After the deaths of their friend and neighbor Saturday, residents of University House on Audubon Trail turned the pole of the "no parking" sign that may have killed him into a makeshift memorial.

They taped a photo of Charles H. Hyde V to the pole, wrote "we miss you," and signed it "GBL East," a reference to the closest side street of next door Green Badger Lane. Roommates found 25-year-old Hyde, who was last seen trying to dialogue a sign from its pole with his upper body dead in his bathroom at about 5 p.m.

Hyder's roommates said he had noticed them of a large cut he sustained from the sign that morning but had refused medical treatment and then went into his room. Friends assumed he was sleeping, but when Hyder didn't emerge by evening, they forced their way through his locked door and then called police.

Though Hyde was not a UCF student, at least one of his roommates and many of his friends are. His death came as a shock to the residential development, which primarily houses students from UCF and Valencia Community College.

Twenty-year-old Alex Scherer, another Green Badger Lane resident, said he first saw Hyde at the scene as he was leaving to go grocery shopping at about 5:45 p.m.

"At first, I thought it was just a drug bust or a noise complaint," Scherer said. "I thought nothing of it."

When he returned home at 11 p.m., he found five police cars crowding the road and his neighbors gathered near Hyde's apartment. Scherer described the scene as "normal," perhaps a friend's house.

"The front street was taped off and I saw a body bag," Scherer said. "It was just a surreal night like a scene from CSI."

The next day, Scherer said he saw two women in blue medical uniforms carrying a large box into Hyde's apartment, presumably to clean it. However, roommates countered that there was very little blood at the scene.

Residents of University House on Audubon Trail tacked a memorial photo of their neighbor and friend, 25-year-old Hyde, to the pole of the "no parking" sign that may have killed him.

Policy helps to curb drug use

at UCF, Roop said, is doesn't consider marijuana-related crimes to be particularly out of control at UCF. In fact, Roop added, marijuana use seems to have declined in the last three years.

"Marijuana use is not new as bad since the housing rules have changed. Now being charged with drug use will result in your housing being taken away," Roop said.

Beginning In Fall 2005, Housing and Residence Life, under the direction of the Office for Student Rights and Responsibilities, changed enforcement rules to make possession of any drug or paraphernalia an offense warranting termination of the housing contract and/or local law enforcement agency action.

The new policy stated that "illegal possession, use or sale of or any attempt to obtain any illegal drug, drug paraphernalia (such as bongas, water pipes, bongs, pipes, syringes, etc.) or controlled substance (including marijuana) is strictly prohibited in the residential facilities. (Florida Statute 893.02). If you choose to possess and/or use illegal or controlled substances you will be subject to the full extent of University sanctions."

More of a problem than already out there, according to third-year psychology major Gabe Rozzo, thinks that the problem could actually be helped by his organization.

"I wish that when I was a freshman UCF would have made more of an effort to teach about the stuff that is already out there," said Rozzo.

"It is inevitable that sooner or later you can hit it. I just wish I had been better prepared to make an informed decision."

Roop added that he thinks "marijuana is ignored and not acknowledged by UCF. — Alcohol is just as abused, and consistently more hurtful, than marijuana, and the students deserve the right to educationally hear that information."

UCF STUDENTS COULD BE INFECTED WITH CHLAMYDIA AND NOT EVEN KNOW IT.

A bishop, a pastor, an imam, and a Jewish leader walk into a hotel. No, this isn’t a joke — these representatives were the distinguished speakers at the Third Annual Nile Foundation Dinner on Thursday.

The theme of the night was “Making Sense of Others,” tying into the Nile Foundation’s mission of bringing communities together in order to promote communication, cooperation, partnership, and community service through intercultural and interfaith dialog.

Throughout the year, the Nile Foundation hosts conversation circles, trips to Tel Aviv cooking classes, language classes and seminars, in addition to its annual dinner. The annual dinner consisted of a buffet-style meal, a picture slide show of sponsored trips made by community leaders in relation to the theme and the values of the Nile Foundation.

Also in attendance were several prominent UCF faculty members, including Jose Fernandez, Dean of the College of Arts and Humanities; St. Robert Cobey, Head of the department of Psychology; and Dr. Volker G. King, Director of the Office of Diversity Initiatives.

All spoke on the importance of cultural diversity, each bringing a different perspective to the podium.

The three faiths in the spotlight were: Judaism, Christianity and Islam.

“Each of these three great religions are centered around a book, and only the literate have access to the written word, whereas each culture promotes the advancement of education,” said Bishop Thomas Wendel of the Diocese of Orlando.

Students at UCF are able to immerse themselves in cultural activities through the Office of Diversity Initiatives. Established in 1994, the office was designed to advance and coordinate UCF’s efforts to promote diversity and inclusiveness.

“Students at UCF are able to immerse themselves in cultural activities through the Office of Diversity Initiatives. Established in 1994, the office was designed to advance and coordinate UCF’s efforts to promote diversity and inclusiveness. The more you know about different cultures, the better you can understand their perspectives and how they communicate. This process is so very important.”

The Office of Diversity Initiatives hosts a diversity week every October.

“Diversity is a priority here at UCF,” said Sheri Dressler, director of the Office of Diversity Initiatives. “Each student needs to be able to immerse themselves in the culture of different parts of a body. Equally they are functional, but separate they are useless.”

In addition to the cultural leaders speaking, participants from the organization’s trip to Israel also spoke about their week experiences overseas.

“The UCF Office of Student Affairs sent the representatives, and all agreed that the warmth and hospitality shown to them were unfor

Freshman year is too early and senior year is too late, he said.

Greene said networking is another way for students to make their mark.

“Most students do not try to build their own internships, but they should,” Greene said.

“Students should also look at attending career fairs often, as it is a way of building their knowledge and experience.”

Legal Services

Currently, enrolled students are entitled to consult with program attorneys on legal matters and receive advice. In addition, legal representation, up to and including all stages of trial, may be provided in certain types of cases, such as the following:

- Lodged/tenant problems affecting student’s living arrangements in the community.
- Consumer problems concerning individual students.
- Traffic cases.
- Criminal law.
- Unenrolled/disenrollment.
- Bankruptcy.

$50M donated to create stockpile for uranium fuel

BEN EVANS

Billionaire investor Warren Buffet, CNN creator Ted Turner and former Sen. Sam Nunn pledged $50 million to the U.S. nuclear watchdog agency Tuesday to create a uranium stockpile.

The plan is to discourage countries from developing their own nuclear programs. The reserve would ensure supplies of low-grade fuel for nuclear power plants around the world. One example of a program they hope to discourage is in Iran, which critics feel is ultimately aimed at developing weapons.

The Washington-based Nuclear Threat Initiative is hoping its financial pledge to the International Atomic Energy Agency will prod governments into action on creating the stockpile. Buffet would provide the money, which is contingent on a $300 million match from IAEA member states.

"Under international law and under the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty, countries have the right to enrich nuclear fuel," Nunn, a Georgia Democratic senator from 1972 to 1996, said in a telephone interview from Vienna, where he announced the proposal at a 140-nation IAEA plenary session. "If we can identify that — and we're on the threshold of that now — then it's going to be an extremely dangerous world." Buffet said it's difficult to keep that weapons-grade material out of the hands of someone who might use it as a weapon, like a terrorist group.

Nunn said it was not paying any money to the government that manages the weapons reserve.

"We don't need any new nuclear weapons," he said.

The Arab satellite stations Al-Arabiya and Al-Jazeera said Monday that judge Abdullah al-Amiri was removed but did not say why he was replaced. He was replaced on the five-member panel by Mohammed al-Duri, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to speak to the media.

Al-Amiri was removed but did not say why he was replaced. He was too lenient in allowing to violate judicial regulations, in which the judge allowed to violate judicial regulations during a court session.

A verdict in the Dujail trial is expected on Oct. 16. Al-Amiri presided over the last session of trial Tuesday, in which more Kurdish survivors of Anfal recounted chemical bombardment of their villages by the Iraqi military.

One witness, Ismaael Mohammad Abdul-Rahman, a major in the Kurdish security force, told the court that an attack on his village began on March 28, 1988, when Baghdad aircraft appeared over the id. People died in their smoke covered us, it dropped to the floor; we were treated at two hospitals in Iran, and lost consciousness · for days. My heart raced I started to vomit. It was not a picnic.

"The head of the court is required to run and control the session, and he is not allowed to violate his duties, actions, or decisions," Al-Amiri told Al-Arabiya. "I don't allow for the judge to express his opinion." Al-Amiri's comment surprised many Kurds, fueling their criticism that he was too lenient with Saddam. Prosecutors had already asked for al-Amiri to be replaced after he allowed Saddam to lash out at Kurdish witnesses during a court session. The change could revive complaints that the government is interfering in the tribunal trying Saddam and his regime members to ensure a quick guilty verdict. In the current trial, Saddam faces a possible death penalty if convicted on genocide charges over the Anfal military offensive against Iraqi Kurds in the 1980s.

In Saddam's first trial the chief judge stripped down halfway through the nine-month-long proceedings, saying he could no longer put up with criticism from officials that he was too lenient in allowing courtroom outbursts by Saddam and his co-defendants.

He was replaced by a far tougher judge who several times threw out defendants and defense lawyers he said were out of line. A verdict in the Dujail trial is expected on Oct. 16. Al-Amiri presided over the last session of trial Tuesday, in which more Kurdish survivors of Anfal recounted chemical bombardment of their villages by the Iraqi military.

Jacksonville's stifling defense spoils return of Roethlisberger

JACKSONVILLE — Ben Roethlisberger may have been back in the lineup Sunday, but the Pittsburgh Steelers were second-rate for a majority of his return to Jacksonville.

The Jaguars' defense stifled him for most of the day to prevent the Steelers' winning quarterback from dominating the game as he had during past visits. The 11-point loss was his first by more than a touchdown since December 2003.
Bilby hopes future holds success in film industry

"I want to create characters, to create life," Bilby said. "I want to try and be the next big thing."

"The next steps in her life may also include soccer too. Bilby wants to go to Europe and continue the sport that she's been playing since she was four years old, she very essence of her nature."

"It's a dream for after graduation," Bilby said. "I'm still going to need that drive and competition because I live off of that."

"Soccer has been so important in Bilby's life, not just on the field but in all the other aspects of her life," Bilby said.

"I'm gonna be so lost without those girls and having that same support of family," Bilby said.

"The concept of family is very important to Bilby. She deeply misses her brother and the rest of her family is beyond of miles away in California."

"It's that beautiful thing about soccer," Bilby said. "It's that you have 36 other sisters."

"It's her teammates that drive Bilby and give her the strength that she needs to play with as much fire as she does."

"She gets that feeling of butterflies in the pit of her stomach before every match, and she still plays for her brother, but the faces of the women next to her are what keep her going."

"It's when you're running so hard and hurting so bad," Bilby said, "that's when you see the faces of your teammates and that's when you know why you're doing it."

And at the heart of it all is the coaching staff that watches over the team with the eyes of loving parents.

"The coaches are 100 percent behind us and support us throughout everything we do," Bilby said."

"I'm still at UCF may be coming to an end but there are some things here that she has gained and will never lose. She'll never forget her 36 sisters."

"She'll never forget that feeling before a big match."

"She's also never forget what it's like to prove everybody wrong and live up to your own dreams and expectations."

"Her brother will never truly be dead as long as Bilby carries him in her heart wherever her travels take her."

"Whether she goes to Rome or back to California, she's definitely going to be the next big thing."
