DirectConnect eases transfer pain

LAUREN MENDO Contributing Writer

More than 2,200 community college students across Central Florida have signed up for a program designed to ease the transfer process to UCF. The program is free and designed to help guide the student through the future growth of UCF.

The DirectConnect to UCF program aims to assist regional campuses, while easing the transition for transfer students. In fall 2006, the Central Florida Higher Education Consortium, a partnership between UCF and Valencia, Lake-Sumter, Seminole, and Valencia community colleges, was formed. Its first initiative was to create a solution to ease the transfer process.

- Brévalencia
- Lake-Sumter Community College

"This is in response to an increasing demand for higher education," said David Harrison, Vice President for Regional Campuses. "Higher education demands in Florida are expected to exceed the number of seats available in the next five years."

The program is to assist not only the students who participate, but also those who graduate from any of the 40 community colleges in Florida. For more information, call 1-888-UCF-4YOU.

"It is unlike the state's 2+2 program in that it is specific to the students who graduate from each of the community colleges and is not a one-size-fits-all program."

"We're going to put the emphasis on getting the right kind of students into the program."

Alcohol fueled death

Alcohol and drugs were found in the blood of two men who were killed during a robbery in San Francisco in 1971. The investigation of the Black Liberation Army (BLA) killings, which spanned several decades, has led to new developments in recent years, with law enforcement officials like Assistant U.S. Attorney General Sally Quijano and San Francisco District Attorney George Gascon continuing to work on the cases.

Two men were killed during a robbery at a San Francisco police station on August 29, 1971. Police said that the two men, identified as Ronald Stanley Bridgeforth and David V. Young, were killed during a violent confrontation with police officers.

Ronald Bridgeforth, 62, was killed in San Francisco on Wednesday, October 23, 2007. He was one of the men who were killed during the robbery at the police station.

Bridgeforth was a prominent leader in the Black Liberation Army, a radical group that carried out a series of bombings and other violent acts in the 1970s. He was charged with murder and conspiracy in 1971 after two New York City police officers were killed in an ambush.

Kathleen Soliah, a former BLA member, was arrested in 1999 and pleaded guilty to conspiracy charges. She is currently serving a 60-year prison sentence.

Bridgeforth's death has sparked renewed interest in the investigation of the BLA killings, which have remained unsolved for decades. The case has been described as one of the most significant unsolved cases in American history.

Assistant U.S. Attorney General Sally Quijano said that the BLA killings were part of a wider campaign of violence carried out by the group.

San Francisco police have been working to obtain new evidence in the case, including DNA evidence from the crime scene.

Bridgeforth's death has been described as a significant moment in the investigation of the BLA killings. The case has been the subject of numerous books and documentaries, and has become a symbol of the struggle for justice and truth in the wake of police violence.

Knights look to move up in C-USA with road wins

Every year, every season, for every team, there comes a stretch that challenges their mettle and inner strength. For the UCF Men's Basketball team, that time starts now.

The Golden Knights will begin the toughest and most significant road trip of their season Wednesday night when they take on the Houston Cougars. On Saturday they will face the high-powered UTEP Miners.

After holding home court last week with character-testing victories against SMU and Rice, the Knights are on a bit of a high. Currently, the Knights (4-1 in Conference USA, 14-4 overall) sit in third place in the league.

If they can prevail in both games and get a huge stumble from the C-USA powerhouse Memphis Tigers, it is possible that the Knights will be looking down at the rest of their conference foes when they return home.

"We have got to get these two games," junior guard Mike O'Donnell said.

Magic snap five-game losing streak with victory over tired Cavs

CLEVELAND — Grant Hill scored 22 points, Dwight Howard added 18 and the Magic responded to Miami Heat forward Chris Bosh's 31 points with a 96-79 win over the sleep-deprived Cleveland Cavaliers on Monday night.

As his team headed for a timeout in the second quarter, Hill destroyed his plastic skateboard. If the distraction was not enough to send a message, the Magic got it and snapped a five-game skid.

"It's a fiery guy and sometimes you have to do that as a coach," Grant Hill said. "Coaching is like parenting, sometimes there's no inches between a pat on the back and a pat on the butt.

"It was one of those times when he had to do a little putting on the hat," Hill, who missed Orlando's previous game with a dislocated pinky, said. "It was tough to watch. We were playing our fifth game in seven nights.

The University of Florida and Florida State have had dominant football programs for almost two decades, and we're not hearing down and gloom about their academicians.

A South Florida Sun-Sentinel article published Tuesday cited a report that said the decision will mean more than a mere reduction in the number of workers. It said that the report will mean the elimination of several programs that are critical to the university's success.

Nearly 50 percent of American adults said they believe that the number of workers is too high, the report said. The survey was conducted from March 10 to March 15.

On Monday, three more senators voiced their opposition to the plan, but did not say how many would be in the most important manner possible. Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said, "I have an immediate position on the issue, and I'm not going to change my mind."

New garage but still the same old bad drivers

Would you believe that in the new garage if we could just get our cell phones to drive carefully? It's not a place to play, fix your hair or makeup, or make calls. If you drive like a driver who can do more than one thing at a time, then you need to pay attention to your driving.

You need to pay attention to your driving. With the new garage, we should realize that there is too much on your mind to be able to pay attention. You're a single subject a single task. This can cause you to lose focus and make mistakes. Go out in front of obvious, driven to the danger. Do you want to endanger yourself, your passengers, or other drivers? If so, make it out of this life alive, if you want to continue driving. Pay attention to what you are doing right away.
