Incoming freshman Katherine Carter, who was watching the lightning strike from her window, said, "I was watching the lightning strike from my window, and I thought it was a bomb." Carter said.

The electricity went off within seconds and flipped back on, but the TV was still on.

A bolt of lightning striking Pegasus Pointe Building 10 Tuesday evening started a fire in the roof of one of the apartments, displacing several students but injuring no one.

Firefighters extinguished the flames before the fire spread to the apartment below.

Residents of the apartments were relieved to see firefighters arrive before the fire spread to the apartment below.

"It was a close call," said a neighbor who watched the fire from her window. "I hope no one was injured." The neighbor said.

The electricity went off again and came back on within seconds. The TV was still on.

"I thought it was a bomb," said another neighbor who watched the fire from her window. "I was hoping no one was injured." The neighbor said.

FANB has its months to steal itself from the world, using accreditation TALLAHASSEE — The accrediting association that oversees Florida A&M University has voided its latest inspection and threatened to black public college on six-section supplemental audit, citing financial and managerial problems.

The decision on Thursday by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools is the latest blow for Florida A&M, which has been facing financial turmoil, lawsuits and dwindling enrollment.

Florida A&M was placed on probation with problems for 10 standards, including those dealing with financial stability, compliance with financial-aid requirements, and the integrity of administrative and academic offices. Other violations dealt with coerced research and outside funds, and compliance with Title IV of the Higher Education Act, which governs federal aid.

The decision also came the day that special committee was appointed to resolve financial and operational problems at Florida A&M.

For more information, call 407-823-2565.

Bernard is in the final stages of a tortoise project that involves mapping the lizard to other species and identifying the gopher tortoise's habitat. The project's ultimate goal is to create a more comprehensive database of the species' habitat, which can be used to inform future conservation efforts. Bernard explained, "The reason that I hesitate to say that it would happen is that we've been working on this project for so long."

In addition to the gopher tortoise, Bernard is also working on habitat restoration projects for other species, such as the Florida scrub jay. Bernard explained, "We're working on a project to restore native habitats, which is part of the larger effort to conserve the gopher tortoise and other endangered species in Florida."

Changes threaten school's spirit

A little over a year ago, UCF's administration and the Athletics department took a step, a colossal one, toward becoming a high profile, highly competitive athletic program.

The construction of an on-campus football stadium became a reality instead of just an idealized pipe dream. There is no doubt that Bright House Networks and UCF fans will make a great job of spotlighting that tradition over the last month on the "Knights are Coming" series.

From the humble beginnings of the facing program against St. Leo in a downpour on a Cape Cod night in 1979 to the legacy left behind by Torchy Oden, Durant and Wright, the team has gone to the Division II Final Four in 2008. The biggest critics of UCF's Sports Information office have done a great job of propelling the tradition over the last month on UCFAthletics.com with the "The Knights are Coming Home" series.

After the least-watched Finals in NBA history concluded a little over a month ago, experts have spent more time talking about the series again, off-court trade demands of Dwyane Wade than they have about Thursday's NBA Draft.

However, while they've been covering the trade demands of Wade or the Raptors' concerns over the Toronto Christmas Eve, this reporter has been glued to the coverage of a topic that no one has talked about since the year 2000: the cover story in the Florida Sports Network's "UCF's Sports Network." Vazquez, however, who reeled off 170 innings in 2005, was struck out four batters and allowed an earned run in two innings for the Champion.

Cranberries singer back with solo album

AMANDA B. SHAPIRO

Dolores O’Riordan has been released back to the wild, only this time she is accompanied by her Irish-fused band mates, The Cranberries.

It has been four years since The Cranberries hit tough member has gone on to pursue solo music careers. Seizing her turn, O’Riordan debuted Are You Listening? her musical comeback after having spent a few years out of the limelight.

Released on Sanctuary Records, the album features 12 tracks very near and dear to the Irish songwriter. The making of the album differed for the radio veteran, now nearly 20 years of industry experience has involved showcasing her talent to the world.

“It was the first time in my life I was a free agent. I had no inhibitions, which is how I felt when I first started out. That’s also visible here,” says O’Riordan of her solo album.

O’Riordan’s voice is clear from apart from other female vocalists in much of the same way that Shakira has voice has the effortless pitch modulation.

Though she appears independent of her band on Are You Listening? the album still sounds like something The Cranberries could have released. Save for the extremely personal lyrical content, there is a consistent familiarity among the melodies that lends itself to the early 90s and The Cranberries’ Everybody Else Is Doing It, Why Can’t We?

This is not to dismiss the newly solo artist, but to further the point that the music is in her trademark voice. Let’s be honest, the “cutey-cutey” wouldn’t have played anywhere near as well had it been sung by someone else. The same can easily be made with O’Riordan’s new material.

iPod making mark in music, fashion worlds

JAMIE SALAMAN

Fashion and music have a relationship that mixes pop-up pants, better hair, and the Apple iPod is a fine example of that. I mean, look at these color-full TV ads they have to pass Miss for a musician turned fashionista. These portable music players have made a big mark in the fashion world and on our campuses.

Prema Buckner, a 25-year-old senior business management major purchased her iPod from Wal-Mart. She chose the iPod over other MP3 devices because of its quality. She listens to hip-hop on her blue Nano, complete with a red “skin” covering it, mostly while riding the UCF shuttle and walking out of the gym.

Another student spritual following the iPod trend on campus, Ken McWilliams, a 20-year-old junior marketing major, has a white, 30-gigabyte iPod. He bought it from Best Buy and because of convenience.

“I have a lot of music, and it’s easier to have all of my music in one source,” McWilliams said. He prefers to listen to music from the 80s and 90s while strolling around campus or jamming out in his car.

Assuming Derryck, a 21-year-old junior marketing major, loves to wear his iPod while she walks around campus or does homework. Garf Music can help you get your study groove on. She received her 30-gigabyte white, iPod which comes loaded with a pink iPod “sock,” a birth-der gift.

She prefers it to other MP3 players because it has high music capacity, and she can find her songs faster. She also likes the fact that her iPod can play music while she studies.

That day Derryck was ill and “had to hand Willy,” but said she always has her iPod in their dorm to be “somewhat musically,” she said.

Saying that iPods are available in a variety of colors, styles and sizes, it can make both your fashion and music worlds. Prices range between $80-$400 depending on number of giga bytes.

Imagine a giant sombrero 90 feet high and a mile across. What was going on? It was a festival, of course, but not one you would associate with the phrase "mexican theme". The concept of human-powered flight fuels Flugtag, German for "flying day." Saturday's day of flight in Nashville ended up breaking two Red Bull Flugtag North American records: flight distance and public attendance.

The Kentucky team Rocky Top Rocket flew a remarkable 125 feet or more to claim the North American flight distance record of 81 feet, which was set a year before in Baltimore with what seemed like a smaller, less-drummed-up craft.

"We never would have thought we'd break the North American flight record," said Rocky Top Rocket pilot Brandon Lewark. "I thought we'd come up short and fly 30-50 feet. But it was not supposed to happen."

"A little tail wind would be smooth," said Lewark. "Today's flight was well worth the effort.

The wind was nowhere to be found when the craft took off. The pilot stayed in his seat and suspiciously tiptoed around. He prodded at the engine and then held out his hands, as if he were showing something without showing what."

"I'm just happy we're not flying," said the pilot. "Flying is just a dream."

"Did we do it?" asked Byrd. "No, we didn't. But we're happy." The wind was nowhere to be found when the craft took off.

"The mark of success was running that thing down the ramp in front of 40,000 people," Byrd said. "That's our goal, one prize, one seeming success.

"I'll see the craft I worked so diligently on for the past month go from the distance," Byrd said.

"Don't worry, I'll see the craft I worked so diligently on for the past month go from the distance," Byrd said.

"The people that you go to Bonnaroo with are like the people that you go to Fordham with, the people that you go to Fordham with, the people that you go to Fordham with," Byrd said.

"The musical buffet offered at Bonnaroo is outstanding. By the end of the festival, I realized that I had been affected, with Bonnaroo. Once affected by Bonnaroo, you will not have any problems getting to the diet for four days while enjoying an amazing sonic experience and interesting sights.

No one can take your Bonnaroo experience away from you. The people that you go to Bonnaroo with will like the people that you go to Fordham with, the people that you go to Fordham with, the people that you go to Fordham with," Byrd said.

"The White Stripes closed the festival, for four days while enjoying an amazing sonic experience and interesting sights.

Gaming addiction scores all-time low by playing World of War- craft for too long you spend more than two hours a day level- ing up to take your character to the next level, you're not alone. This is an epidemic that concerns every parent and child who has played games in the past. According to the American Medical Association, video game addiction is a serious threat facing America, and the AMA thinks it's important to try to understand the problem. The AMA has gathered data on video games, including those created by Sony and Microsoft, and they have found that children who spend more than two hours a day playing video games are more likely to develop addiction.

Children with addiction to video games may be addicted, special education teachers have warned. The AMA has also gathered data on video games, including those created by Sony and Microsoft, and they have found that children who spend more than two hours a day playing video games are more likely to develop addiction.

The stigma of addiction to video games is growing, and the AMA is working to change that. In addition to studying the effects of video games on children, the AMA is also working to educate parents about the dangers of addiction.

The AMA hopes that their research will help parents understand the risks of addiction and take steps to prevent their children from developing addictions to video games.
