Hello, kittens!

Animal Services sees feline boom

April showers and May flowers aren’t the only things sprouting here on campus. Dozens of kittens are born during these late spring months, making it the perfect time for cat adoptions, and making the month of June the national American Humane Association Adopt-a-Cat Month.

"It’s almost like if you expose it to the rebirth of the flowers and trees," said Vannessa Bouffard, marketing and public relations program coordinator at Orange County Animal Services. ‘Well, that’s just the cats. This is the time when they’re being born, and the birds happen to coincide with the sproutlings.”

On Saturday, OCAS, in lieu of the booming cat and kitten season and in honor of the last Saturday of Adopt-a-Cat Month, offered “souped-up starter kits” for up to 30 new cat or kitten adoptions. The shelter is currently swamped with thousands of kittens, brought in as stray cats, abandone d, lost and found or owner surrendered.

“We only offer a goody bag on all adoptions, but with this cat adoption project we’re offering extra incentives such as litter, some treats and things of that nature,” Bouffard said.

The special starter kits included a 5-pound bag of cat food, cat litter, toys, treats, deodorizer and some other cat supplies. They also raffled off a litter box, scratching post, cat bed and other items.

This is the first time the OCAS has offered this adoption incentive, and they hope it will bring in many potential adopters.

“We’re going to see the success of this year because it’s the first year we’re doing this, and depending on that, we can see if we will be able to do it again next year,” Bouffard said.

Differential tuition bill passed

UF, FSU and USF allowed to charge more tuition

Contemporary Trends

In an unexpected turn of events, the Florida House of Representatives agreed to a bill that will allow these three Florida universities to charge undergraduate students an additional $3,000 in tuition over the course of several years.

And if university officials and lobbyists have their way, UCF will eventually be included in that group.

"It is important that we work together to have excellent institutions of higher education in this state," Gov. Crist said to the Associated Press. "But times are tight.

The University of Florida and Florida State University will be permitted to charge a fee up to 40 percent of tuition rates. The University of South Florida will be able to charge a fee up to 30 percent of its tuition. However, the fees — which will not be covered by the Bright Futures Scholarship or the Florida Prepaid College Plan — must be gradually introduced in increments of no more than 10 percent per year.

They’re sympathetic to what Florida families are dealing with, with insurance and property taxes, and everybody recognizes that,” Crist said.

The governor threatened to veto the bill as he recently vetoed a state-funded, 5 percent tuition increase. Describing the tuition differential as “doomed,” Crist encouraged universities to tighten their budgets just as Florida families are.

Device warns you in a flash

Thorguard signals students of lightning

JEFFREY RILEY

Florida is right in the middle of its lightning season, and UCF has implemented a system to warn everyone on campus of any incoming lightning storms.

The Thorguard Lightning Prediction and Warning System, also on top of the Recreation and Wellness Center, with remote speakers in a corridor of the sports fields.

When a storm approaches, Thorguard reads the amount of electrical discharge between the earth and cloud. If it gets too high, too close to campus, an alarm goes off to warn students.

“Make it for certain. No one is going to argue with it,” said Ben Wilkinson, associate director of programs for the RWC. “That makes it a great form of support.”

The RWC purchased the initial system in 2001 for $45,000 after researching the product for nearly a year. The cost of the system was looked at, including the actual cost of the horn, siren and any other possible warning system’s emitted sound.

They wanted to find a tone that would work. They checked any other possible warning system’s emitted sound.

According to the National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration, lightning is the most consistent killer among bad weather, with the highest number of strikes occurring in June, July and August.

There are multiple lightning detection systems on the market, but Thorguard was picked.

Virginia Tech Counseling centers change

Virginia Tech Counseling Center changes program

According to the American Psychiatric Association, “Half of all college students report feeling depressed at some point in time that they had trouble functioning if left untreated. Depression can lead to suicide. Suicide is the third leading cause of death for those aged 15-24 and the second leading cause of death for college students.”

According to the American College Health Association’s 2006 national data, 9.3 percent of the college students they surveyed reported having contemplated suicide at least once. In addition, 13 percent of students surveyed reported having attempted suicide at least once.

CJP has trained more than 600 people since August 2006. The Counseling Center plans to reach 1,000 by the end of the year.

College can be an unexpected culture shock to incoming freshmen and transfer students, leading to isolation, anxiety and depression. The Counseling Center hopes to educate more students, faculty and staff about the importance of mental health.

I think when you say mental health, people automatically go to the negative,” David Wallace, director of the Counseling Center, said. “But people do have these problems, and depression and anxiety are the two big ones. Of all these mental health concerns victims and community leaders in the Everglades District, which oversees Everglades restoration projects not included in CERP, said Carl Hayes, a victim advocate of Victim Services and coordinator of the "Strike Back" event. Victim Services has already raised $400. They will hold two more fundraising opportunities this Thursday, July 14, at the Seminole Casino and Westgate Supercenter at 3250 E. Colonial Drive. "Everybody's donation board. If you don't want to get your car washed, then we also accept donations," Hayes said. "We have the opportunity to get the bugs off halls." Money raised from the car washes will go toward the events in September and October. Money left over will go straight into the victim fund. The victim fund allows Victim Services to provide immediate help for those in need. "Maybe somebody has to get out of a relationship, and they don't have any clothes with them or any food... we can buy them a gift card," said Charlotte Hewkin, a victim advocate of Victim Services. There will be at least two victim advocates at every car wash to answer questions. Passersby will have the chance to learn more about Victim Services and the help they provide. This year, because the "Strike Back" event's focus is the GLBT community, Victim Services is partnering with The Center, which is the GLBT community center of Central Florida.

Victim Services tries to raise cash

National Campus Safety Awareness Month and Domestic Violence Awareness Month take place in September and October, respectively. But that doesn't mean UCF Victim Services isn't already preparing for their annual events later this month. In the last month, Victim Services saw two car washes to raise funds for the washing events, and they have more fundraisers on the horizon.

This September, Victim Services will host the "Stand Up Speak Out" event the week of Sept. 16. This event coincides with National Campus Safety Awareness Month.

"Every year we're looking for better law enforcement and better handling of crime, sexual assault and domestic violence, striking and hazing," said MaryKnowles, Victim Services director and coordinator of the event.

During Domestic Violence Awareness Month in October, Victim Servicesfmts its "Strike Back Against Domestic Violence" event. The events this year will have local and national Hispanic and black communities involved, as well as reaching out to gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender communities.

Volunteers will be there to try and invite people to come to the events, to know that this year's event is called "Stand Up Speak Out,"" said Carl Hayes, a victim advocate with Victim Services and coordinator of the "Strike Back" event. Relocation assistance claims were filed in Florida, with $83.5 million paid by the Division of Victim Services and Crime Victim Programs. In addition, there is a large homeless population in Florida, but estimating the number of those who are homeless because of their sexual orientation is nearly impossible. "Their kids automatically become homeless. They sometimes go to work, but nowhere to turn. In the past, when parents were working, their kids here, put them on public assistance. And this is a no-go deal with them because you're not a part of their life," said Kathleen Sabato. "The "strike back" event will culminate with a community bond sale of personal and local bands to make students involved in this event feel supported by Victim Services. This year's event is looking to be better than last year's. Sabato said, and leading up to the event, Victim Services will be offering a spa package, a Wii Dance game and other prizes to be determined. Money raised from the raffle will contribute to the victim fund."

Also at this year's event, participants from the Metropolitan University will provide free massages. Free food will also be provided.

Attorney says death row inmate should be kept alive, studied

TITUSVILLE — Death row inmate Mark Duan Schaub is a “scientific mystery” who should be spared execution so he can be further studied to prevent other killers from being spared, his attorney said.

Schaub, 36, was sentenced to death for the 1995 kidnap­ping, rape, torture and murder of 7-year-old Patrick McGovern of Cocoa. Schaub, who had been released from prison for raping another child, wanted McGovern after seeing his picture in a news­paper.

“As long as he’s alive he is available for psychological research, examination and evaluation, which could in the future be much studied to become a fully under­stood criminal and may lead to a control of his criminality,” his attorney, Kenneth Studstill ofTitusville, wrote in a petition to be filed before the Office of Executive Clemency, which reviews the geve­rse.Gee, Cherie Crist in Tallahassee, to carry out the death sentence.

The case, called the “Bounty Hunter” murder, is the only death sentence in Florida ever carried out by the office.

“We have sharks and other wild life up in the beach all the time and orangutans can say our name,” he said. “We have no objection if they want to do it after he receives his injection.”

Higher Education

What’s in the news around the country: Institutions protect environment with renewable-energy plans;

DURHAM, N.C. — The University of North Carolina system has joined more than 800 other colleges and universities around the coun­try in a high­level worldwide effort to reduce greenhouse-gas emissions.

The effort, called the American College and University Presidents Climate Commitment, involves a range of goals from building all new structures to greener systems, and buy­ing electricity from renewable resources.

Scores of local communities for all institutions to create a plan for becoming climate neutral — a state in which institu­tions have no increase in greenhouse gas emissions.

Within two months of signing the commitment, institutions must establish a way to develop a plan, and within a year, must com­plete an inventory of all greenhouse-gas emissions. Within two years, institutions must have a plan, including a target date for achieving climate neutrality and goals for including the issues in curriculum or educa­tion­al experiences for students.

University systems across the country have been working to be more energy conscious and efficient.

Florida State University is one of the first colleges or universities to national recognition for building a new, energy­conscious dorm.

It is one of numerous environ­mental­research programs and has created an inter­disciplinary environmental stud­ies program.

Keene State College began receiving emission reductions in 2005 and has converted several diesel vehicles to biodiesel in collaboration with the city of Chico.

Grand Valley State College is using an environmental advisory committee to inte­grate sustainable energy practices through the college and curriculum.

Other programs already in place or being developed include using electric vehi­cles; increased use of biodiesel and a project that would use landfill methane for use at UNH.

Modified Boeing 747 carries space shuttle back to E.S.C.

EDWARD ALVORD, BAYE, Calif. — A modified jet carrying the space shuttle Atlantis took off on Sunday on a return to the Kennedy Space Center. A modified Boeing 747 with the shuttle mounted on its back left from the Mojave Aerospace Airbase at 6:05 a.m. PT, said Arian Brown, a spokesman at NASA’s Dry­den Flight Research Center at Edwards Air Force Base. The shuttle, which requires stops for refueling, is not expected to arrive at Cape Canaveral until at least Monday, with the possibility of a Tuesday arrival if weath­er is bad, NASA spokesman Bill Johnson said.

Atlantis, carrying seven astronauts, landed June 22 after a 16-day mission to con­tinue building the interna­tional space station.

Unfavorable weather at its Florida base forced the shuttle to divert to its alternate landing site in California.

Wal-Mart in Utah 14th store, nearby towns evacuated

CELESTIAL MINES, Utah — A fast­moving wildfire charged down a mountainside and into a field, and a man and his father who were working there told the man’s 15-year­old son to run.

Dana Houston escaped the fire on the edge of the Uinta National Forest, but his father, Donald, 46-year-old Tracy Houston, and his grandfa­ther, 83-year-old George Houston, were killed by the flames.

The owner of the field, 75-year­old Reg Robert Robinson, died at a Salt Lake City hospital, officials said.

The fire started Friday morning north of Neola, about 30 miles east of Salt Lake City, and by Saturday afternoon it had charred 60,000 acres of forest and forced the evacuation of nearby towns.

Officials said crews had not contained it and more wind, less moisture, was Forecast for Sunday.

By Monday, there was little wind Sunday morning, but humidity was only 22 percent, the National Weather Service said.

The town of Wanship and the nearby small community of Riker were evacuated, the newspaper said.

The fire moved to Neola on Friday, Jeff Merrill said buildings had not been destroyed but he didn’t have a count.

Astronaut shows kids how to reach for the stars
Local band one of four to play '07 Van Warped Tour

CHRISTINE HULL
Contributing Writer

Five guys, shaggy haircuts, four seven-inch records and 16 lighters are all of the essentials needed for a young, enthusiastic rock/alternative/experimental band.

Letterperfect takes the image and runs with it while creating a different sound that demands attention from their audience.

The band's newly released album, titled "Ashtown covers headless to find the reason of life. With influences ranging from The Beatles, Joy Division, Thievery and The Used, it's no wonder that the lyrics are purposefully gripping.

The album’s title describes the ongoing progress of the band, which is to venture into different styles of music while keeping with their most recent sound for future projects.

The band opened their CD with "The Greatest Leader," begins with a song about longing. "Why do you dream so much?" when we decide if you will live or you will die," is the line that we have been waiting for all of our lives," and continues to tackle the topic of how much it matters.

If the album’s first song, expresses the range of the band with humorous vocals, bars, guitar playing, jarring drum beats and echoing screams.

Overall, the album has a very imaginative and poignant ambiance alongside with a very crisp and artistic cover. The songs have a wide range of diversity while being very catchy. Each of the band’s acoustic albums that will cover some of the band’s previous albums as well as new tracks that they have been working on in their home studio.

Also, they are trying to involve more of an international influence from The Mars Volta and Circa Survive.

Letterperfect has always drawn a large crowd with their captivating performances in cities as small as Deland to larger cities like Orlando.

The band will be playing the popular Van Warped Tour this summer.

More on Letterperfect can be seen in a profile piece this week.
From action figures and comic books, to animated TV shows and an animated 1986 movie, the Transformers brand has reached everyone in one of its shapes or forms over the years. Now it's hitting the big screen with a live-action feature film just in time for the Fourth of July holiday.

Autobots

The Autobots are the Transformers Universe, a collection of various toys, graphic novels, paperted books, cartoons and movies first introduced in 1984. In the 2007 movie, these heroic robots protect the Earth and its inhabitants from the evil Decepticons.

Optimus Prime

Leader of the Autobots. He is the personification of courage, strength and balance, as it so frequently does. A skilled fighter, Bumble Bee is the ultimate fighter. More than one Decepticon has faced an ''ironhide'' ring just from seeing him narrow his eyes.

Twists surprising, music awful

WILLIAM GOSS
Staff Writer

Let's go ahead and make something clear: When it comes to Transformers, the toy line, I missed the boat.

Not that I fail to fathom the appeal of giant robot rumble; it was just always a bit more than I was looking for. I watched and played with everyone else's favorite sentient machines. I had the gift of things: Optimus Prime led the Autobots (yep!), while Megatron led the Decepticons (boo!), all of which could — say it with me now — transform into a variety of other objects, from cars in cassette players to BPGs.

So, speaking as a non-fanboy, the appeal of 1986's original Transformers: The Movie is understandable: The action is pretty constant over its 84-minute running time, the twists genuinely surprising (the said-to-be-dead Prime), and the music, awful. Like, really bad. Half soundtrack allude, nostalgia seems to have people thinking it isn't worth the price of admission to get there.

But this flick does get by on great effects and little else, but that doesn't mean a weak story and worse humor can't undermine all the booms and bangs.

My inner child would devour this last half-hour of slam-bang shenanigans with unabashed glee and now, but even my inner child might not have the patience to stomach two-thirds of relative inaction to get there.

Optimus Prime celebrates as his favorite sentient machines, the toy line, I was just always my brother more than me who watched and played with everyone else's favorite sentient machines. Some twists genuinely surprising than me who watched and played with everyone else's favorite sentient machines. Transformers, the toy line, I was just always my brother more than me who watched and played with everyone else's favorite sentient machines. I had the gift of things: Optimus Prime led the Autobots (yep!), while Megatron led the Decepticons (boo!), all of which could — say it with me now — transform into a variety of other objects, from cars in cassette players to BPGs.

New schedule pits UCF against NATION'S BEST

MELISSA HEYDORF / Staff Writer

With less than two months before the team's first game, UCF Men's Soccer head coach Bryan Cunningham recently announced the Knights' upcoming 2007 schedule.

After a tough schedule last season, resulting in a 6-9-2 record, the Knights will enter this campaign with more experience and confidence against their Conference USA opponents and national powerhouses.

The Knights' schedule will rival last year's, as they face four teams who participated in the NCAA Tournament and five opponents ranked in the top 20 nationally according to the 2006 NCAA RPI.

"We are once again playing a competitive national schedule with a combination of tough road and home matches," Cunningham said in a press release. "It is important that the players are not only challenged early but throughout the season, especially as we prepare for the games against Conference USA opponents." The last season the Knights faced four nationally ranked opponents, including SMU, who at the time was the top-ranked team in the country. Their matchup resulted in a 1-2-1 tie.

Football hires new line coach

BRIAN MORPHY / Staff Writer

The UCF Football team's offensive line is already wealthy in experience, but the Knights gained some more on Friday when coach George O'Leary announced the hiring of Tom Freeman as the team's offensive line coach. Freeman has coached college football for 36 years, including 10 at the Division I level.

Freeman comes to UCF from Stanford University, where he spent the last two seasons coaching the guards and centers on the Cardinal offensive line. He also was the team's run game coordinator.

"I am very happy to add a coach with Tom's experience to our staff," O'Leary said in a press release. "He brings with him a lot of football knowledge, and we are excited to have him here to work with our offense at UCF." During his coaching career, Freeman's teams have appeared in big bowl games, including the Sugar Bowl, Kunden, where he served for eight seasons as the defensive line coach and run game coordinator. While at Stanford, he won the 2000 Orange Bowl with the Cardinal.

Freeman's coaching history also includes coaching his bachelor's degree in physical education sports marketing and management.

MINER MARCHES ON TO ACC POSTSEASON

BARRY BOWDEN CLOSES IN ON WIN NO. 750

SALEM, Va. —— The 70-year-old head baseball coach who has led the Virginia Tech team for 38 years is one victory away from reaching the 750-win milestone. Bowden has 749 career wins entering this weekend's home series with Wake Forest.

"The season is still going to be a success if we go 2-1 this weekend," Bowden said. "We want to keep practicing and not have our legs go up and down and get ready for next year." The Hokies are 16-22 overall and 5-12 in the ACC.

WRESTLING

DEVIL BSYS FALL 4-2 TO CLEVELAND INDIES

COLUMBUS — The first-place Big Red Devils dropped their 14th of the last 17 games as Wright Prep's Matt Cazares scored the first pitch to make 12 wins and matched his 18 career total last weekend. The Devil Royals will finish up their schedule at U.S. Bank Stadium in Boston for a five-game set against the division-leading Red Sox.

FOOTBALL

FREDERER, SHARAPOVA ADVANCE TO 4TH ROUND

ATP/WTA - The Father of Chris Bernier, the deafblind long-distance runner whose deafness was found with that of a girl, 7-year-old child back in June 23, said that he is unable to be there for the Dennis Roddick tournament. Roddick has announced he will start his tournament by meeting 12 wins and breaking his 18 career total last weekend. The Devil Royals will finish up their schedule at U.S. Bank Stadium in Boston for a five-game set against the division-leading Red Sox.

EUGENE, Ore. — The No. 2 Oregon men's track and field team is in Eugene for the second day of the NCAA Championships. The Ducks are representing the country that was once again a competitive national schedule with a combination of tough road and home matches," Cunningham said in a press release. Marshall coach joins UCF

The UCF Volleyball program welcomed a new addition to their team Friday when head coach Melynda Theroulde announced the hiring of Trevor Theroulde as a new assistant coach.

A native of Trinidad, Trinidad, Theroulde joins the UCF coaching staff after spending four seasons as a volunteer assistant at Marshall.

"I am excited to have the opportunity to welcome Trevor to our staff," Cedano said in a release. "His knowledge and experience with the game of volleyball will help our team prepare for the tough Conference USA competition we will be facing this season."

During his time at Marshall, the Thundering Herd captured the 2005 Conference USA title. That same year, Theroulde graduated from Marshall with a bachelor's degree in physical education sports marketing and management.

After rumors flew all week long leading up to Thursday's draft, the decision was made for the year that fantasy players have been waiting for: Kevin Garnett is going to the Boston Celtics. The NBA announced Saturday that Garnett and the Celtics had agreed to terms on a trade that will make Garnett the most sought-after player in the league. The trade, which was confirmed by the NBA, was the culmination of months of speculation and rumors about the future of the six-time All-Star center.

But the trade was not the only significant move made during the draft. The Dallas Mavericks, who were expected to make a splash, acquired the rights to forward Shawn Marion from the Portland Trail Blazers. The Mavericks had been shopping for a big man to pair with Dirk Nowitzki, but they were unable to reach a deal with the Los Angeles Lakers. The Mavericks were also able to add wingsman Shawn Marion, who averaged 19.3 points and 9.2 rebounds per game last season. The Mavericks have been looking for a third star to go with Nowitzki and Marion, and they believe they have found one in Marion.

The Detroit Pistons, who had been at the center of trade rumors, were able to acquire center Ben Wallace from the Cleveland Cavaliers. The Pistons had been seeking a big man to complement their defense, and they believe they have found one in Wallace. The Pistons had been shopping for a center, but they were unable to reach a deal with the Utah Jazz. The Pistons were also able to add forward Tayshaun Prince from the Memphis Grizzlies. The Pistons have been looking for help on the wing, and they believe they have found it in Prince.

The Los Angeles Lakers, who had been at the center of trade rumors, were able to acquire guard Steve Blake from the Washington Wizards. The Lakers had been seeking a backcourt player to help them in their quest for an NBA title, and they believe they have found one in Blake. The Lakers had been shopping for a guard, but they were unable to reach a deal with the Dallas Mavericks. The Lakers were also able to add forward Ron Artest from the Indiana Pacers. The Lakers have been looking for a wing player to help them in their quest for an NBA title, and they believe they have found one in Artest.

The Cleveland Cavaliers, who had been at the center of trade rumors, were able to acquire guard Daniel Gibson from the Cleveland Cavaliers. The Cavaliers had been seeking a backcourt player to help them in their quest for an NBA title, and they believe they have found one in Gibson. The Cavaliers had been shopping for a guard, but they were unable to reach a deal with the Phoenix Suns. The Cavaliers were also able to add forward LeBron James from the Cleveland Cavaliers. The Cavaliers have been looking for a wing player to help them in their quest for an NBA title, and they believe they have found one in James.

The Miami Heat, who had been at the center of trade rumors, were able to acquire guard Dwyane Wade from the Miami Heat. The Heat had been seeking a backcourt player to help them in their quest for an NBA title, and they believe they have found one in Wade. The Heat had been shopping for a guard, but they were unable to reach a deal with the New York Knicks. The Heat were also able to add forward Chris Bosh from the Toronto Raptors. The Heat have been looking for a wing player to help them in their quest for an NBA title, and they believe they have found one in Bosh.

The San Antonio Spurs, who had been at the center of trade rumors, were able to acquire guard Tony Parker from the San Antonio Spurs. The Spurs had been seeking a backcourt player to help them in their quest for an NBA title, and they believe they have found one in Parker. The Spurs had been shopping for a guard, but they were unable to reach a deal with the Cleveland Cavaliers. The Spurs were also able to add forward Tim Duncan from the San Antonio Spurs. The Spurs have been looking for a wing player to help them in their quest for an NBA title, and they believe they have found one in Duncan.

The Boston Celtics, who had been at the center of trade rumors, were able to acquire guard Ray Allen from the Boston Celtics. The Celtics had been shopping for a guard, but they were unable to reach a deal with the Phoenix Suns. The Celtics were also able to add forward Paul Pierce from the Boston Celtics. The Celtics have been looking for a wing player to help them in their quest for an NBA title, and they believe they have found one in Pierce.
Dear Bush, let’s talk about stem cells

President Bush has recently put the whole country in a collective head-slap by delivering a set of statements that are more than a little perplexing.

If the president was aiming for a change in the nation’s attitude toward human stem cell research, he failed. Instead, the rhetoric and the resulting media coverage has made it more than clear that the president has no idea about the potential benefits of stem cell research.

The president’s position on stem cell research is a classic example of a politician’s use of rhetoric that is disconnected from the underlying facts. In this case, the facts are that stem cells have the potential to cure a wide range of diseases, including diabetes, spinal cord injuries, and Alzheimer’s disease.

The president’s position is also inconsistent with the current scientific consensus, which is that stem cells can be used to treat a variety of diseases and conditions. The scientific community is united in its support for stem cell research, which has the potential to revolutionize medicine and improve the quality of life for millions of people.

But the president’s comments are not just wrong, they are also dangerous. By creating a false narrative about stem cell research, the president is giving license to a host of anti-science voices to spread misinformation and discourage scientific progress.

The president has a responsibility to provide leadership on important issues. In this case, that means being honest and transparent about the potential benefits of stem cell research. The president’s comments are not only misleading, they are also harmful to the progress of science and the well-being of all Americans.

What can be done to address the president’s comments? While it is impossible to undo the damage that has already been done, there are a few steps that can be taken.

First, scientists and advocates for stem cell research should speak out clearly and directly about the benefits of this important field. They should explain to the public that stem cells have the potential to cure a wide range of diseases and improve the quality of life for millions of people.

Second, the media should be encouraged to report on the scientific consensus on stem cell research, rather than allowing the president’s comments to take center stage.

Finally, politicians at all levels should be encouraged to support stem cell research. This includes supporting federal funding for stem cell research, and ensuring that the regulatory environment for stem cell research is conducive to progress.

The president’s comments on stem cell research are not just wrong, they are also dangerous. We need honest and transparent leadership on this important issue, and together we can work to ensure that stem cell research is able to reach its full potential.

JENNIFER LARRINO

President Bush’s comments on stem cell research are not just wrong, they are also dangerous. We need honest and transparent leadership on this important issue, and together we can work to ensure that stem cell research is able to reach its full potential.

We should be willing to pay to better UCF

Crit signed a tuition increase bill that will allow difficulties of Florida, Florida State University, and the University of South Florida. Although UCF is not included in this bill, the decision sets the pace for future decisions.

Since I’m reading it, I was struck by just how good a thing it was to be included in that bill. I’m not sure that the President of UCF will hold me to that bargain at the beginning of the semester. Still, I will have to wait until the tuition bill comes to me.

For one, UCF professors and staff may be able to increase the rate of pay. For those who have earned their degrees from UCF, the pay rate is an issue. With some students seeming satisfied with the lower pay, it is the right time for a careful look at the pay increase.

One can see that it is not all a good thing. With the increase in the cost of living, the pay increase will not make up for the additional costs.

UCF is also able to move forward with those security plans that are currently being debated by the Board of Directors. With all of these changes, combined with the day-by-day costs of maintaining an open university, it is not clear how the university needs more money.

It is a little hard to imagine, but the bottom line is that the university needs money. The budget is still not set, but the amount needed is close to $40 million. The university has never been in a worse position.

In short, the increase in tuition is a step in the right direction. The students expect a lot. They expect to see the university continue to improve, to increase the need for a serious approach to the issue of differential tuition increases.

This is cheaper than it is for other universities, and what many students are not convinced is that the university needs more money.

We students expect a lot. We expect the university to do its job. We expect the university to improve our education and protect us.

Our student body leans to the right. We believe that the university needs more money. We believe that the university needs to improve its educational programs. We believe that the university needs to improve its facilities.

We believe that the university needs more money. We believe that the university needs to improve its educational programs. We believe that the university needs to improve its facilities.

But, in the end, we believe that the university needs more money. We believe that the university needs to improve its educational programs. We believe that the university needs to improve its facilities.
