Possible gunfire at Pegasus Landing
A group of people were enjoying a fireworks display in the Pegasus Landing area when they heard what sounded like gunfire.

Misty Gant covers here.

The sound and debris caused some to evacuate the area. Firefighters arrived on the scene and determined that the noise was likely from fireworks.

The area has been known to experience similar incidents in the past, and authorities are investigating to determine the cause.

Host Finnegan draws big crowd, big laughs

Misty Gant covers here.

You may have seen him on "The Big Bang Theory" or in a recent movie. He has made it into his packed show at Moshkov's last time for students. The 2006 Oscar-nominated comedy "The Break-Up" is one of the films that draws Finnegan to the campus.

"It's my job to make people laugh," Finnegan said. "I try to get them to let loose and enjoy the show."

Finnegan has been performing stand-up comedy for over 10 years and has performed in numerous locations across the country.

He said his favorite part of performing is interacting with the audience and incorporating them into the show.

"I like to have fun with the crowd," he said. "I try to create a positive energy and get them involved in the performance."

Finnegan said he enjoys working with students because they are energetic and eager to laugh.

"College audiences are always great," he said. "They're always up for anything and are always ready to have a good time."

He said he hopes to continue performing on campuses in the future.

"I love performing in front of college audiences," he said. "It's a great way to connect with young audiences and share my comedy with them."

Finnegan said he plans to continue performing on campuses and in other locations throughout the country.

He said he enjoys performing because it allows him to share his humor and make a positive impact on the audience.

"I love being able to make people laugh and brighten their day," he said. "It's a great way to connect with the audience and make a positive impact."

Finnegan said he plans to continue performing and growing his comedy career.

"I'm really excited about where my career is heading," he said. "I'm looking forward to continuing to perform and sharing my comedy with as many people as possible."

He said he hopes to continue performing for many years to come.

NASA fires astronaut
CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA fired a $38,400-a-year security guard in Orlando because he had participated in the largest student film festival.

Students, members of CAB and CMF agreed the event was a success and exceeded many expectations.

"I'm impressed, especially for the first year," Adam said. "There are all these creative aspects around Orlando, and you have so much to be inspired by. It's definitely think UCF is an ideal location for this competition."

"I'm very happy and I hope this is an event that UCF continues to have," Christodoulou said. "Hopefully the next director can keep along with this event because it's just amazing."

President Bush, House Democrats unveiled legislation Thursday withdrawing U.S. combat troops from Iraq by the end of June.

Speaker Nancy Pelosi said the deadlines would be added to legislation providing nearly $200 billion in military funds for Iraq and Afghanistan.

She said reporters the measure would meet the first goal set by new Democratic-controlled Congress has established a "late date" for the end of U.S. combat in Iraq, which has claimed the lives of more than 1,000 U.S. troops.

Within an hour of Pelosi's news conference, House Republican John Boehner attacked the measure.

He said Democrats were proposing legislation that amounted to "establishing and telegraphing to our enemy that a time table would result in failure of the U.S. military mission in Iraq.

"(David) Petraeus should be the one making the decisions on what happens on the ground in Iraq, not Nancy Pelosi, or Murtha," the Ohio Republican added. Democrats have long involved in crafting legislation designed to end U.S. participation in the war.

According to an explanation of the measures, the deadline would be accelerated if the government of Maliki in Baghdad was not making progress.

Wednesday morning attacks during crackdown, says U.S. Iraq's neighbor Jordan has sought to intensify border controls after security crackdowns and additional border controls will be seen to areas outside the capital and some rural smuggling routes, the new coming group of U.S. forces in Iraq said Thursday.

U.S. Gen. David Petraeus said the troop buildup out- side Baghdad will focus on Diyala province, a growing center for suspected Sunni extremists flattening the U.S.-

Iraqi security operation in Baghdad.

But Petraeus stressed that military force alone is "not sufficient" to end the violence in Iraq and political talks will eventually include religious and ethnic groups now opposing the U.S.-backed government.

"This is critical," Petraeus said in his first news conference since taking over command last month. He noted that such political negotiations "will determine in the long run the success of this effort.

Petraeus listed a series of high-profile attacks since U.S. and Iraqi forces began the security effort three weeks ago, including a suicide blast at a Moscow hostel and an assassination attempt against a five-star hotel in Iraq's vice presidents.

Bush to leave for tour of Latin America to round-up Chavez Washington — President Bush will challenge Wednesday to widespread perception in Latin America of U.S. neglect that has helped fuel leftist leader Hugo Chavez's rising influence in America's backyard.

Bush, who leaves Thursday on a five nation tour, will argue that strong democratic governments hold the promise of prosperity. He hopes his journey will reassure the one in four Latin Americans who live on less than $2 a day and wonder whether democracy will ever deliver them a better life.

"The trip is to remind people that we care," Bush said in an interview Wednesday with CNN's Wolf Blitzer. "I do worry about the fact that 'Well, the United States hasn't...'

"Or the United States really is more interested in than worried about terrorism?' And in fact, the record has been a strong one.

But Bush, with just two weeks before the start of the American football season, has a weak hand. Anti-Americanism and anti-U.S. is a potent issue, nuanced by the way in which Chavez has included Chavez's influence in the region and beyond.

The eagle liver of rich Vicktoria, who has lobbed Bush "the devil" and labeled him a "dictator from the North," plans to play a major role. He has called for protests during the visit and is finding a rally in Argentina when the president visits neighboring Uruguay.

Doctoral student’s research may bolster giraffes’ health

I’m part of the millions of dreams that come true here every year.

During the study, “it’s pleasant, sometimes, to be out here,” Fewster said. “I just try to absorb a lot of the animal behavior that I didn’t have as much time to watch when I worked here as an animal keeper. It’s nice just to watch them and see what’s going on in their lives.”

According to Fewster, Eduard de Valdes, nutritionist for the Walt Disney World Animal Program, needs to know what giraffes eat in the wild so he can provide a healthy and balanced diet for the giraffes at Disney.

“Right up to 100 species of plants recorded for the giraffe diet, but the bulk of diet is usually made up of only a few species of trees and woody break,” professor Graham Worthington, UCf graduate coordinating, said via e-mail.

Born in captivity, the giraffes at Disney’s farm are comfortable without fear from predators. They receive both veterinary care and formulated pellet supplements, alfalfa hay and browse grown for them at the Disney browse farm, plus whatever they choose to eat out in the exhibits.

“Because our giraffes are fed to spend a great deal of their attempts to apply the alkane content of the plants recorded for the giraffe diet, there was a exhibit that the giraffes are eating,” Fewster said. “It’s pleasant, sometimes, to be out here, just ‘to watch them off into the distance.”

UCF Comedy and Variety's spring semester production was a sellout. "I really appreciated the fact that Andre shared how God had changed his life and gave him hope and purpose," Miller said.

"His message encouraged conversations after the show to go beyond the superficial because, I think, it's important to think about our true purpose and about spiritual things to general purposes.

Some students didn't respond well to the sermon. After the show, several students plastered the Facebook page for the event, labeling Kole. "This was indeed the show of an illusionist. I thought I was going to see magic, and it was trick," versus sophisticated humor.

I think it was a good effort and the audience was enthralled. A lot of the audience was wiped out and we left without the feeling that it was all done.

Carnival focuses on serving community

Charitable groups receive donations from annual event

In the upcoming weeks, Inflatable houses, food stalls and games were scattered about Lake Claire as guests filled the park for the annual Campaign and Childhood Cancer.

"This is the second year we had this event, and this year it's bigger," said Adolfo Llamas, a Delta Sigma Theta member.

Small donations were accepted upon entrance and guests participated in a variety of activities such as face painting, balloon popping and mask making. Inflatable, a hip-hop student dance group, and Fandango Dance Team, a ministry of University Christian Fellowship, entertained the crowd.

Guests received bracelets and participated in HIV/AIDS prevention and goody bags filled with pens, folders and Bibles.

"I think it is a really good event," said Aleta Gaskin, a sophomore advertising and creative writing major.

Not only were people invited to come out and have fun, members of the university community were extended an invitation to the annual event.

Tracey Roland and her sorority members wanted to put on an advertisement for the upcoming Delta Week and decided to attend.

"We thought it would be a good day," said [George, who wanted to come]. Roland said.

Last year, the sorority held the carnival with the Student Alpha Phi Fraternity and had a turnout of about 500. About 200 students and guests came out to support the event this year.

Although the activity prepared for a day of fun, the group's primary focus was to serve the surrounding community.

"The donations we get will go in support of three different organizations," said Lea Epstein, chairwoman of Delta Sigma Theta's Alpha Chapter.

The chapter is sponsoring the Ronald McDonald's, the Association to Preserve the Sesame Community, Inc. and Mu Iota's Honoring Our Senior Citizens Program.

The chapter began the Honoring Our Senior Citizens Program to acknowledge and honor senior citizens in Orlando and surrounding communities. Members of the sorority visited several churches in the area to nominate an elderly member of their congregation for the program, said Melonie Hagger, chapter vice president.

"When the senior is selected, (the sorority) will do things like clean their house and take them grocery shopping, and it's all on us," Hagger said.

This year, the sorority considered the event a success.

"People everything," said Sabrina Anderson, a 22-year-old junior psychology major. "It was a good event and a fun day." Anderson was referring to Michael Prololo, Jr., who works for Barnes and Noble. He came out to support the carnival with the Kappa Psi Delta. Anderson said, "I performed, and everyone who joined in the competition, and she was like "You play guitar with some plastic guitar," Wright said.

"I'm really excited to see all those people dressed in costumes and face paint," said Courtney Smith, an 18-year-old UCF psychology major. "My friends and I decided these people are going to be really bad or really good — there's no middle.

A lot of the participants wore underwear and there was no cover at the event, so Body build said solely on tabs for profits.

"It was a really good event and nobody was even drunk," said Amy Cassell, a 22-year-old journalism graduate.

"The bar is kind of slow tonight," said Aaron Wright, the owner of BackBooth. "People are too busy worrying about their performance or whatever. I personally believe in drinking while playing games, but that's me.

He was also impressed at how many people showed up for the competition.

"It's a little bit crazy to me a bunch of guys up on stage playing guitar with some plastic guitar," Wright said.

History education major Bryan Nastanski, 23, who works for Barnes and Noble. He came appropriately dressed for the occasion, originally in a black cape and black wig with black and white face paint. By the end of the night, he was walking around in only white attire.

"I told my mom about the competition, and she was like "You play guitar?" Prololo said. "So I had to set up my Web cam so I could show it to her.

Some people cared more for the individual performance than the competition.

The Knights surprised everyone by winning the regular season Southeast Conference championship. The NCAA Tournament appearance might not seem possible, but the Knights won 23 games and averaged 21 wins a season. Speraw has led the Knights to three NCAA Tournament appearances and has recorded 14 consecutive winning seasons.

But the Knights' success is not just limited to the NCAA Tournament. They have recorded 23 wins in four of the past five years, including a 21-win season in 2006-07. And they have averaged 21 wins a season over the past five years.

Speraw has also led the Knights to three Sun Belt Conference championships and three C-USA championships. He has also led the Knights to three NCAA Tournament appearances and has recorded 14 consecutive winning seasons.

As for the players, they have stepped up and delivered. The Knights have recorded 23 wins in four of the past five years, including a 21-win season in 2006-07. And they have averaged 21 wins a season over the past five years.

MELISSA MENTER

The UCF tennis teams continued to improve in the latest ITA polls. The women's team moved up to No. 44, while the men's team remained at No. 110. Newcomer Mike Almond hit a 3-pointer to tie the game at 11-11 and give the Owls a chance to finish the game strong. As he walked to the dugout, Owls pitcher receiving high-fives and wide smiles. The Spartans scored a run in the sixth inning on a bases-loaded walk to Mike Almond. As he walked to the dugout, Owls pitcher receiving high-fives and wide smiles. Named for a fabled beast, Chimaira's spit-fire act rocked the No Fear tour

AMANDA K. SHAPIRO
Staff Writer
reminded the House of Blues why it needed extra security Tuesday night after the stage lights were lit for only three minutes.

At last, six dark figures emerged from behind the curtains — exciting screams so loud that the scene could be mistaken for a battle field. Chimaira did not welcome fans with a typical greeting. Instead, they began slashing their way right into the first single release off their new album, Resurrection.

Chimaira's set list featured the perfect mix of old and new material.

The biggest response from the crowd came when the band played "Power Trip" and "Nothing Remains," songs off of The Impossibility of Reason and Chimaira's self-titled albums. Fans echoed the band's dark and angry lyrics; most chanting them at key points in the songs.

Fans were interviewed about seeing the band live and if they'd bought the new album. Most were willing to pay extra for tickets to the sold-out concert.

When asked if he had a favorite album, Rodriguez said picking just one was like "trying to pick your favorite sister!"

About two weeks into the seven-week-long No Fear Music Tour, Chimaira graced Orlando with their presence for what they would later deem the best show of the tour.

BAND'S LATEST EFFORT TURNS UP TO 11

New album is harder-hitting

ANAMAR K. SHAPIRO

Finger Eleven has a dedicated fan base of hard rockers and metalheads, passionate about their new album, "Thieves." As the fourth addition to their catalog, this is their most ambitious work yet.

The music featured on "Thieves" has been stripped down and packs a punch with raw, intense soundscapes. The band's signature style is more pronounced, with each member bringing their unique voice to the mix.

Motivated by lengthy tours and a desire to showcase their talent to a wider audience, the band has chosen to strip away the excess and focus on their core strength: their musicianship and dedication to their craft.

"Finger Eleven" is not only a collection of songs, but a journey into the heart of heavy metal. The band has released a new album, "Thieves," and they've been touring extensively to promote it.

The band's dedication to their craft is evident in every track, as they push the boundaries of what can be achieved in modern rock music.

Finger Eleven's "Thieves" is a must-listen for any fan of heavy metal. It's a raw, powerful album that will have you coming back for more.
Celtic lore finds home in UCF's Shapeshifter

TYLER CULLYPIE

A haunting tale of lost love and the importance of self acceptance was portrayed on stage this week in Shapeshifter, the UCF Black Box Theatre's spring production.

The play is set in the isolated region of the Orkney Islands, an island chain off the coast of Scotland. Belfast Repertory, a UCF professor and show director for Walt Disney World, doubled as director and dialect coach.

Because of the play's location, actors had to speak in pronounced old-Irish accents. The play revolves around March 9, 2007: GTI

The play is set on land but are seals in the sea. The entire cast showcased an impressive presence throughout the play.

Piven begins telling Midge the legend of the selkie, but the account becomes more than just a fable when three mysterious women, resembling Midge's mother, arrive on the island.

The spring break must-haves.

But there are some staples that can help you look hot while you get some with polka dots, stripes or plaid designs on them so there is a vast selection of that can help brighten your look.

Another definite must-have for this spring break is a colorful tote from dELiA's. Bright tote bags can carry your stuff to the beach in a colorful tote from dELiA's.

And make sure you don't forget your camera, music and friends when you take your summer style out for a fun and safe break.
Film basks in blood & beauty

WILLIAM GOSS
Staff Writer

The legendary battle of Thermopylae gets a ravishing modern update, thanks to graphic novelist Frank Miller of Sin City fame and director Zack Snyder, who previously directed 2004's Dawn of the Dead remake.

King Leonidas (Gerard Butler) opts to defy the laws of the elders and leads 300 of his finest Spartan soldiers to take on the seemingly endless forces of invading Xerxes (Rodrigo Santoro).

Meanwhile Leonidas' queen (Lena Headey) clashes with corrupt politicians in an effort to send support to her husband and his troops.

Using digital technology and an admirable faithfulness to its source material, Snyder takes an age-old swords-and-sandals tale and modernizes it for a generation raised on Sin City and Red Bull, with touches of wry gallows humor spread throughout sequences of equal-opportunity eye candy: plenty of flesh for the girls and plenty of blood for the guys.

Relevant political and sexual themes are there for those eager to find them, but otherwise, Butler and company manage to make a story that is as purely visceral as it is visual, in spite of the inherently artificial mimicking techniques and storytelling embellishments inevitably accumulated across time.

Underneath its spectacular sham is the ultimate underdog story, one that embraces brotherhood, pride and honor in the face of death, standing more moral than one might expect with any amount of sacrifice.

Yes, it's graphic and gratuitous and more than toes the line of overkill.

No, it isn't for everyone. However, those willing to watch will find that 300 is the sheer vision of pop art, a glorious indulgence that transforms into a greater testament to myth, a monument to masculinity and the downright coolest history lesson in quite a while.

Perhaps it's finally time to commandeer that "new classic" label from TNT because someone can finally show them what one of those would really look like.
