The lives of three UCF students and one faculty member were cut short on May 8 when a violent car crash on Alafia Road left one student dead and sent two to the hospital.

Residents in the Bonneville area could soon be getting a $50,000 pedestrian bridge to connect their community with UCF’s Research Park.

Robert Moore put aside her claustrophobia to dive to the surface in a cave. Roberta Kelly Blaikie lost her helmet when her 1999 Honda Accord nearly crushed the driver’s side. The group conquered a class-four rapid while white water rafting on May 7.

A family in Chicago got a surprise when their son opened the Easter basket. It was empty. There were no egg shells in the nest, so officials think it was a raccoon or a human.

When she was a young girl, Courtney Moore saw a production of "Fiddler on the Roof" for the first time. She said, "I want to do that. I want to be that girl." Moore has made her dream a reality and now is preparing to compete in the Kennedy Center American College Theatre Festival, a national theater program in which theater departments and student artists from more than 3,000 colleges and universities showcase their work. According to the KCACTF, the students must choose an acting partner, a monologue and a short scene to perform. Moore was nominated for her performance in "Nina's Gym," a British play by Michael Frayn. Moore chose Michael Cox, a fellow classmate, as her acting partner. They performed the scene at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. in April.

Moore started performing in her school show when she was in middle school. "I've been taking acting classes and acting show for almost all my life," she said. During high school, she was part of a theater company through her school and performed in it up to seven shows a year. "Although I didn't have any official roles, I enjoyed being a part of it," Moore said.

Moore's journey has been a long one. "I've been working on this for about 12 years. I started performing at UCF, and now I'm doing it to a whole new level," Moore said.

Brotherton helped Moore take her craft further. "I honestly enjoy the day-to-day acting that she does. She's very talented and she's been with us for a long time," Brotherton said.

Moore said she enjoys the friendships she's formed over the years. "We've become very close friends and sharing all those memories with cast members at UCF through the UCF Conservatory Theatre," Moore said. "It's been great. It's been so much fun."

Moore's talent and hard work paid off in the form of a scholarship. "I was very excited to receive the Irene Ryan Award," Moore said.

"I'm so proud of her and I'm just so happy for her," Brotherton said.

"I'm proud of her. I'm proud of the way she's handled everything. She's worked hard and she deserves it," Moore said.

Moore looks to her mother for inspiration. "She's my biggest inspiration and she's always been a role model for me," Moore said. "She's always been a part of my life and she's always been there for me."

A suicide bomber killed 14 people in eastern Afghanistan after conscripts by GARGILO, Afghanistan. A suicide bomber on foot detonated himself in a crowded market in eastern Afghanistan on Sunday just after a U.S. convoy drove by, killing at least 14 people and wounding 30 officials and witnesses. The attack in the city of Gargilo damaged several shops, shattered windows and destroyed the stores closest to the explosion.

Witnesses said a U.S. convoy appeared to be the target, and Mid. Williams O'Malley, a spokesman for NATO's International Security Assistance Force, said there were initial reports of injuries to NATO officials, though he didn't have the details.

Six people died at the scene of the blast, police said. Another eight later died at a hospital, said Ghoshan Haider, the doctor in charge of the Gargilo hospital. He said two of the 31 people injured were in a critical condition.

Afghan soldiers bloodied the wounded. Violence in Afghanistan has increased sharply in the last several weeks. More than 1,000 people have been killed in immunity-related violence this year, according to the research group NATO and Afghan officials. The dead have mostly been civilians, but about 300 civil-

A statement from NATO's ISAF said that during the last several days Afghan and ISAF operations "have resulted in the removal of over 100 enemy fighters." The ISAF spokesman said it wasn't immediately clear what the word "removed" meant.

The statement said local Afghans apparently were increasing their cooperation with military and government units.

Wednesday's feeling occurred without incident. Matt Houston, a 28-year-old psychology major was cited last week with a trespassing warrant, and was allowed inside the park for a year. Houston stood at the barrier of Thornton Park with a sign that read, "I want to live in Lake Eola to share food with the homeless, and all I got was this lousy trespassing warrant."

According to Jennifer's father, Thornton, "Every week, we try to go around the park to meet the protesters. They're going far beyond their right to enforce the ordinance," said Dante Brembilla, "Secretary of international business, economics and organizational chair of Orlando's Progressive Alliance. Every year, we try to get by the rules as they change their interpretation and don't change the wording of the law. They should just let us feed people."
water down while rafting a one-hour rapid and lived to tell the tale. I felt the biggest push of all the time from The Daniel on the fourth day of our road trip. Together, we rafted to our first nonstop campsite at UCT; we’re rarely spoken with my dad since the divorce. Hopefully, better times with this summer will help me get to know my father again.

Now, six articles and more than 6,000 word limit, it’s time to share my thoughts with the people I’ve come to know and respect over the past weeks. On May 10, during our final campsite together, this is what I had to say about the road trip experience.

Dana Stiller

“ar been allowed to be myself for a while. The fresh air has enabled me to clear my head and appreciate my new friendships.”

Haley Window

“I have something to offer, and it made the experience enjoyable. I wouldn’t do anything other group of people.”

Taylor Howell

“I loved getting to know each person’s different values, programs, and enjoy the exciting and making me laugh.”

Katie Mahle

“Playing games and goofing off were really a lot of fun.”

Travis Daniel

“On this trip, I did four different things I’ve never tried before. It’s great fun.”

Emily Rosenzweig

“We pushed ourselves and did each activity full force. Pull force to the end.”

The amazing Vazquez
Sophomore Kiko Vazquez had a season-high five hits in UCF's 13-3 victory Monday. The lefty catcher is third in the nation with a .471 on-base percentage.

Fantastic finish
After a three-run 10th inning, the Knights completed the season in style. The win clinched their postseason berth.

The Knights have lost nine games this season by two runs or less, and have a number of games where they had a double-digit total of runners left on base.

Four UCF errors contributed to three Marshall runs as the Thundering Herd bounced out to a 4-0 lead through seven innings. But the Knights did not give in.

Tyson Auer led off the eighth inning with an infield single and one out later, Duffy's ground ball to third that was hit so hard, third baseman Blake Russell, started the inning with singles against UAB and Southern Miss.

A couple of pinch hitters, Kyle Mills and Chris Marshall, started the inning with singles against UAB and Southern Miss.

The Knights clinched their postseason berth Friday by scoring five runs in the final two innings, including three in the ninth.

The win secured a spot in the Conference USA Tournament.

The Knights claimed victories on Thursday and Friday, 6-3 and 8-2, respectively, before losing in what was basically a meaningless game in the standings on Saturday, 6-3.

Do the math.

With $484 million worldwide in 2001 added on to $920 million worldwide in 2004, it is quite apparent why DreamWorks didn't pass up a third Shrek offering.

Now, here we are again with everyone's favorite ogre taking over just about every screen that Spidey isn't still swinging on.

However, screen counts and massive profits aside, what matters to moviegoers is how Shrek the Third measures up to its hilarious predecessors, and while it may look like a Shrek and may sound like a Shrek, it's barely enough to pass muster.
Directed by family favorite Blake (Ben Stiller), "Night at the Museum" is a unique adventure. Celebrities in cross-country ace make pit stop in Orlando

WOOODY WOMMACK

Bullrun, a cross-country ace for charity, made a stop in Orlando on Wednesday, and it didn't fail to deliver on its promise of famous faces and rainy stories.

Sixty-five celebrities started the race May 11 in Montreal, Quebec, wanting to be the first car to reach the Key West finish line eight days later.

"It turns out, slow and steady doesn't win the race," said Dunn, who finished within 20 of his fellow drivers.

When asked why he was racing behind the other drivers, Dunn said, "My laziness seems to have surpassed any technology that I might have to help me with." Dunn rode in his BMW SUV, with his brother and a close friend. "We're just playing. Playback and watching the same old track. We're just driving and selling the track."

One driver who was taking the pace a little more seriously was Richard Rawlings when he made it to New York City and decided to take a stab at history. Rawlings and his co-pilot Dennis Collins left New York for Los Angeles on a bet from another driver, with the goal of setting the world record for the fastest trip coast-to-coast. They reportedly accomplished this goal by driving a borrowed Parish across the country in an astounding 31 hours and 39 minutes. But it has yet to be proven as Rawlings and Collins have not yet to display the mileage that it has yet to be accomplished.

After the cars arrived, a celebrity go-kart race was held in an eight-lane, invitation-only party.

Meanwhile, fed up with dink-dank, performance depicting his own downfalls, Prince Charming (Paul Rudd) rounds up all the villains he can for a takeover of the stadium.

Shrek, accompanied by Donkey (Eddie Murphy) and Po in Boots (Antonio Banderas) arrive at Wrestlemania to pick it up. Ye olde men are obviously some scoundrels, but then we're whipped back to Fa Fur Away, where the joke remains that it's still just like Beverly Hills.

There are enough laughs in the first hour or so to reach a watch, but the few truly inspired moments—such as when the Giantess Man has his little finger before his eyes—serve to show how funny the storyline and unexpected everything else should be. Instead, when Shrek sees these words regarding the behavior of babies, "poop" that gets a lot more and the lines are not as man, and you can practically hear coffee as the writer's typing, the joke remains that it's still just like Beverly Hills.

However, between a team of four writers and an ensemble that does little to entertain us that they're in for anything more than an easy paycheck, the script that made the first two films so appealing appears to be extinguished. Gone are the majority of pop culture references that made those films so immediately amusing, even if we usually don't, few new gags fill their place.

Orlando homeless have a right to eat

A year ago, the city of Orlando outlined comprehensive plans to address homelessness. Officials passed an ordinance that banned feeding homeless people in parks. The ordinance prohibits mass feedings within a 250-yard radius of City Hall, public transportation, historic sites, and government buildings. It also prohibits feeding homeless people on streets or sidewalks. The ordinance is designed to address the problem of homeless people gathering in public places, which officials say is disruptive to the community and public safety.

The city of Orlando's new ordinance has been controversial. Some community members support the ban, saying it is necessary to ensure public safety and prevent homeless people from taking over public spaces. Others argue that the ban is cruel and inhumane, and thatfeeding homeless people is a way to help them and prevent them from hurting themselves or others.

One of the most controversial aspects of the new ordinance is the ban on feeding homeless people in public parks. The ban was put into place to prevent homeless people from congregating in public spaces, which officials say is disruptive to the community and public safety.

Orlando is not alone in its efforts to address homelessness. Many cities across the country have implemented similar ordinances to address the problem of homeless people congregating in public spaces. However, there is no easy solution to this problem, and many cities are struggling to find ways to help homeless people without exploiting them or causing them further harm.

The new ordinance in Orlando is part of a broader effort to address homelessness. The city has also implemented programs to provide shelter and services to homeless people, and it is working with community organizations to help homeless people find work and housing.

The new ordinance is a step in the right direction, but it is not the only solution to the problem of homelessness. Many cities need to do more to address the root causes of homelessness, such as poverty, lack of affordable housing, and mental health issues. Only by addressing these root causes can we hope to solve the problem of homelessness once and for all.
