THE ART OF TEACHING

UCF’s sole art education professor honored by national association

AMANDA MOORE

By: Bethany Herbst

While students were vacationing for spring break last week, a UCF professor was named the 2007 Art Educator of the Year by the National Art Education Association in its New York convention.

Thomas M. Brewer, coordinator of UCF’s art education program and the only UCF art education professor, was one of nine nominees for the award, according to Krista Brewer, NAEA election coordinator. The association, which boasts about 18,000 members, celebrates its 60th anniversary this year.

Last year, Brewer received the Florida Art Educator Award from the 700-member Florida Art Education Association, an affiliate of the national guild. The association, which according to its official Web site, “promotes quality instruction in visual arts education,” nominated Brewer for this year’s national award during its 2006 Jackson conference.

NAA Program Director Lisa Kammel said in a press release, “Brewer exemplifies the highest level of professionalism in art education. The NAA values his contributions and service to the community and cause for art education. We are thrilled that Brewer has been named the NAA 2007 National Art Educator of the Year.”

Brewer, 56, was the first on his father’s side of the family to attend college and recognize that he is a product of public education — his junior high art teacher, Thelma Fite, fostered an interest in art and inspired him to study biology.

His father was a lineman for an Illinois power company and he got the job after he earned his GED. Brewer’s mother was a divorced practical nurse and her family had a history of非常高. According to Brewer, they

Students for Sensible Drug Policy is trying to amend the state's current drug amnesty law and alcohol and drug policy for UCF this semester, which would allow students one-time free pass from academic punishment in case of an overdose.

Under the current Golden Rule Drug-Free Westplace/Drug-Free Schools Policy Statement, possessing and distributing drugs on campus is prohibited and, “any UCF employee of student determined to have violated this policy shall be subject to disciplinary action, any action which may include termination of employment and referral for criminal prosecution.”

The consumption and sale of alcohol is strictly regulated, prohibiting the safe to and consumption by anyone under the age of 21, with the same penalty at the sale of drugs.

If implemented, the new policy would have students who report a need for medical attention for a drug overdose on campus, and, “any UCF employee of student determined to have violated this policy shall be subject to disciplinary action, any action which may include termination of employment and referral for criminal prosecution.”

ication. The UCF Bookstore has received $800 from the Student Government Association to make the trek to San Diego in April for the annual Collegiate Wakeboarding Championships.

The top ten teams from across the nation are selected and invited to compete. Last month, many expected UCF to place third, but the club ended up in third place. The University of Florida came in on top.

"We're beating all our rivals. We're pretty much the team to beat at the competition," said Haughey.

According to Haughey, some students have seen the club's accomplishments and made wakeboarding a big, deciding factor in coming to UCF.

"If you're in school and like wakeboarding, why not kill two birds with one stone by being involved with school and with the sport," said member Jeff Telgenhoff.

Bill would make it a misdemeanor to leave a child in a car in a hurry just to buy ice cream or run into the store. A quick run into the store.

"It shouldn't ever happen," said Haughey.

But even at the most feverish crowd, said Hackbarth.

"The club helps each other out on all levels. Who wouldn't want to do that?"

According to Haughey, some students have seen the club's accomplishments and made wakeboarding a big, deciding factor in coming to UCF.

"If you're in school and like wakeboarding, why not kill two birds with one stone by being involved with school and with the sport," said member Jeff Telgenhoff.

Orlando to the wakeboard capital of the world," said Haughey. "More pros live here, ride, practice, and here, we've got kids all across the nation who see that.

The club hosted 40-plus members last semester but because of minimum classes they are not able to be officially recognized as a club by the Sports Council. This means they receive a limited amount of funding from SGA.

"That explains why the 50 or 60 members mentioned fee is higher than usual, said Hackbarth.

The club rents out the Orlando Watersports Complex (OWC) up to these times in a scenario which would bring the membership fee. Members also receive a discount from Best Buy, the clubs sponsor. In addition, the club has several events where members meet at a local lake, wakeboard and grill off all day.

"We all just hang out and have a good time," said Hackbarth. "It's fun because we get to spend all our time out in the sun and it's always really fun.

The club will host a ride-off in the next tournament to choose the members who will represent the team at the tournament.

The finals, sponsored by the Collegiate National Team, is a large event called the Collegiate Nationals, which brings together a variety of extreme sports including landboarding, snowboarding, skateboarding and bording.

"Since the club's debut in 2004, we've placed first at Nationals, which is pretty amazing," said Haughey. "Our first tournament is Rollins and UF, and it's always really close.

Last October, the team placed first for the third consecutive time at the club's annual Collegiate Wakeboarding Nationals held in Orlando. This qualified the team for the San Diego competition.

"We've put our money on the club's success," said Hackbarth. "The club will be vice president and an economics major. We're betting all our chips. We're pretty much the team to beat at that competition.

"Agreed," said Haughey, students have seen the club's accomplishments and made wakeboarding a big, deciding factor in coming to UCF.

"If you're in school and like wakeboarding, why not kill two birds with one stone by being involved with school and with the sport," said member Jeff Telgenhoff.

Wakeboarding is what Haughey considers an individual team sport because the club helps each other out on all levels of skill.

"We've got kids in the club who are not learning how to ride and it doesn't matter from which person who is just learning to wakeboard to a person trying to stick a 70° said Haughey. "Everybody gets the same amount of encouragement."

Brewer was recognized. Shannon and others in the group showed great support for Brewer by attending "with bells and whistles."

"Brewer is such a role model for all of us... He's still a studio artist and a great advocate. He's a great educator," Shannon said. "He's in asistent to the college.

Brewer calls criticism of art as a career "cruel." In light of the art teacher shortage in Florida, he notes, "Right now, every art education student has made job opportunities. They can choose where they want to teach."

UCF's art education program produces about 25 to 30 art educators per year, according to Brewer. He said these numbers were barely enough to cover the 25 art education positions filled last year within Florida's County alone.

As for the future of art education, Brewer thinks it's "doable... I think it's changing like it's always changed. A major foreseeable challenge for education, he said, will be to keep up with the allure of technology in the contemporary art world."

Iraq bombs kill 8 soldiers

Violence rises as U.S. and Iraqi forces approach key areas of control.

STEFAN R. HURT ASSOCIATED PRESS

Islamist insurgents, seizing control of the U.S. stronghold in at least six other provinces, including by the northern town of Fallujah on Sunday, killing at least eight U.S. soldiers. The American military said four U.S. soldiers died and one was wounded when the unit was attacked by a roadside bomb in western Baghdad. During the ongoing security sweeps, the insurgents had found supplies and weapons caches and two roadside bombs and had killed a local security guard. The U.S. military said that 12 of those killed died in Baghdad and eight of them were killed in the car bombing in a predominantly Shiite district, police said. The attack targeted people gathering along the road to offer in a funeral for a Muham­ mad, police said 21 people were wounded. Police said the bodies of 10 people were pulled out of the bomb and by showing signs of torture, were found left behind, just five of them in Baghdad. A U.S. official, however, blamed al-Qaida in Iraq for the敬s­ terate and said attacks by the insurgent stronghold in Anbar province. However, a higher number of casualties. Three suicide bombers driving vehicles rigged with tanks of chlorine gas target streets in the inner city, including the offices of a Sunni tribal leader opposed to al-Qaida. The attacks killed at least two people and injured 90 Iraqi civilians and at least one U.S. soldier, police said Saturday. The U.S. military said Saturday, "The first thing we noticed were the things that went wrong at the longer wavelengths. Our job is not to assign such a role to any of these features," Horning said. "They were working with molecules, and not atoms in a significant way."

Previous models of the spec­ trum of these planets have predict­ ed features caused by water, ammonia, methane, and possibly silicon and oxygen. Although understanding the planet's chemical make-up is still away from the earth in an earth-like star, orbiting the neutron star can provide valuable information.

The next step is to use lightp­ er to the team more observa­ tions from different parts of the spectrum in order to obtain more detailed information. "We would like to do is measure more spectrum that might have silicon and oxygen. If we can see these at all, then that is a sign of a planet out there," said Horning said. According to NASA's press release, a spectrum is created when a spectrophotograph with a specific infrared filter is used to measure light from a distant planet. By analyzing the resulting pattern of light, the spectrum reveals "fingerprints" of chemical make up of the object.

Spitzer is an infrared telescope that orbit the sun following the Earth. Horning said the collected data could have obtained without this well­ designed approach to "the kind of experiment." "The fact that this telescope is well away from the earth in an earth-like star, orbiting the neutron star can provide valuable information. Our goal is to answer the question of whether there is life on other planets, Horning said.

White said students can expect to see the approved changes to the RWC by the 2012-2013 school year. Phase III—which was the proposal submitted—will add space for students to work out, said William Ehling, RWC director.

"As we enter into Phase III, students should expect to see twice the amount of cardio and free weight space," Ehling said.

The plan will also enable the RWC to accommodate more UCF students than before.

White told the audience that construction of the RWC is on track.

John Hill, 21, said any extra space should be put to use. "I think we should have more student population to similar amenities," Hill said.

Among other things, he discussed the success of UCF’s_application and why it’s a good idea for students to work out. Hill said the new RWC would be "very attractive," said.

He said this additional space will not completely the center’s goal, but will bring them closer to the goal they had when planning the campus.

Civil engineering major John Hill, 21, said any extra space added to the center is appreciated, Hill, who works out at the Coca-Cola freshmen fitness center, said the center often gets very crowded because there aren’t enough machines.

"It gets crowded in there and you have to wait about 10 minutes for the next available machine," Hill said.

White said the idea is to redo the entire thing.

The committee would like to see new sections built, Ehling said.

White called the addition of a swimming pool "fantastic," said.

White said the committee also hopes that the trustees approve plans for adding a swimming pool to Lake Claire.

A Knight statue for the Athletic Center will be placed in front of the Recreational Wellness Center.

Tom Evelyn, College of Medicine dean, said tenure for German is not unusual for her to be hired with tenure. "Dr. German is a senior-level faculty member, so it is not uncommon for her to be hired with tenure," Evelyn said.

However, Evelyn said that tenure requirements differ from college to college. "There are no set rules for tenure," Evelyn said. "The board looks at the overall experience.

He said that medical colleges often hire their dean with tenure.

Hospital contract set back

Red tape, legal squabbles squashed the Walter Reed contract for 3 yrs.

DONNA BOBACK

WASHINGTON—An Army contract to privatize maintenance at Walter Reed Medical Center was delayed more than three years amid bureaucratic bickering and legal squabbles that left the Department of Defense in a bad situation, medical officials said. The delay brought the number of severely wounded soldiers from Iraq and Afghanistan was rising rapidly.

Two separate lawsuits by the non-profit, the National Capital Region Health Care Coalition (NCRHCC), and United Services Organization (USO) were launched in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., in January 2005. But they were quickly thrown out because of insufficient legal arguments.

The Golden Knights took game one against the Scarlet Knights 2-0 only to fall in the second game 6-3.

The Knights got things started early in the first game when Clif Alvarez and Amber Lambert knocked back-to-back singles to put runners on first and second.

The Knights took a 1-0 lead when Renee Javier followed with an RBI single, scoring Alvarez.

UCF was quick to add another run in the bottom of the second.

After reaching on a walk, Lindsay Dean made the final out of the inning.

Tyson Auer had one hit and one RBI in Friday night's game. Then the Knights went 2-for-4 in Saturday night's game after splitting two games with Southern Miss.

Senior Brian Brooks picked up his second win allowing only the Knights' 4-3 loss.

Auer said "Coach was mad at us because it looked like we were asleep out there. And then we had a little talk in the dugout and turned it on."

UCF cut the lead to one in its half of the second inning when a single from Alvarez brought home Morgan Ballard from third.

The Eagles were quick to respond, tacking on another run in the third inning and one in the seventh to give them a 6-1 lead over the Knights.

Ashleigh Cole was tagged with the loss for the Knights.

Javier followed with two hits in the bottom of the seventh to give them a 3-1 advantage.

While dropping her record to 7-6 on the season, Cole pitched a complete game, striking out nine.
