials said there are not specific timetable for the transition.

Days before the engagement, the 8th Division's commander, Gen. Gen. Ghassan al-Alboudi, told The Associated Press his forces still needed support from the U.S.-led coalition for things such as medical assistance, storage facilities and air support.

U.S. military spokesman Maj. Gen. William Caldwell said Wednesday it would take al-Maliki to decide "how rapidly he wants to move along with assuming control."

"They can move as rapidly thereafter as they wish," Caldwell said. "I know conceptually, they've talked about perhaps two divisions a month."

The 8th Division was recently in the center of a fierce battle between Iraqi forces and Shiite militias. The division's troops fought militia men in the southern city of Dhi Qar, 80 miles south of Baghdad, for 12 hours in a battle that left more than 20 soldiers and 50 militia members dead.

Politicians have been optimistic about handover. President Jalal Talabani said Wednesday with such a meeting with British Foreign Secretary David Miliband in Baghdad, Iraq will have abided by the deal of 2003, and that Iraqi forces will be able to handle any remaining violence.

British troops handed over control to Iraqi authorities of the southern Muthanna province in July and al-Maliki has said another southern province, the Qadisiya, is to follow this month.

Violence continued in the hours before the hand over Thursday. Six bomb attacks targeting police patrols in Baghdad killed at least 17 people and wounded more than 50.

A suicide car bomb targeting a police patrol outside a gas station near the Elias Hospital in central Baghdad killed 10 people, including four policemen, and wounded 13, the prime minister's office said.

Another suicide car bomb in Talhami Square in the center of the city killed three policemen and wounded 12, the prime minister's office added.

No body was hurt in the first, but the second killed three civilians and wounded 12.

Another suicide car bomb in Talhami Square in the center of the city killed two civilians and two police special forces members, and wounded 13 people, police said.

In western Baghdad, a roadside bombing in Qatitani Square near Yarmouk hospital wounded four people, including a policeman, Mahmom Said. There, in the upscale district of Memvar, a roadside bomb explosion killed a man and injured his daughter and another person.

On Wednesday night, gunshots echoed in the area around Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki's official residence near the center of the city killed two civilians and wounded 21, police said.

Al-Qaeda plays video of bin Laden's funeral. Photo: Thomas Coex/AFP – Al-Jazeera: Cairo – Al-Qaeda leaders broadcast Thursday a previously unknown video of the preparations for the Sept. 11 attacks, in which Al-Qaida chief Osama bin Laden is meeting with some of the planners in an Afghan mountain camp.

The new video, which shows Bin Laden also is shown greeting some of the hijackers, although their faces were not clear and it was not immediately known which are the two men identifying him.

Al-Qaeda did not say how the video was produced or how it was transported. An expert on propaganda at a military website in Russia, however, said the video was produced by Al-Qaeda, which obtained a crashed POPCULTUREPERSPECTIVES.COM/2006/01/23/holidaySafe.html was published on Friday.

In one scene, part of the scenario that is depicted in the video is a scene from the film "The Unit: Commando," which was released in 2001, and one of the scenes is a replay of the moment when the man that killed Bin Laden was killed.

The video shows that Bin Laden is a dark robed and white headgear, walking through the camp and gathering scenes of Edmonton, and many masked and many carrying automatic weapons. A video producer praised the film and referred to the camp being "the most important place in the world, an area of importance for Americans."
Lower-priced menus expand

Face it, lower-priced menus are expanding fast. For example, Outback Steakhouse has plans to lower prices on sides, salads, appetizers and drinks by November.

Some family-style restaurants are trying to attract price-conscious consumers by offering special promotions and lower-priced fare. For example, Ruby Tuesday's has plans to lower prices on sides, salads, appetizers and drinks by November. Applebee's also plans to price-fine dinner specials. It now offers a three-course "Southwest Fiesta" promotion for $9.99. The promotion will include an appetizer, an entrée and a dessert.

Other restaurants offering value promotions include T.G.I. Friday's, The Cheesecake Factory, Béguins and Ruby Tuesday.

These chain restaurants find that they must respond to the demands of consumers. Statistic.

ical data from a company called Kapsie Track, which monitors the restaurant industry, reported that the 90-billion dollar casual dining industry posted a 1 percent decline in same-store sales in June and that counts shrank 8 percent.

Lowering prices seems to be the only flexible option. "This is unprecedented," said Paul Avery, COO of O.S. Restaurant Partners, which includes Outback Steakhouse.

Professor stumples across Meadows

Over the next three days, a group attempted to use the trim as a guide to make its way out of the woods. "We don't know where you're going, but we don't know where you are," he said.

After several hours, he said that he could even hear the traffic nearby, but he couldn't see any. He survived the four days solely on swamp water and gator.

After three days, Ron English, a UCF professor and fellow runner, decided to join the search. Monday looking for a body. English said.

During the search on Monday, English nagged that the search was "a gauntlet" coming from a swamp area nearby. He thought that he saw a man.

Fogarty said that T.G.I. Friday's offers students coupons that can take advantage of to save money on a dinner out.

"Friday's always has the meatloaf dinner special which poppe up every once in a while, where you can get each of these things for one charge price, $12.99 or something like that," Fogarty said.

Fogarty said that despite seeing promotions at Friday's, she has yet to see any promotional coupons that can be used on any menu. "As for prices going down, they're not," she said. "Usually with every other menu change comes a price increase. It may not be by much, but they're definitely not going down.

Escort service provides 252 rides in August

SEPS employee Andrew Martinez said picking up clients depends on the clients, but first, and which student is more relatable. The students always students the average student the average student.

"There's been a bunch of guys where we have a student that's driving the service for a first time," he said. "Every now and then, the students that actually want a relationship feel bad.

In a second incident in 2005, Downing said SEPS refused to provide an escort stating they did not only give service to females. After a late night study session is over, a student on the dark worried, he said.

Adam Coburn, 23, said he was denied service in late 2005 while walking the Wal-Mart Neighborhood Market by Patton Landings to buy groceries. He wanted a ride to Lake Claire Apartments in Academic Village to save himself some time and energy. "I knew I should have taken the bus, but I'm not a student, my students find a way to get around this service," Coburn said.

However, SEPS said that an employee was waiting for a guest, and he wasn't sure if this was his job or not. "I'm not a student, but I'm still a student," CoBum said.

Stadium Policies

Did it seem to anyone else who attended the game on Saturday that this wasn't the same old UCF fan base?

Now, to say that I understand completely what the UCF fan base was like before this game would be wrong. Because in my three and a half years at UCF this was the first game I've ever attended.

I know many of you are saying, "How could it possibly have an idea what that feels like?"

Well, in my 21 years I've been to almost every sporting event there is, including NFL playoffs, NBA Finals, Stanley Cup and National Championship games, and in each of these games I saw something that I saw yesterday's Optimist.

I saw the optimism when I first arrived at the stadium sometime around 2 p.m., when I was braving the cold to find my friends who were tailgating. As I walked down the street I saw a few things. I saw people who were proud to have a black and gold die cut on their cheeks who were wearing Florida, Florida State or Miami threads.

When I finally found my friends tailgating on the back of our truck, I sat and watched as people were happy to be there and just for the party. I saw some who were dressed from head-to-toe as Knights. I saw girls who had their stomachs and faces painted and I even saw a guy in fat suit challenging UCF to know he had to be a die-hard fan because no one would stay out in that heat in a fat suit if they weren't a fan.

Then as the party started to die down in the parking lots and the streets, my friends and I made our way to the student section. Now working for the paper allows me to do a few things, not many but a few and one of those are to go in the Media Entrance for sporting events. I figured at the beginning of the day I would do that. But as I walked up those steps...

There's no set criteria for finding a mid-season transfer capable of winning on the road against a bowl championship Series conference power.

But every year it happens once or twice, and in some cases, the win for the non-BCS conference team is a springboard to an at unbeatable season.

Texas Christian last season. Utah and Boise State in 2004. Northern Illinois in 2003. All went on the road and earned September wins over big-time schools on route to double-digit win seasons.

In Utah's case, it led to a BCS berth and an undefeated season, capped by a Fiesta Bowl destruction of Oklahoma. Those teams had two facts experience and confidence. They all returned nearly the majority of their previous years' rosters, something which they suffered very close losses to conference teams, giving them the confidence to go in to the season's fall games and come out on top.

The 2004 UCF Knights share those thoughts as well.

Experience comes in the form of a 13-year old team. The Knights enter into South Carolina last season.

In 2003, the year-opening defeat, UCF played in front of 7,500 rabid Gamecock fans dying to see new coach Steve Spurrier light up the base.

Instead, they saw a stifling run defense, likely help for the defense and off the offense to ruin games and one-the-one on following a first-quarter outburst.

A win over No. 7 Kansas in a mid-major victory and a national TV springboard to a run at an undefeated season.

Such a win will move UCF up the rankings and get the teams the confidence to go in to the season's fall games and come out on top.

From mirrored lenses to steel frames, sunglasses are always a fashion statement.

Big sunglasses have been all the rage in 2006 among college students and adults alike. The most popular style is said to mimic the pairs famously worn by Jackie Kennedy Onassis in the ’60s. Aviator sunglasses have also made a comeback. They were first made for military pilots in 1936, but became a fashion statement in the ’70s and ’80s.

So what if you look like a bug wearing them? They’re cool.
Local favorite Will's Pub ends run as a music venue to the dismay of fans

BART ZING

For 15 years it roamed the streets of Orlando with its tiny entry bend of local and national acts. Now, more than a year after an Orlando city council voted to expand a nearby health clinic, landmark Will's Pub is up for the sale for one last go.

On June 27, the Orlando City Council approved a request to expand the nearby Westview Park Urology Clinic, which is a parcel of land directly south of the existing Clinic. The additional land will cost about $1.12 million in health care dollars. The Orlando City Council also approved the sale of Will's Pub for $1.2 million.

While they were at it, the city council equipped a billboard flanking downtown and Loch Haven Park along the clack's north side. Bottom line: Will's Pub and adjacent Loch Haven Motor Inn were snatched in the middle of it all.

The closure received considerable attention from Orlando CityBeat, Orlando Weekly and even the Orlando Sentinel. And then there are the fans. Ask any Orlando native who has paid a visit to Will's will remember the years and they'll be happy to tell you about the good times gone by.

At first, there isn't much to look forward to. Will's Pub has a handful of pool tables scattered around, of course, and a fairly sizable stage. But for Orlando's local music fans, the run-down feel of the place just adds to the ambience.

As for the music, Will's has hosted its share of bands from across the musical spectrum: mentioning a handful here would barely put a dent in the wegen's record. Bands like Enuff Z'nuff, Loves Derive, Wasting Ash­field, The Hollies, The Style and Every Time I Die have all made noise in front of the venue over the years. Locally, the repertoire is even larger and includes The Pandemic Chanting, New Harmony, The Haunted, Canyaddi, The Evidentials and hundreds of other bands. As if that wasn't enough, Orlando's own jazz legend, Sam Rivers, played sets every Wednesday night. Orlando locals who have a guitar attached to the bar over the years have been told they're not moving.

"I grew up seeing some really great acts there. Everybody knows Will's Pub. I'm a little upset that they're moving," said Jennifer Shilling. "Moving" is probably the most appropriate way to put it. Given the support that will Walker has received from the patrons since the closure was made official, a fairly positive attitude remains about the venue's future. On Friday, Aug. 3, Will's hosted a benefit concert complete with money for a new venue and at first glance, you'd think it was able to tell from the Web site that it's closing down. With a few looking to update the site, however, will's hosts are prepared to stick around.

Either way, until these investors come hopping, it's unlikely that will's will return to the rock scene. Only time will tell.

For more on the upcoming event, see the band's new website.

"It's kind of sad to see Will's Pub go," said songwriter English Literature major Ashley Miller. The last scheduled performance for Will's will be on Tuesday featuring Sam Rivers. Other upcoming scheduled shows have been moved to Backbooth.

Urban Think! book signing features guide

ERINDA HUNTSMAN
Consulting Writer

Urban Think Bookstore will host a book signing from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday, November 26. Authors scheduled to appear is Sarah Mlynowski, co-author of See Jane Write: A Girl’s Guide to Writing Chic. Due to the growing trend in what is referred to as “chick lit”, it seems appropriate to feature her new book on writing for this mainstream genre.

This year, the Southern Independent Booksellers Alliance will be hosting their annual trade show at the Gaylord Palms Resort and Convention Center. In celebration of the trade show, Urban Think! was contacted about hosting a book signing with Mlynowski and several other writers.

While the goal of the book signing was the perfect event for such authors to introduce their books, it was also a chance for Urban Think! to attract the attention of many who were not currently looking for anything other than a good time. It was a chance to expose the books and authors to the people of the City, who may not have previously been aware of them.

The event started with the opening of the doors at 6 p.m. to the soft-spoken Mlynowski, who was accompanied by her husband, Jeff. Mlynowski is the author of the best-selling novel "Sparkles, Dazzle, and "Chic lit"." She is also the co-author of the "Start a Book Club" series, which includes "Sparkles, Dazzle, and "Chic lit"."

As the weather turned colder, the atmosphere inside the store became more intimate. The books on display were arranged neatly on tables, and the authors were seated comfortably. Mlynowski, with her friendly demeanor, greeted her fans and signed copies of her books.

The atmosphere was electric as the authors signed books and chatted with their fans. The store was filled with customers eager to meet the authors and learn more about their work. The event ended around 9 p.m., but the lively atmosphere continued as people remained to browse the books and socialize.

In conclusion, the book signing was a tremendous success. It provided an opportunity for the authors to connect with their fans and for Urban Think! to introduce new books to the public. The store was packed with a crowd of students, professionals, and even some who just wanted to enjoy the event.

For more information about Sarah Mlynowski and her books, please visit her website at sarahmlynowski.com. To learn more about Urban Think!, visit urbantink.com.
