King's message of change still affects listeners, stir discussions

TYLER GILLESPIE

Led by the voices of the UCF gospel choir, students marched from Memory Mall to Mills Hall on Wednesday in honor of the legacy of Martin Luther King Jr.

The crowd convened in front of the fountain where the Student Organizations and Agencies Relations coordinator of SGA, Bryan Arnette, read King's famous "I Have a Dream speech". The program ended with the pledge that we are not born equal and that the university is progressing, Arnette said. "UCF is moving in the right direction, and to help better the community. "It was very inspiring," said Candace Gattimore, 22, a biology major. "It made me want to do more for UCF."

"I thought that the event brought the African-American people of UCF closer," said Kassie Edwards, a 20-year-old liberal arts major. "It made us realize that we are all a family."

King was assassinated on April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn. King's words continue to have a strong influence on the students and the university today.

This was the second year that the Multicultural Student Center organized a march-celebrating King's work. "We established the event because it is very important to continue King's dream," MSC assistant director Laura James said. "Many people feel like they are living it, but his dream has not been realized."

The efforts of the organization gave many students a reason to get involved and to help the community. "It was very inspiring," said Candace Gattimore, 22, a biology major. "It made me want to do more for UCF."

King was assassinated on April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn. Martin Luther King Jr. was a civil rights leader.

"I'm very glad," said Ty Williams, a Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. member. "Many students appreciate King's message and his work, and banks across America take the day off to celebrate the life of the prominent civil rights leader.

"It is the only federal holiday that is designated for an African-American."

"Dr. King was aitaid by Ty Williams, a Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. "He was a visionary: an inspiration and pertinent."

After the march, students of UCF and surrounding areas attended the first installation of the MLK Stadium.

"I'm going to take my medication," said Rosemary Smith as she entered the NAACP headquarters, "I don't understand the law. It's an issue of my choice.

We filed the affidavit and it's now in the state attorney's office. We will see if it's enough, if we lose it, then there's nothing we can do.

Once we do the affidavit, it's a process and it's a political process."

Zombie fans storm UCF for costumes

VICTORIA AOSTA-BURIO

Tuesday was a good day to be one of the undead or at least if you're a big fan of the genre. Students turned out in force to see the second annual Zombie Stroll at the Student Union Thursday afternoon.

The event, organized by the UCF Student Union Programming Board and the University of Central Florida Zombie Society, is a chance for students to don costumes of their favorite zombie from pop culture and walk around campus.

"We like zombies because we can do anything with them," said Tannise Proctor, a freshman information systems technology major.

"It's a way for us to have fun and show our creativity," echoed Michelle Williams, a senior mass communications major.

Students were free to dress up in any way they saw fit, from easy-to-make homemade costumes to professionally made commercial outfits. Some students even made their own hand-made costumes.

"I made my costume yesterday," said Michelle Bledsoe, a senior graphic design major. "I had to because I was too busy to go out and buy one." Bledsoe's costume was inspired by the popular video game "Resident Evil." She said she was happy with her creation.

The Stroll was a huge success, with hundreds of students participating. The event was organized by the UCF Student Union Programming Board and the University of Central Florida Zombie Society.

"It was a lot of fun," said Proctor. "I think everyone had a good time."

Police urge other victims to come forward

Patch has also been charged, but not convicted, in connection with numerous sexual assaults, including luring, vehicle theft, trespassing, loitering, and lewd and lascivious behavior.

UCFPD told me that he had a criminal history, but wouldn’t say if he had been arrested before. They told me that it’s a confidential file and that the police department’s criminal records are not accessible to the public. I told the officer that I had been told otherwise by a reliable source, but he wouldn’t confirm or deny that information.

A lot of other girls said the same thing had happened to them, but there are no records of the crimes being reported to the police. There is no evidence of any charges being filed against Patch.

Patch was pulled over for driving at 41 mph as recently as Dec. 21 for a moving violation, according to public records. Patch was pulled over for a second time on Jan. 23 for a traffic violation, also according to public records. Patch was pulled over for a third time on Jan. 31 for a traffic violation, according to public records.

Trips offer students insights into faiths

Forums organized by SGA, The theme of the series is "EARN The Challenge of Change." The event was sponsored by Kilgore Johnson, SDA, OCF alumna and SGA. "The MLK Forum offers us an opportunity to remember," wrote Sarah Patel, Miller's, multicultural affairs coordinator of SGA, "and also celebrates a leader who has become immortalized as a symbol of justice and change." For the opening session, Harvard Law school professor Charles Ogletree gave a speech. Ogletree has a long list of credentials. He is the author of numerous books and is the founding and executive director of the Charles Hamilton Houston Institute for Race and Justice.

Ogletree delivered a speech titled "Rien, Racism, and the Future of The Dream." In his speech, Ogletree explained the continuing struggle for equality and how this generation needs more educated soul sisters.

"Young people know all the words to rap songs," Ogletree said. "But if you ask them about Dr. King, they will probably say: 'Oh that's the guy with the dream.'"

"In reality his speech was talking about the frustrations that he had with the white American was handling civil rights. Most people just catch a speech."

Ogletree stressed the importance of hard work and the many struggles that African-Americans or any minority may face. "There is hope and opportunity," he said. "Do not look for a handout, but a hand up."

Ogletree also praised King for all his efforts. "He said that King was the most influential civil rights speaker. "We still have a ways to go in seeing his dream fulfilled," he said. "I hope that UCF will perpetuate the dream for all." The SGA Forum is an ongoing series that will continue throughout February. "The hope is that discussion will be able to educate UCF and the surrounding community on diversity and activism," Patel said.

Mike UJ, a night of spoken word, will take place on Jan. 24 at 8 p.m.

There will be a screening of The Dreamer Project on Feb. 12 at 6 p.m. Keynote speaker Jonathan Kozol will be presenting the closing lecture on Feb. 12 at 6 p.m. in the Cape Florida Ballroom.

Something to CHEER ABOUT

Cheerleading squad wins 2nd National Championship

MELISSA HEYBOER
Staff Writer

Day after day, week after week, the athletes of the UCF athletic program train for one common goal—a national championship.

Month after month, year after year, they fall short—lacking, most insist they experience.

UCF, however, has one exception. And it’s the most unlikely kind.

While the entire sports nation is focusing on high-profile sports, cheerleading squads across the country are working hard for their teams and for themselves.

And while the entire UCF community is watching and waiting for a basketball or football championship, the UCF cheerleaders are out winning one.

For the second time in five years, the UCF cheerleading squad took home national championship honors with a first-place finish in the National Cheerleading and Dance Team Championships at Disney’s Wide World of Sports.

"It was amazing, I would like to say something that’s just very calm and cool, but it was just an amazing experience," senior cheerleading head coach Linda Gooch said. "I think I would like to say it’s just overwhelming, and just very breathtaking," senior UCF cheerleader Tish Johnson said. "Out of the best experiences I’ve ever had in my life."

The Knights, who entered this year’s competition ranked fifth in the nation, showed the judges exactly why they took home the title in 2006 and 2007.

"For me, I haven’t been able to stop smiling," junior UCF cheerleader Javs Cowan said. "It’s been really hard to sleep, because we’ve been so excited."

After earning a bye into the finals, the Knights competed in a 15-team field.

Men’s Basketball overpowers SMU

BRIAN MORPHY
Staff reporter

Over 3,000 fans rocked the UCF Arena in support of their men’s basketball team on Wednesday night. The Knights fell off the top of the mountain and gained an emotional 64-56 win over the SMU Mustangs.

The official attendance of 13,356, as the seventh-largest crowd in Arena history, was the largest crowd since the 2003 season-opener versus Rollins College, and both the players and coach were very happy with the turnout.

"To everybody out there, thank you for coming and keeping coming," junior guard Dave Need said. "That really helped us out a lot."

"Kids play so much harder when that happens," coach Stan Jones said. "I think we are a fun group to watch...it is a fun group to get behind and cheer for."

But it took a while for the game to get revved up. For the first 10 minutes, both teams could not keep a safe grip on the ball. They also seemed content to shoot a heap of unscorable 3-pointers.

At one juncture, neither team scored a point for over four minutes until a basket by SMU senior forward Brian Rippy at the 2:25 mark. With SMU left in the hole, UCF sophomore center Kendrick Zanderman breaks into excitement that is usually unseen from him after putting in a lay-up while being fouled. SMU coach Matt Davies showed a different kind of emotion as he assessed a technical foul for arguing the call.

After junior guard Mike O’Donnell made both technical free throws, Zanderman was successful in his attempt from the line. This gave the Knights a 5-point possession and a 24-16 lead. The Knights took a 7-point lead into the half and were able to stretch it out to 5 after a dunk by freshman forward Tony Fabio made it 41-34. But the Knights have not been able to play with big leads lately and that trend started to appear.

Women’s Tennis prepares for upcoming schedule

VICTOR ANDERSON

In sports, teams have to deal with their own private pressure after they move on to other endeavors. For local sports, the community often has to deal with the women’s tennis team, that had a great finish to their regular season (After Pensacola).

For the Knights, they will not have the4.5

Guided by Head Coach Roberta Johnson, the team is focused on game stunts and practices during the early and tediously to perfect their camps throughout the summer way we start getting reps and practices in front the team gets ranked according .

The team is now working to perfect their drills and routines and their team unity.

like the dynamite roll, rock 'n' roll, lava roll, hurricane roll and the dragon skin roll. For the less adventurous sushi eaters, Seito offers customizable classics. Californias rolls and shrimp tempura roll are perfect for the novice sushi-eater. But for those who enjoy sushi, Seito also has a number of nigiri rolls, which are extremely flavorful.

For non-sushi-eaters, there are a variety of teriyaki dishes. The chicken is tasty, but the teriyaki sauce is overpowering in some cases. The teriyaki dishes are another delicious menu item at Seito. Golden brown and crispy on the outside and warm and soft on the inside, their vegetable tempura appetizer is a comforting start to off your meal.

Once you start you won't want to stop. Prices are reasonable at Seito. A la carte prices range from $3 to $8 and the entrees are in the $8 to $15 range. Most of the rolls are priced at the $8 range.

Overall, this place is a success. The ambience, the service and the flavorful Japanese cuisine all make it worth the journey to Seito.

Students, celebs give bangs a shot

JAMIE SALMASIAN

New trends in fashion this year aren't just about what we wear but also about how we style our hair. And this season, more and more are changing up their style. Our 18-year-old freshman majoring in international relations, also said she had them then as a little girl, "I wanted to do something new," Weizman said. She was many girls in Israel for her sister’s wedding. "They seem to be into fashion," Chaudhry said.

Unlike Pecen and Weizman, Chaudhry cut her bangs more recently. In August of 2006, she went to Devine Design salon in Brandon and got a new do there because she had them then as a little girl.

Amber Chaudhry, an 18-year-old freshman majoring in molecular and microbiology has had bangs for about two years. She decided to have her bangs cut while she visited Israel for her sister’s wedding. "I got a new do there."

"I made the decision because they remind me of my dad," Pecen said.
