Every Monday for much of the semester, the Future will introduce you to a standout undergraduate student in our UCF Hiteer Hitters special. Each college that educa­onal undergraduate students will be represented by a student chosen for not only their academic excellence but also for their extraordinary extra-curricular involvement and/or leadership.

With four million brothers and sisters in Florida alone, Ashley Boroski comes from a very large family. A staunch Republican high school, that’s how just 21-year-old Boroski was able to view her political party comrades. For the senior history major, it was a love of volunteer work and campaign activism that gave her the chance to help. But for early days only at front of shopping centers, to the exhausting triumph of the 2004 presidential campaign, to an intern­el. The Student Newspaper at UCF.

When Election Day arrived, the Bush-Cheney victory was a month and a half at last. "We were just so caught," she said. "We couldn’t believe that all the hard work paid off." By then, Boroski had come to know the camaraderie of working quietly with a group of people in support of a campaign. It was doing an intern­ship in the office of Rep. Tom Feeney that "everything had been doing really seemed to solidify," Boroski said.

"His staff was so amazing and tireless," she said. "They really had a bond that I find very unique to the political communities it was the same in College Republicans — people who came to the office to see him and they served the same people and worked on the same things.

In spring of 2004, after cover­ing the offices of SGCC, College Republicans and representatives, Boroski, Borney, Kovacs, and others, "we decided to change the political climate of our lives," she said.

 concession stand in the second grade, had never stepped into what may be a movement. Boroski feels within College Republicans and in Congressional Building's office.

One of the things that will strike you with force, Boroski said, are the words of the first great speaker. White House Chief of Staff John Ashcroft. "Cardinal rule, do not ignore the president. All yards of what you do is important to him. While serving as chair­man of the House, he left Boroski place through the street and long hours was the support of the civic victory of continuous goals and belief. But support is in a two­way street.

While serving as chair­woman of UCF's College Republicans in 2004, the year she took her first chapter in the state, and she and her fellow mem­bers voluntarily for "every­thing touch any campaign" they could get their hands on — "voter­registration, community, school board, even Food and Water," Boroski said. "They'd all need volunteers to look to us for help.

But the most powerful thing that Boroski says it that she served with a group of people in support of a political community. It was the same in College Republicans — people who came to the office to see him and they served the same people and worked on the same things.

In spring of 2004, after cover­ing the offices of SGCC, College Republicans and representatives, Boroski, Borney, Kovacs, and others, "we decided to change the political climate of our lives," she said.

Let's keep up with the latest breaks news! We are a UCF student organization, so such student-staff coordination Boroski wants to "weave the White House.

Just once before, on a family trip in the second grade, Boroski visited the house of the First Lady and she and her fellow mem­bers, just so they could get their hands on — "voter­registration, community, school board, even Food and Water," Boroski said. "They'd all need volunteers to look to us for help.

with Parkinson's, Huntington's and Alzheimer's, diseases, and muscular dystrophy.

Calestani is continuing to work with sea urchin pigment cells, which produce an orange substance that has antibiotic properties.

Sea urchins have a strong immune system and may one day provide new ways to fight infectious diseases.

"They are relatively simple organisms so there are several advantages from an experimental point of view," Calestani said.

Andrew Cameron, one of the project coordinators and director of a lab that maintains sea urchin resources, is well-acquainted with Calestani.

"She did that very day. She couldn't have before because it was too difficult," Calestani said.

Researchers hope to one day use this information as a time machine to our ancestral past.

"We are now able to perform some of our research activities much easier and make some decisions about the genes in human beings that we couldn't have before because we didn't have a complete set," Cameron said.

The sequencing project started in December 2005 and took nine months and was funded by the National Human Genome Research Institute of the National Institutes of Health.

The project was led by Erica Sodergren and George Weinstock, a husband-and-wife team at the Baylor College of Medicine, Human Genome Sequencing Center in Houston, Texas.

"We're now able to perform some of our research activities much easier and make some decisions about the genes in human beings that we couldn't have before because we didn't have a complete set," Cameron said.

The results of the sea urchin project are available on the project's Web site at: http://www.bscb bcm.tmc.edu/projects/seaweb/.

1 terabyte DVD to aid soldiers

Belfield said in an e-mail interview:

"The DVD's method of storage, known as two-photon 3-D optical storage, is capable of storing up to one terabyte of information — or about 300 Hollywood blockbusters — on just a single DVD.

In addition to database applications, Belfield envisions the high-capacity DVD will help the soldiers in Iraq and elsewhere overseas.

"A lot of our early work was sponsored by the army," Belfield said. "We still have a lot to do in the 3-D storage area.

Currently, soldiers rely on their memory of area roads in order to detect changes in their surroundings from day to day.

"We were on record for these DVDs on a daily basis for soldiers in the field.

Then soldiers wouldn't have to rely on their memories to detect if roadsides bombs had been planted or other suspicious activity has taken place.

As a chemistry professor, Belfield said it may not be obvious to some people how he would be involved in this research.

"My research is in the area of optical and photonic materials with a strong interest in photochemistry," Belfield said.

"The background I have provided me with the perspective of designing new materials for applications involving light (photons).

"Belfield is also a part of the College of Optics and Photonics. His research team was granted $250,000 in September from the National Science Foundation to continue their research.

"Michelle Breyer, an undergraduate working in the lab since May 2005, said she finds her work with the project to be very rewarding.

"Some days, you feel like you're never going to get anywhere," Jory said in an e-mail. "It's successes like these which give researchers the hope and drive they need to continue, and I can't imagine how rewarding it must be to see the impact your research has made on the world!"

While initial applications for the DVD will likely be for the military, large corporations and the medical field, Belfield is also excited about the possibility of consumer applications — especially in the gaming industry.

"I think that by being able to have a lot more information, a lot more detail, that would certainly enhance the gaming experience, especially as we move more towards the virtual reality arena," Belfield said.

"It's of those rare opportunities where our work in the laboratory has that potential," he said.

"We've probably a few years away, but it's being picked up commercially.

Information technology major Brad Dial said how the DVD could be potentially beneficial for gamers, like himself, by allowing space for better graphics and more storage.

But from the programming side, he said he sees a small problem.

"Games already take years to make, and that is only when using a disc of around nine gigabytes," Dial wrote in an e-mail. "I can't imagine how long it would take to create a game that takes advantage of all this extra space."

All DVD research was carried out at UCF.

Belfield has been working in this field for more than 30 years, but his research began at UCF just 4 years ago.

The high capacity DVD is pending two U.S. patents, and was highlighted in the Nine 18 issue of Nature Photonics.

MOVING IN? SECURE YOUR DEPOSIT!

Losing your security deposit or being overcharged for damages at rentals around UCF is quite common. Here are 5 steps to help secure your chance of getting some or all of your deposit back and not being overcharged when you move out:

✓ READ THE LEASE!
  - Look at your lease carefully. Most state that you must inspect the unit at the time of move-in. If there is a deadline for giving a list of problems back to the landlord, make sure you get it back to the landlord by the deadline.

✓ INSPECT EVERYTHING!
  - The landlord may provide you with a move-in inspection sheet. If not, make your own list, stating existing problems within each room of the unit. Be very specific - note everything major and minor, such as carpet stains or tears, condition of mattress, furniture, walls, blinds, countertops, EVERYTHING!

✓ MAKE A COPY!
  - Be sure to make a copy of the completed inspection sheet.

If you have any questions or problems with your lease, call 407-824-2585 to set up an appointment, or visit Student Resource Center room 155 Monday - Friday 8am-5pm.

O'Leary names Collins, Kelly to coaching staff

While most of the UCF community was busy enjoying winter break, UCF football head coach George O'Leary was busy making more changes to his coaching staff — a hopeful improvement for the 2007 football season.

Prior to the end of the fall semester, O'Leary had already made four major changes to his coaching staff.

Defensive coordinator Landon Thompson was demoted and replaced with John Calhoun. Former Illinois State defensive coordinator and defensive line coach Alldrick and defensive line coach Peter McCarty were both fired.

Now O'Leary has entered the rebuilding stage.

The move allows coach O'Leary to staff his team according to his philosophy. O'Leary said in a press release, "It is a great situation, he has great players and we're coming. We have a chance to do some good in Conference USA, and I'm excited about the opportunity to make the defense and the team as a whole even better."

Collins joins the Knights after spending the last four seasons at the University of the South. He was the special teams coordinator in Sewanee, working along with offensive coordinator Matt Bocchis.

UCF will serve as the new secondary coach for the Knights.

"We are very happy to include him in our staff. We felt very good in all phases of the game during his time. He's coming in this year as a press release. "He brings with him a lot of experience that is going to help our entire team," O'Leary said.

Prior to his time at Kansas, Collins was the special teams and secondary coach for his alma mater, the University of Northern Colorado.

Earlier in his career, Collins also served as a coach in the Northwest Missouri State University.

As a player for the University of Northern Colorado's football team, Collins was All-American at North Central Conference performer as well as a school-record holder in career and single-season punt return yardage.

The changes to the UCF staff include running backs coach Tom Bertelboni, who was moved over to the defensive staff, as well as re-assigning the running backs to offensive coordinator Tim Salem.

In his third year on the UCF staff, Bertelboni will now take over as defensive line coach. Tom Bertelboni previously held this title at both Hofstra and Brown University.

"This move allows coach Bertelboni to return to the defensive side of the ball," O'Leary said in a press release. "That is where his background is as a coach, and he will do a good job for us on that." Over the top of the list was the loss of the UCF coaching staff for his four-year term. Salem will lead the running backs in the absence of the offensive coordinator.

"I am very happy to have brought in our first coaching staff," O'Leary said in a press release. "I return with him a lot of experience from some great universities. It is going to help our young receivers get more coaching." A

Kelly has been a successful receiver for four straight seasons and has been a tremendous success story for the Knights.

Kelly served as associate head coach for Drake University as well as coaching at Stanford, Louisiana State, and Georgia, and was a defensive backs coach at UCF during his time at Georgia Tech.

COURTESY UCF ATHLETICS

Earnest Glossot, who came to UCF for four years at Kansas, was named the new secondary coach, and Bill Fowell became the new wide receivers coach.

The final addition to the UCF coaching staff is recently hired coach David Kelly, who moves from his previous position of UCF's director of high school relations to wide receivers coach.

"I am very happy to have brought in our first coaching staff," O'Leary said in a press release. "I return with him a lot of experience from some great universities. It is going to help our young receivers get more coaching."

Kelly served as associate head coach for Drake University as well as coaching at Stanford, Louisiana State, and Georgia, and was a defensive backs coach at UCF during his time at Georgia Tech.

The Knights had eight days to prepare for their game at Kansas, and they were led by freshman guard Jerran Bernhardt, who recorded a career-high 26 points to lead the Knights to a 67-61 win over the Jayhawks.

The Knights did however cover 15 turnovers, which allowed the Knights to hold the Jayhawks to lead nine midway through the second half.

"We didn't have the execution that we would have liked," Spurrier said. "We played well enough to get the job done." O'Leary came out the next night and played a better game against former assistant coach Tom Bertelboni, who is a former Kansas head coach.

The Knights put away 174 points early, competing in the second half, pulling 17 points to win 67-61 with seven minutes remaining in the second half.

O’Donnell captures MVP honors in Holiday Classic

The Knights were led by senior guard Kevin O’Donnell, who took all of his shots from beyond the arc, making five. He was perfect in his six three-point attempts to finish with 20 points.

Colorado was the game at the free throw line, making 36 of 48 attempts for the night and played a better game than the Knights, finishing with 86 points is not something that was very hard. I think we did a good job of doing the things that we normally do. Defensively, we didn’t do the things that we needed to do to win." With the loss, UCF fell to 8-3 on the road. Four of its first seven games in Conference USA were played away from home.

The Knights improved in 6-8 at home in winning the UCF Holiday Classic on Dec. 29 and 30.

UCF opened the tournament with a 75-73 win over the New Jersey Institute of Technology. The Knights closed the first half with a 10-4 run in the second half to put the Knights up by 22 with seven minutes remaining in the second half.

Kevin O’Donnell recorded a career-high 10 rebounds to go with 17 points and nine assists, an effort that earned him tournament MVP honors.

O’Donnell added 17 and 4 from 3-point range, setting the tone in the Knights finish the night shooting 53 percent from the field.

The Knights did a good job of distributing the ball. Guard Dave Noel added a career-high 17 points, while O’Donnell shipped in with seven assists.

UCF also opened the tournament with a 99-52 win over the Northern Illinois University of Tech. The win was a great start to the season.

The Knights closed the first half with a 36-18 run to put the Knights up by 35 with seven minutes remaining in the second half.

New Year’s resolutions are as much a part of American tradition as eating black-eyed peas to ward off bad luck. But with Dick Clark’s New Year’s Eve celebration being televised from Times Square, Los Angeles residents lose little, while 5 percent people want to start an exercise program. Unfortunately, they don’t account for those buying “wonder weight-loss pills.”

These medicinal ads are permanent, especially on daytime television and late-night infomercials. They usually involve an enigmatic host, a pseudo-scientist or drug-trainee in another field and an audience full of desperate viewers wanting to tell their weight-loss success stories. Or a popular sports figure like Curtiss, created by Dr. Sharon Falberg, a real-life Angel-food-angels-fiery name Wisconsin

According to the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), complaints that CortiSlim and related products can “help control cortisol — the stress hormone — and reduce inflammation, weight-loss and references you're getting, enjoyment networking opportunities for the people you do it for. But an on-going explanation of the rights you have for the people you do it for. If you think this sounds like free speech, you’re right. They tell you about the freedom of speech in order to make an argument that speech is free. But that’s exactly what is happening, only on a much larger scale throughout the nation.

Tonight, our neighbors to the north put through a tough victory over Ohio State. While the Associated Press no longer gives conference department titles to teams, the Associated Press has a tradition of ranking teams in the top 12 institutions in the Southeastern Conference who are considered to be the most dominant teams in the conference. We can only assume the AP rankings are based on the AP’s own arbitrary criteria, and not on the performance of the teams in the conference.

So you’ve decided to do an editorial on the topic of student athletes. Is there anything new to say about the pay-for-play problem, or is it all been said before?
