IN WAR AND PROTEST

Protesters criticize UCF ties to military contractors

At 12:30 p.m. on Wednesday the five-member assembly in front of the Student Union was as calm as it could be. Students, faculty and visitors passed through on their way to other destinations or sat in shady patches. No one seemed to notice the small metal table in the center of the walkway.

A poster board taped to the front of the table bore the message, "Talk to me why I am walking out on April 20th, 'cause the statue is empty of anyone who could answer the question. The question could be answered with a collection of discarded such facts and a utilitarian mechanist, stern for more.

But in 45 minutes, the place would transform. Students opposed to the war would assemble with the military-industrial complex, walked out of their classes at 12:30 and proceeded to a demonstration in front of both the war and the university, matching to Million Hall to deliver letters of condemnation to UCF President John Hitt.

"There should be nobody here in this country with the money we're spending on war," said Eric Eingold, an organizer of the walkout.

Eingold said the Iraq war is the "continuation of failure" and criticized UCF for its involvement with companies such as Lockheed Martin and Northrop Grumman Corp.

"We have a continued force on not peace… but on military research," Eingold said. "Bombs are not designed to build schools. They've designed to decimate and blow up buildings.

Eingold suggested that money now used to fund military technology could be used to advance more peaceful goals such as funding the arts or public science.

Protestor Terry Hickory disagreed with Eingold's claim.

The money used to fund the projects Eingold takes issue with comes from corporations, and the university cannot dictate where it will be spent, Hickory said. However, he said, companies like Harris Corp. and Lockheed Martin are "not designed to build schools. They've designed to decimate and blow up buildings."

Paul J. Schwind, a second-year student who lives off-campus, wrote the letter to President John Hitt's office.

UCF students will have to say goodbye to golden this June when the UCF Golden Knights get a name change.

Instead of the current nickname, the UCF Golden Knights will be known only as the Knights, according to Joe Hornstein, assistant athletic director for athletics communications and a spokesman for UCF football.

The event will be held in the main campus bookstore, and attendees will get their first look at the new merchandise that will be sold the next day June 15.

"No question that this is a great time to be a UCF Knight," said Keith Tr dislikes. UCF's director of athletics.

It's all leis and limbo for Late Knight Luau

JESSICA SAGGO

A taste of Hawaii will come to UCF in Late Knight Luau sponsored by the end of the year. The Late Knight Luau (also known as the Oriental Martial Arts) is located in the Student Union.

The event has been organized for the past two years and has been a huge success. The Luau is held on the second floor of the Student Union and is open to all students.

The event features a variety of Hawaiian foods, including chicken, beef, pork, and chicken. There will also be a variety of drinks, including beer, wine, and non-alcoholic options.

The event will also feature live music, hula dancers, and a Luau parade. The parade will include students from various clubs and organizations, as well as some non-students.

The event is open to all students and is a great opportunity to socialize and have fun. It is a great way to end the year and to look forward to the new one.

RED opens yet another eyes to charitable causes

"Think of your generation (the 90s and 70s) as politically active, but not very effective way of protesting," said Freshman Kelly Doherty, president of the U of I chapter of the United Nations Youth Association. "We need to find a way to make our voices heard,

Senator passes stem cell research bill (growing fruits) onto Congress

WASHINGTON - A bare, Senator put into place to ease restrictions on human embryonic stem cell research, ignoring President Bush's threat of a second veto on legislation designed to fund new medical treatments. Congress passed a bill that is expected to affect millions of people who have been battling for years to find a cure for diseases that can be treated with stem cells, including cancer, diabetes and heart disease.

"They say its as if we're taking a step back in time, but I think we're moving forward," said a researcher who led the effort to pass the bill. "We've been working on this for years, and now we're finally seeing the fruits of our labor."

HIGHER EDUCATION

What's in the news at the University of Missouri!

College students^ The Windy City has become a focal point for the University of Illinois, as students are preparing to vote on a new name for the school. The name change, which was approved by the university's Board of Trustees in June, has sparked debate among students and faculty about whether the new name is appropriate.

"It's a good idea, but we need to think more about how we can implement it," said a student who supports the change. "We need to make sure that the new name reflects our values and our mission."
College Republicans hold counterprotest to walkout

By AMANDA MILLAR, FLORIDA FUTURE

By 12:31, Ali Estrada, 31, a psychology and political science double major, joined friends seated on benches behind the unmanned walkout

Estrada planned to walk out of her statistics class in the lecture hall of the Math and Physics Building. Some of her friends who didn't have class at the time decided to join her.

"I feel that it's necessary to show that we are in opposition to the war in Iraq," Estrada said.

Not just the war, but what Estrada said are UCF's ties to the military, such as a project in Research Park to develop a robot that's used in combat.

"They're using us and our valuable time ... to help spread this weapon," she said.

At 12:31, Patrick DeCarlo, a member of SDS, stood near Estrada, rose, and urged students to participate.

"The protesters held signs reading 'No more lies!' and 'Impeach Bush.'

DeCarlo, still holding the megaphone, led protesters in a chant saying, "We control our souls." Behind him was a sign depicting the silhouette of a bomb emblazoned with the picture logo.

Directly across from him, members of the College Republicans held their own counterprotest. Standing behind their American flag, they criticized protesters for not honoring soldiers' sacrifices to preserve freedom.

"If it weren't for our soldiers, we'd all be speaking German in a Nazi region," said Justin York, executive director of the College Republicans.

And other CRL members said the protesters ignored the fact that their freedom of speech was being protected by soldiers in Iraq.

"It won't affect our soldiers in Iraq, they wouldn't have the right to speak," said Joe Calvert, a business management junior.

"Pretty much, we're here to show people both sides of the story," he said.

Some people cheered, others jeered, and some urged speakers to voice their opinions.

"I think it's very stupid if people want to voice their opinions this way," he said.

A drumbeat began, and filming in the telescope developed into a steady rhythm, to which the protesters marched toward Millican Hall.

Estrada said she supported students' decision to walk out, but doubted if it would accomplish much.

"The war's a mess, and I don't think anyone will get us out of this," she said. "If we had a war, if a warhead made a difference, but I don't think it would.

Estrada and her friends split up, taking seats in the second row, three on each side of the two-sectioned hall. As class began, they waved, and at 10 minutes before 1, silently got up and ascended the stairs toward the doors.

The time Estrada returned to the first-assembly zone, a crowd had already formed.

"I feel that it's necessary to show that we are in opposition to the war in Iraq," Estrada said.
Beat the No. 17 Gators in Gainesville?

NO SWEAT

BRIAN MURPHY

UCF baseball fans had just one question after the Knights' game on Tuesday: where has this team been all season? Sophomore Kyle Sweat pitched the best game of his collegiate career as the Knights (18-19) defeated the No. 17 Florida Gators (20-16) in Gainesville. Sweat allowed two hits and six of the first seven hitters he faced. He did not allow a leadoff hit until the eighth inning. Sweat retired the last 12 batters he faced and kept the Gators guess- ing by changing his pitch speeds and locations.

"That was the most dominating pitching performance we've had this year," UCF coach Jay Bergman said. "Sweat was in complete control of the game, physically and mentally." Sweat threw first-pitch strikes to six of the first seven hitters he faced and kept the Gators guessing by changing his pitch speeds and locations.

"Our basic philosophy has always been to be able to pitch inside," Bergman said. "If we can pitch inside, we can work the outer half of the plate. "We really haven't had the pitchers this year to pitch inside. And you see what happens when it works." Sweat was expected to be the Knights' top starter in 2007, but he was the team's opening day starter on Feb. 3 against Florida International.

But after compiling a 10.57 ERA over his first two starts, Sweat was moved out of the starting rotation. In the past two months, Sweat has done most of his work out of the bullpen. Tuesday was Sweat's second midweek start of the season.

"When I found out I was starting this game, I knew I had to give it my all," Sweat said. "I just tried to keep them off balance." Sweat certainly did that. Bergman was so impressed with the performance that he said Sweat certainly did that.

Key pitching helps softball take 1 of 2 from FAU

MELISSA HEBDOEN

The UCF softball team improved to 30-27 on the season after splitting a doubleheader with Florida Atlantic on Wednesday and taking a road game from Jacksonville 4-2 Tuesday night. Led by two dynamic pitching performances, both teams earned a 1-0 win in the two-game series Wednesday.

In game one of the doubleheader, the Golden Knights' Allison Kimes threw a complete-game shutout, allowing just two hits and one walk while striking out six. The win was Kimes' 10th of the season.

The Knights connected first in the second inning, using three hits to grab the early 1-0 lead.

After Kimes would get the first out of the inning, Breanne Javier and Hillary Barrow would each hit back-to-back singles to right and left field respectively. Lindsay Dean would strike out the next at bat, but it wouldn't matter, as Megan Murphy would hit an RBI single up the middle, plating Javier from second.

Morgan Ballard would strike out to end the inning and the Knights scoring would end at 1-0. UCF would prove that one run was all they needed, as both teams' starting pitchers shut down the respective offenses for the rest of the game.

Florida Atlantic's starting pitcher, Kathryn Stauffer, threw a five-hit complete game. Stauffer allowed just two hits on the night after UCF's second-inning run. Leading the Knights offense was Kacie Feaster, who went 2-for-3 at the plate.

Dean was Krames' first baseman on the night. Jenna Lopez was FAU's offensive leader, grabbing both of the Owls hits on the night.

THE WEEKEND

IT'S practically a ban on the mentally impaired at the box office this weekend.

In corner one, we have the giddy bunch from Aqua Teen Hunger Force Colon Movie Film for Theaters.

Either perpetually under the influence or just behaving like it, this film about the adventures of a trio of slacker fast food items is as packed to the brim with non sequiturs and foul-mouthed eccentricity as could be anticipated—and perhaps feared.

They're a crowd you either run with or run from, and even if you think they're amusing enough to keep you company for 10 minutes at a time, an hour of general nonsense involving an evil exercise machine with a dammably catchy beat might be more than enough for even their biggest fans.

In corner two, we have the suburban sleuths of Disturbia, led by a housebound teenage voyeur who suspects his neighbor of being a killer.

Yeah, we saw Rear Window too, but it's a touchy subject. Try not to mention it around them.

Please see 4 REASONS on A10.

Do the time warp again

ANANDA S. SHAPIRO

A man sits alone on a dimly lit stage. He is bent in the shadow that he cast upon his black wardrobe, illuminated only by the moonlight that outlines his contours.

The show has nearly begun. But there are no announcements of this, and if you aren’t paying attention for it, you’ll never know what to expect.

Suddenly, the curtain rises. The audience is awash with the professional display of well-trained actors of the Rocky Horror Show. Among the crew is just how that even the people in the last row couldn’t wait to cower at the thought of becoming one of their minions.

Tonight, she and the rest of the Rocky Horror universe will enchant the audience. The story documents their liberation and the free-tiered types from the contemporary crowd and the class of Conan hang around the camp value.

We have a sleepy journalist (Halle Berry), complete with teenage goth sensibility, brown hair, and a very ordinary-looking guy (Giovanni Ribisi). Try to get the word down on a big-time ad executive.

Each of these half-wits has nowhere to hide, leaving them to either flat in both words and never one of them slip up.

And then the others.

That’s not to mention the ultimate representation of who is really responsible for a murder, a twist so thoroughly unexpected that the audience couldn’t be more impressed.

The overall production of the Rocky Horror Show is perhaps the defining element of the show. That’s not to mention the most certainly least, are the audience.
