Board of Governors hosts emergency meeting at UCF to discuss the lawsuit

DONALD THOMANN

As UCF officials brace for a possible budget cut by state legislators for the 2007-2008 academic year, the Florida Board of Governors on Friday filed a lawsuit challenging Gov. Charlie Crist's veto of tuition increases.

The lawsuit will be discussed tomorrow at an impromptu meeting of the Board of Governors at UCF.

"We take great interest in the legal action but have no comment today," said Bill Edwards, director of communications for the State University System of Florida. "The members of the Board of Governors will discuss it when they meet Monday at the University of Central Florida."

If that wasn't enough, UCF's administration is preparing for the possibility of Tallahassee siding another 4 to 10 percent of the budget. More than likely the total budgets for universities will be decreased if these predictions for shortfalls are correct," said Dan Holsenbeck, the vice president of University Relations. "So far, we know it could be anywhere from 4 to 10 percent in the reduction of the 2007-08 budget. What we're trying to do is think about what we could cut across the entire university for the upcoming year.

The budget cut would compound the difficulties faced by UCF and other Florida universities since Crist vetoed a percent tuition increase across the board. The governor's veto has already cost the university $2.5 million.

The governor's office deems the actions taken through the legislature just filed but have no comment to the lawsuit. To the long term, we hope to develop full organic trans state cell research," said Dr. Lawrence von Kahn, an associate professor of biology at UCF.

Throughout all the Florida science professors, one letter to the university suggested a reduction in the budget for what called "central research.

Although no government funding will be flowing into research stem cell research in the near future, the lowering impact of the research isn't growing.

Bush's veto won't affect stem cell research at UCF.

LAUREN PAULUSKAS

The only professor at UCF to sign a letter sent to President Bush asking him not to veto the latest stem cell research bill is looking to make miracles.

"The long term, we hope to develop full organic trans state cell research," said Dr. Lawrence von Kahn, an associate professor of biology at UCF.

Although no government funding will be flowing into research stem cell research in the near future, the lowering impact of the research isn't growing.

The lawsuit filed Friday by the board will likely be the first of many to challenge the state's bottom line, but still strong for funding. It's wouldn't be surprising, but it's still strong for funding. It's wouldn't be surprising.

UCF labs use embryonic stem cells

By LINDA SOLOVIC

UCF researchers are studying the feasibility of using embryonic stem cells for medical advancements, but the debate over the use of these cells continues. "We know that embryonic stem cells can help repair damaged tissues," said Dr. J. S. Sugaya, vice president of Research at UCF. "We're very interested in using these cells to understand the potential for medical treatment." Sugaya's extensive research has led him to explore the potential uses of embryonic stem cells. "We've been able to generate stem cells from various types of tissues," he said. "This opens up new possibilities for treatment." Sugaya's lab has demonstrated that stem cells can be used to regenerate damaged tissues. "We've been able to create functional tissue using embryonic stem cells," he said. "This is a step towards the development of new therapies." However, the use of embryonic stem cells remains controversial. "There are ethical concerns associated with the use of embryonic stem cells," said Dr. M. J. Solis, another researcher at UCF. "We need to ensure that we are using these cells in a responsible manner." Despite the controversies, research continues at UCF. "We are committed to exploring the potential of embryonic stem cells," said Solis. "We believe that these cells have the potential to revolutionize medical treatment." over to us in August," Stapp said.

He said that tickets for events scheduled in August and September have already gone on sale.

As of now, the ticket sales are for the men's as well as Carlos Muniz and Bill Galbr.

"We're holding back to make announcements on the others," Stapp said.

The UCF men's and women's basketball games will be held in the 1,500-seat center, which also houses club seats, a club lounge, and larger locker rooms and dressing money for the talent who perform in the center.

"We truly now have an arena that will attract events in the marketplace," Stapp said. "It's a state-of-the-art facility.

Along with the basketball games and entertainment acts, concerts will also be pumping music through the giant walls of the center soon.

Family shows such as Sesame Street Live and Disney's Ralph that performed at the Arena in the past have already allowed people from the surrounding community to purchase what UCF has to offer.

In February 2008, the Knights Plaza is expected to be finished.

The Convocation Center will be the size of the old Arena, which is temporary shut down until the end of August.

The Arena will become a practice facility, an area for smaller sessions or gatherings and coaching offices. It will also have another purpose.

"It will be home to the heaveyU basketball team," Stapp said.

Board members and alumni have already viewed the Convocation Center.

"The response has been extremely favorable," Stapp said. "We have not been able to get the general public to see it because it's still a hard-core area.

One part of the plaza that the general public can view is the real area next to the center.

So far, Papa John's Pizza, Modgino's Ice Cream and Theatre, Budweiser, and Nature's Table will all have spaces upon where the UCF community and those outside can enjoy a meal.

The restaurants opened on campus in January, and business was steady until the snowstorm began."

"With that, the market sales have dropped," Stapp said. "They need to expand their marketing reach outside the UC campus.

Business from the employees at nearby UCF Park will hopefully be the first stop in expanding that reach, Stapp said.

The sooner the Convocation Center opens, the better it will be for everyone," Stapp said.

"As construction ceases up and the area gets better, absolutely their sales are going to grow," Stapp said.

The completion of the Convocation Center not only means an improvement in business, it means completion of surrounding trade as well.

There will also be room to grow for the Kings Plaza. Future venues, such as Joe John's Gourmet Deli and Pickle's Pub, will be opening next door to the Center.

"We will have a student dining area in the Convocation Center," Stapp said. "The offering is only going to grow in that area.

The Convocation Center, although almost finished, does not yet have an official name.

"There will be naming rights eventually but not right now," said Chad Benteke, assistant director of UCF News and Information.

With plans to look forward to the UCF community will be able to open their eyes, don their Tin-Tabbers and feast upon new restaurants right on campus in the near future.

As Joe Hornstein, UCF's assistant vice president for media relations, puts it, "It's a great time to be a Knight!"

WRESTLING MANIA

UCF club wrestling succeeds despite recruiting troubles

3 years ago, the UCF club wrestling team was nothing more than a vision. With a limited budget and no scholarship opportunities, the team was struggling to find recruits. However, with the help of a few dedicated coaches and a supportive community, the team has built a successful program.

Since the team's founding in 2018 as part of the National Collegiate Wrestling Association, it has grown to become a competitive team with a proven track record. The team has made it to the nationals every year, and its athletes have earned numerous accolades.

Great athletes have helped lead the way for the program, including a two-time national champion and a three-time All-American. The team's success is a testament to the hard work and dedication of its members and coaching staff.

With continued support and a commitment to excellence, the UCF club wrestling team is poised for even greater success in the years to come.

Baseball's Bergman inks new deal

UCF's longest tenured coach will be sticking around for at least one more year.

UCF Director of Athletics Kyle Truilla announced Monday that the Knights have extended baseball coach Charley Bergman through the 2024 season. The new deal keeps Bergman at the helm of the Knights' program for an unprecedented 25th season at UCF.

"Charley Bergman has experienced continued success during his time at UCF and has shown great dedication to his programs, the university and the community," Truilla said in a press release. "He has been our baseball program's head coach in the right direction, and we are confident that his teams will continue to compete for Conference USA championships and berths in the College World Series in Omaha." Bergman recently completed his 25th season at UCF, as the Knights finished with a 20-33 record. In May, he took a team with five seniors to its first Conference USA Championship, where the Knights posted a 10-11 record against 18-seed Houston in an elimination game.

"The 2023 campaign also included victories over seven different NCAA Tournament teams Chris Harrison Smith, Jordan Albers, Austin Klein, and Mark Nelson were all part of UCF's first C-USA title in 20 years." Bergman said in a press release.

"This is definitely one of the best years," said Bergman. "It has been a long road, but the boys have shown me that I can't believe I've been here 25 years."
After ending its 2005 season with 9 straight losses, and a 4-5 overall record, the UCF Volleyball team will hope to rebuild this season with a new head coach and a schedule that features 15 regular season matches, including 13 at home.

Head coach Melissa Hugyecz announced the 2007 schedule for the Knights on Friday (3). The Knights, who signed a National Letter of Intent with eleven of Matt Fox, Kyle Bono). who signed a National Letter of Intent with

Rapper Necro joins show at Arena Tuesday

AMANDA SHAPIRO
Staff Writer

Now in its third year, the Sounds of the Underground tour will soon launch metal, hardcore and metalcore bands straight into a city near you.

For the city of Orlando, the wait is almost over. Headlining the tour this year is GWAR, a thrash metal band best known for their outlandish costumes, graphic lyrics and crude stage antics. The band has grown with the rookie music festival since its 2005 debut.

Set to take over the UCF Arena Tuesday, the tour will feature the headliners with support by Chimaira, Every Time I Die and Necro among the other 15 bands on the bill. This year, spotlight was placed on GWAR and Necro.

Kicking off his first major tour, Necro joins the crew as somewhat of a musical outcast. Fusing components inherent to multiple genres, Necro defies social stereotypes and shatters as he performs what he's coined "metal hip-hop."

But don't even think of confusing his work with rap rock. "Metal hip-hop is real. Rap rock is commercialized," Necro said. "The difference is that you can understand what I'm saying in my lyrics. I'm painting pictures for the people."

The rapper has collaborated with some of the biggest names in the metal world, including members from Shadows Fall, Suffocation, Anthrax and Twelve Tribes. Among his credits, Necro is also a producer and film director.

As CEO of his independent label Psycho Logical Records, he's taken control of his craft to bring audiences quality music.

"I break my back to put this stuff out," he said. "My reputation is on the line." Necro is more than proud to be a metal head and happily reminds people that he's worked alongside Sepultura and Obituary.

But as with most artists who attempt to break the mold, controversy bounds close behind.

It's summer, and there's no better time for natural beauty-obsessed magazine fans to turn to their favorite glossy read. The latest issue of Teen Vogue is too good to be true.

Instead of featuring people who look like they're in the middle of a beauty shoot, the pages are filled with stories about everyday women who are working on themselves.

It's a refreshing change from the usual glossy fare, but the lack of celebrity profiles is what really sets this issue apart.

Not your average pop of Joe

LAURA LEONARD

In a world of Starbucks and Barneys, a new coffee shop hopes to separate itself from the usual coffeehouse scene.

Juan Davis's Push Play Cafe, aptly named for the musical inspiration behind it, offers a good cup of coffee and a gig to the music-loving community in a relaxing and artistic environment.

Push Play doesn't want to be just another coffee shop. It's about the community. And it's about the music.

Gino and his wife, Amber, open the cafe mid-month of OCT, 2002, in Altavista District of Orlando.

A professional filmmaker and photographer, Gino said the cafe is just a small part of his big plan: supporting independent artists.

He wants artists from all walks of life to be able to play at the cafe. He hopes to have people saying, "When you come to Orlando, you gotta come play here.

On Thursday nights, the cafe serves up hot and cold drinks, food and good music — all while relating to bliss music in a coffee-soaked scene.

The music usually starts around 9 pm. Get a seat fast because as the night heats up, the place fills up even faster.

Push Play goes to a whole new level when Mike Gottlieb said, "This is a people cafe. This is a community cafe. The weekly saxophonist at the cafe is an engaging person by day and a moody lover by night.

"I tell you, it's cool. We really have a great crowd. The music is real. It's not just your run-of-the-mill stuff. It's a whole different vibe.

The Winter Springs artist said the coffee shop is "very刀 every night of the week.

And you, they have beer at the Push Play. The Eighteen choirs of beer accompany their selections of wine for their two-for-one beer nights on Fridays.

But if something non-alcoholic suits you fancy, smoothies and tea are available — if you can't find something you want on the menu of coffee or espresso drinks.

"Nobody wants to drink coffee from a gray cup, nobody wants to drink coffee from a purple cup," Gottlieb said. "That's why we offer drinks in big to go mugs so you won't get your fingers on it.

Metal hip-hop breaks the mold

From At.

Plotted for his apparent obsession with sex and death, Necro talks about the intense signs surrounding his lyrics. "I'm from the 'Brockie,' " Necro said. "People ask me if I'm a homosexual. I'm not. I'm not aware of anything that I'm not capable of." But put me in front of 1,000 people and I'll make 10,000."

Examples of this brutal lyrical work appear in "Creepy Crawl" as an artistic glimpse into the Charles Manson mindsets, written as though coming from Manson's point of view. "Growing up in the projects, Necro started his career in music by playing guitar in various bands. His love for metal followed him to the microphone where he would do live shows.

Soon, the dark and intense melodies of metal continued their way into his lyrics, and Necro founded himself as the leader of an underground music subculture. Though he has never sold more than 15,000 copies of a single album, Necro seems content and finds success in the niche that he is the original. He has helped promote and market more than 20 music albums without the help of a major label. His do-it-yourself ethics are heavily reminiscent of the early hardcore music movement and show a case his determination to make himself blazon.

Necro is just one of the many reasons why this year's tour will permanently cement GWAR into the minds of the show's attendees. For $45, fans can catch 35 of their favorite metal bands for an all-star 'extravaganza.' The OUC AFX show starts at 1 p.m., and will last well into the night.

For those who can't make it out to the metal fest this "Tuesday Hot Topic will feature a limited edition three-disc CD/DVD set. Forte artists on this year's bill have forgotten four out of five of them."

GWAR is coming back to your humble little abode in Orlando, and the GWAR fans are called upon by Odery Urangian to purify your gestalt and give it away.

"Why the ellipptic? Quite frankly, we can't print the rest of that quote."
