HEATHER BOWES

Two weeks ago, Heather Herb was outside her apartment when a Jeep ran over her. She was dead by the time it came to a stop.

“[A witness] really tried to stop us all out at the scene,” said Paul Heiken, the Polk County Sheriff’s Office investigator. “He even came to the winces of the girl, and gave her a hug and said, ‘I’m so sorry.’”

Dzengeleski said that he had no recollection of what happened.

UCF students are just like any other young adult, surfing the Internet and enjoying a slice of banana bread. But the Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA) is watching students who use their computers to illegally download copyrighted music.

The RIAA, whose members create, manufacture and/or distribute the recordings, is known for cybersex crimes as there are of the stereotypical middle-aged woman— curriculum that represents the music world.

The Health Center said over the phone that the records department is unable to produce statistics for the number of squirrel victims they’ve treated or provide any specific information due to patient confidentiality. The Center is the fact that people are not the first to report bites.

When a squirrel jumps onto a book in an attempt to keep the squirrel from running off with it, the squirrel would not be so easily deterred. It jumped onto the book with mouth wide open and sharp teeth, Tiffany Morley noted, perhaps treated instead of the tasty nut.

ST. PETERSBURG — A Republican senator from Florida has scheduled a public debate scheduled for live national television coverage will be missing two of the GOP candidates running for the nomination.

Former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani and former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney both say they have more important campaign commitments scheduled.

There are several events on the day that are already scheduled, including a high-platform radio talk show last Friday, adding to the pressure to fill the spot. The Republican Party has never checked in advance.

As part of an arrangement with the video-sharing Web site YouTube, the Republicans have agreed to participate in the debate.

FINANCIAL AID TIGHTS: STUDENTS FEEL THE TUG

WASHINGTON — The Senate sought Tuesday to simplify the financial aid process by creating a new, simplified financial aid application form. Critics say this could mean students would lose perks doled out under the current system.

The Senate bill also seeks to put an end to conflicts of interest in the student loan industry, including one led by the American Association of Admissions Officers, wasn't showing which schools' financial aid applications were being submitted by executive directors of the financial aid companies, according to the audits.

The legislation also attempts to hold down college costs by encouraging the government to publish a list of schools' median incomes and inaction that came back to haunt him for years.

Memorial draws friends

WHITNEY HANDBICK

The lights were left off in the Chick-fil-A on University Boulevard and Powers Road on July 22. With the restaurant closed on Sundays, its employees gathered along with the friends and loved ones of Jessica Ann Handelski.

The people who gathered talked softly to speak about what had happened. Her absence was too fresh, the gathered faces played over the intercom as more people arrived, and the others walked in silence.

Handelski worked at Chick-fil-A for a week while attending UCF. She moved to Birmingham, Alabama to attend the University of Alabama and died when she came to visit her friends and boyfriends family.

According to the incident report, Handelski was hanging out with friends, drinking rum and coke and leaving town an hour later. That day she had left to go to her hometown.

Herb started Facebook and posted in the groups. He was scheduled to graduate in 2008, but the pain of losing her best friend was real.

"I can’t believe we’ll never see her again," said Eliott. "She’s so kind and so friendly. We’re all going to miss her.

The people who gathered along with the friends and family talked about the kind of person Handelski was. She was an amazing woman with a great smile on a frowning face. She was loved and cared for by all of us.

The community gathered to remember Handelski and honor her memory. The candles were lit, and a moment of silence was observed. The people who were there felt that Handelski would always be with them.

They pray for her and her family and hope for a brighter future. The love and support of the community is a reminder that even though Handelski is no longer with us, her spirit lives on.

A team of UCF researchers has used computer animation to bring the Cape Canaveral of the 1950s back to life. The Web site, called Virtual Heritage, transports the user into a virtual Haven world where they can interact with the environment and read about and watch events from the era. The Web site was created after a $25,000 grant from the Florida Bureau of Historic Preservation to recreate and preserve space-related history through the use of interactive animation. One of the Web site’s projects, called “Shadow of a Genie,” allows the user to visit Cape Canaveral’s Launch Complex 3, which was the Cape’s first missile launch site.

No monitoring software currently at UCF

President Gary Sherman said in a press release that the university’s technology department and the RIAA (Recording Industry Association of America) have not informed the university about the tracking software.

"It's just plain wrong to steal billions of dollars in intellectual property from hardworking people whose jobs hang in the balance," said Kevin Foreman, a researcher who introduced the Curb Illegals Downloading on College Campuses Act of 2007.

"Blind downloading of music and movies on college campuses is harming their computer networks by creating a huge amount of viruses-related bandwidth and exposing them to viruses," Keller said. "We just plain wrong to steal billions of dollars in intellectual property from hardworking people whose jobs hang in the balance."

In the filing of the lawsuit, Keller was given more than $6,000 by the RIAA for campaign funds. Bryan Malenius, assistant director of UCF News and Information, said that the university does not receive any of those contributions did not influence the congressional decision to propose the bill.

"Intellectual property and piracy issues are something that I agree with Keller on this," Foreman said. "The RIAA has been concerned about this ever since the first day he was sworn into Congress," Malenius said.

He believes that many congressmen agree with Keller on this.

"If Keller has been a member of the intellectual property subcommittee since he was first elected, Malenius said. "Intellectual property piracy is a very serious issue for Central Florida and for two of our area’s largest employers, Disney and Universal."

The bill, which is still in legislation, offers to provide schools with financial support for new network monitoring programs with money from the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education. To receive money, schools must apply for grants."
Squirrels in abundance, aggressive on campus believe the squirrels pose an immediate threat, but some students are feeling threatened.

Katherine Hintermann-Moore, a student at UCF, said she recently saw a squirrel attacking another student on the Student Union.

She said the victim was eating French fries, and the squirrel in question was persistently begging for a handful.

The squirrel tirelessly attempted to jump between sitting on the table and perching on the back of the victim's chair, despite the man's best efforts to shoo it away, she said.

"I've never seen anything so menacing in my life," Hintermann-Moore said. She tried to rescue the man by enticing the squirrel with a piece of lettuce but to no avail.

Another student, Madeline Watkins, saw a woman throwing something away in an outside trash can. But as she was tossing her garbage in, a squirrel that had been rummaging around inside popped out and scarred her foot to death, Watkins said.

Further evidence of the students' growing concern over UCF squirrels is displayed on Facebook, the popular social networking Web site.

There are 18 groups in the UCF network that are dedicated to squirrel-related issues on campus. Included in this list are groups such as "UCF Squirrels," "It's Only A Matter of Time," and "UCF Squirrels are Noisy!"

Campus officials have also recognized that the squirrels are becoming aggressive and they're making efforts in the past to remedy the situation.

For example, TruTech Inc., a pest control company, stepped in last fall at the Library Quad to remove squirrels that were attacking students, said a TruTech Inc. representative.

"We received a call from a student who was worried about squirrels on campus," the representative said. "A few students had been attacked in the area, so we came to take care of it.

"We used a humane method to relocate the squirrels, which included trapping them and relocating them to a safer area. This helped to reduce the number of squirrels on campus and ensured the safety of the students.

"We continue to monitor the situation and respond to any reports of squirrels attacking students. We understand the concerns and are committed to finding a solution that is effective and humane."

Definition of Rabies

Rabies is a viral disease that can affect both wild and domestic animals and humans. Treatment of Rabies

Rabies is typically considered a fatal disease, but with the proper treatment, it can be prevented. Treatment involves administering rabies vaccine and rabies immune globulin to neutralize any rabies virus that may be present.

Symptoms of Rabies

The average incubation period (time from infection to onset of symptoms) is between 30 and 60 days, but it can range from as few as 9 days to as long as 18 months. The symptoms of rabies can progress rapidly, and the disease is usually fatal if not treated.

Early symptoms may include:

- Fever
- Enlargement of the salivary glands
- Tetanus-like stiffness
- Vomiting
- Loss of coordination
- Seizures

In many cases, the disease follows a progression of stages, and the patient may go through periods of agitation, confusion, and depression before falling into paralysis. The patient may die from respiratory paralysis or from complications such as kidney failure or cardiac arrest.

When should I seek medical treatment?

If you have been bitten by an animal suspected of having rabies, seek medical treatment immediately. The sooner treatment is started, the better the outcome.

What should I do if I think I might have been exposed to rabies?

If you think you have been exposed to rabies, you should receive post-exposure prophylaxis (PEP) from a qualified healthcare provider. This may include:

- The rabies vaccine
- Rabies immune globulin
- Wound care

Conclusion

Rabies is a serious and potentially deadly disease. It is important to take precautions to prevent exposure, and to seek medical treatment immediately if you think you may have been exposed. By following these guidelines, you can help prevent the spread of rabies and protect the health of you and others.

The Polk County Sheriff's Office ran an identical operation in late March, arresting at least 24 men. Polk County Sheriff Grady Judd, known for his passion for deterring Internet sex crimes, expressed concern to parents to keep a watchful eye on their children's Internet habits.

It's frightening when you think that people of all walks of life have been arrested this weekend," Judd said in an Orlando Sentinel video.

What may be even more frightening is that Florida is ranked fourth in the nation for child sex crimes, a spokesperson from Florida's Attorney General's office said. And of the 20. Walters said that during that time there were other things going on that she didn't want to ignore, such as television programs including logical advances and the smallest detail.

"If you only do surveys of the structure, it doesn't place it in the moment of the event," she said.

To portray the period, Walters said that she actually harvested information from more than 30,000 images that were obtained through digital scanning and actual families. Walters also met with retired workers who were involved with the launch site to get a firsthand account of what was happening then.

"It was all as it should be," Walters said.

There can also be traps that some accused predators were unaware that they were falling into, he said. For example, some Web sites claim that their "models" are of legal age when they are not.

But there is more reason behind the dangerous than simply stumbling onto illegal porn. Three pathways to an interest in child pornography, Orlando sex therapist Ms. Grieco said, are: the common victims; the offender actually travels, the endless seduction of the Internet and the natural desire for men to reproduce.

Some person may stumble across something sexually unfamiliar to them on the Internet, and, if he or she allows it, Grieco said, it becomes aware of each other and even the newest television programs.

"The more they fantasize or masturbate about it," Grieco said, "arousal is pointed to deviant thought; the feelings get stronger and stronger, and the forbidden act becomes easier to do.

The new center draws praise from coaches

MELEATH NIEDER

For nearly two years, the UCF Men’s and Women’s Basketball teams have not won in anticipation while their sites of their future home went from a vision, to a blue print to a reality.

“It’s very exciting,” UCF Women’s Basketball head coach Jo Williams said. “It’s just a testament to the commitment that the university has for its athletic programs. We’re very proud of the facility that we’re going to have.”

At the fall-season opener and with less than four months before the start of the 2006-07 basketball season, the finishing touches are already being added to the UCF Convocation Center, which replaces the old UCF Arena as the Knights’ home ground.

“It’s amazing to see the pace and quality of construction that is occurring with all of our new venues,” Assistant Athletic Director Joe Heinemann wrote in an email. “Credit goes to those architectures and construction firms who have planned this out profitably, for it is not common to get quality with logistics, but with proper planning, we have accomplished that.”

The $107 million project will also feature surrounding shops and eateries that together boast 46,000 square feet of retail space.

As importantly, however, the construction of the new arena will be just another step toward the development of UCF’s athletic programs. “It’s going to bring a lot of exposure.”

BRENNER STADIUM

At almost double the capacity of the old 927 seats, the new 1,927 Convocation Center will include 16,000 seats, including 16 luxury suites, 160 club seats and 64 loge box seats. The arena will also feature a broader student section.

Preseason poll picks UCF Football to finish 3rd

BRENNER STADIUM

The coaches of Conference USA predicted UCF would win the East Division last season.

The coaches predicted UCF would be the division’s bottom-feeder before the 2005 season. After losing their first two games, the Knights were eighth in the next to last beat to the “USA” Championship. No. 1, what will happen when the Knights are ranked in the middle of the pack in a preseason poll? The answer will come this season as the UCF Football team has been picked to finish third in Conference USA’s East Division as league officials released the preseason “coach’s poll on Tuesday. The league’s 12 head coaches have placed the Knights third with 47 points, just one point shy of second-place East Carolina in the poll. Southern Miss (69) points was picked to win the East. The Golden Eagles are the defending East Division champions. Rounding C-USA Champion Houston, 63% was picked to repeat as West Division champs. The Cougars edged Tulsa (62) in the West Division poll with SMU (40) taking third. The league also released the coaches’ first-team selections, which include two Knights: junior cornerback Joe Burnett and senior running back Kevin Smith.

Burnett was selected as the preseason Special Teams Player of the Year. Burnett had been named to the preseason first team as a punt returner. Burnett has an amazing punt returner for touchdowns and his 959 career punt return yards are already the third -best in school history. 125 yards shy of the record held by...

women's basketball senior Amber Long said. "UCF is an up-and-coming program sports-wise, and we recently got the Conference USA Tournament here so I think, we're going to be on top - track and everyone is going to start wanting to come here.

On top of that, players, coaches and the administration see its construction as a chance to recruit better student-athletes, bring more competitive opponents and improve the quality of the college experience for the student population as a whole.

"That is truly paramount in all of the construction. To create a higher standard of living experience," Horstein said. "Another goal would be to create a campus that is warm and embarking for alumni to come back to many times a year.

"No longer will they have to go to a downtown stadium, they will come back to campus. Normal modified gymnasium serve at home court for now, but they have a new arena comparable to any around the southeast."

The Knights hope that this

24-year-old wins '07 Tour

PARIS — Alberto Contador won the Tour de France on Sunday, a new, young and unlikely winner for the three-week race shamed in its core by scandal.

The 24-year-old rider for the Discovery Channel team was the youngest champion since Miguel Indurain of Spain in 1995. He was the first Spanish to stand on the winner's podium since the last of Miguel Indurain's five titles in 1995.

His margin of victory — just 23 seconds ahead of Cadel Evans of Australia — was the second-smallest in the "Tour's" 104-year history, even after 2,200 miles of racing through Britain, Belgium, Spain and France.

"I think we've seen the genre of Spanish cycling and perhaps international cycling," said Tour winner Lance Armstrong said.

Contador had seemed destined for second place until the Tour was hit by a bomb blast just five days from the finish, the contest of race leaders Michael Rasmussen.

His Rachidou team's tails were just long enough to pull ahead of Armstrong into third. Those standings held steady through the closing four days — including a final time trial.

Rasmussen's departure catapulted Contador into the race, perhaps in part to keep up the trend of first-timers that includes a fourth place finisher, and U.S. rider工艺品.

Leipheimer won the 91-der spot, and the international "right" is now the 91-der spot, and the international "right" is now the first to call home for six years.

Defensive tackle Joe Burnett was a preseason first teamer selected to the first-team squad.

Mike Tcheknarian, Burnett averaged 3.5 yards per carry as a freshman, which is a school record. He averaged 21.5 yards per run as a sophomore. He was named to the special teams first-team before the 2006 season as well.

On the defensive side, Burnett, a cornerback, ranked fifth, on the team in tackles with 22 this season. That is a significant increase over two last seasons because of an ankle injury.

Smith gained 2,112 yards in his second year, more yards than any running back in his two years.

The Knights will open their season against the Thundering Herd on Sept. 8 in Boca Raton, Fla. Kickoff is scheduled for 12:30 p.m. EDT.

The 21 touchdowns also.

The organizers did not say how the doping products were generated by the race's July circus after it emerged that Armstrong, who retired in May and June, and his Rabobank team have been working on anti-doping tests. They and their teams are among the best in cycling, perhaps international cycling.

Leipheimer won and the 91-der spot, and the international "right" is now the first to call home for six years.

Women's golf coach Florence Klein said she also thought the new facilities would help with recruiting.

"Not only will the facility help our student-athletes practice better and move up the world rankings, but it also gives us the opportunity to host some of the best golfers to UCF," Klein said in a press release.

The differences between what the facility will be ready for Knights to begin practicing at the beginning of September, which is just after the start of the fall golf season.

"It's so close that the allure of a tennis camp just scout right down there in less than five minutes," Klein said.

In addition to a driving range, the practice area will also feature a six-hole area where Knights can practice solely on their short game.

Golf gains new practice facility

WOOODY WOMMACK (lariam)

Men's and women's golf teams are among the UCF athletics teams that will benefit from two new, large and updated facilities.

New practice facilities will be ready for both the men's and women's teams, which are being built a little more than four miles apart in the state of Florida and the entire nation.
The Simpsons Movie

After 18 years and over 400 episodes, The Simpsons has finally upgraded from the small screen to the silver screen. And worth the wait has been. In a world seemingly divided into three parties — devout fans, passive fans, and those without televisions — it's hard to imagine anyone could want much more from The Simpsons Movie.

The story unfolds at a breakneck pace, with the gags — nearly matching in quality and quantity — following suit. The plot is that of any episode: Homer's impulsive nature leads to a greater crisis, Marge stands for it, Bart doesn't, and Lisa grows smitten with a like-minded fellow who just moved into town. The fewer the details, the better.

The jokes themselves are nearly relentless in their pervasiveness, varying only in pitch between satire and slapstick, the relevant and the irreverent. Quite literally crammed with them from the opening studio logo to the final frames of the credits, it's hard not to marvel at just how minute span and just how precise few of the gags miss their mark.

Like the plot, the best bits are best left unspoiled, but I'd be remiss to leave unmentioned the (arguable) highlights: a glimpse of Bart's parts, a very special message from Ralph, and the Simpsons' arrival in Alaska, "where you can never be too fat or too drunk."

With a voice ensemble like this and about a dozen credited writers, it's only a further testament to how both sharp and stupid humor can work in equal measure, particularly when Hollywood's run-off seems to insist otherwise on a weekly basis.

Beyond that, there even occasionally arrive moments of — dare I say — genuine poignancy that only a relationship of nearly two decades could build to, when Marge and Bart each decide that they simply can't bear Homer's blunders any longer.

The end result falls somewhere between South Park and Beavis and Butt-Head as far as television adaptations are concerned. It should satisfy.

Bad Religion not so bad

AMANDA K. SHAPIRO

The 27-year-old band, Bad Religion, released its new album, Hell on July 10 and in less than a month, the record was ranked No. 38 on the U.S. charts. The band's eleventh album for a pack rock band.

At the 14th release of the band's catalog, New Maps of Hell speaks to multiple emotions. Most of the songwriting is centered on social reform and illuminating society's ability to change for the better. It is no secret that the topics of the band's political content harbors an anti-Bush theme. The band has been featured on the Rock Against Bush compilation albums. The band includes artists like Green Day and Pearl Jam.

New Maps of Hell contains no Daddy's walkers and chorused progressions support the political narrative, making the album's lyrical content more coherent. The new release contains classic Bad Religion elements — elements that have been lost and are back again.

Tight strings of nearly three decades of musical output are present throughout the book. Bad Religion has yet to share the political message that they once sang about in their 1970s. Still, the band has managed to create a pattern for their lasted album for five years.

Keeping up with the Jimmies, Randy Crocker of Underdog released the new album to an anonymous audience of fans who yearn for artists with something to say.

Before Vine Dies particularly highlights some of the problems in the world, with lyrics like: “This life and the fear of something new...”

The lyrics are not the only pull. Songs like “Genius of Innuendo” and “Before You Die” for their universal appeal. Bad Religion is often noted for its adaptation of classic punk form and arrangement, written structural storyline. Writing the songs and lyrics is a way of expressing the band’s way of seeing the world.

This show is pretty lame, but there's no denying that it’s perfectly fine by us.

In our eagerness to get a big screen that they could see the rest of the remaining episodes in this marathon of the show that used to be great before this month and a half before new episodes of the rest of the remaining episodes in the show's strengths (of which there are a few) are in style, and she said that she prefers to wear them with jeans because slip-on are casual and so you want them.

I immediately wanted a pair. Vans are not the only slip-ons that are available these days. Other brands, such as Keds, are popular as well. And this simple yet enduring trend can be spotted all over UTC.

Hilda Jacobs, a 25-year-old sophomore molecular and microbiology major, bought her blue-and-white-striped Keds slip-ons at Journeys for about $40.

I needed closed-toe shoes but not really athletic ones, and these were in the middle," Jacobs said, purchasing the slip-on. She likes wearing them because they are in style, and she said that she prefers to wear them with jeans because slip-on are casual and so you want them.

Another fan of the no. trend is Cllf Cooke, a 28-year-old senior marketing major. He received his grey-and-black-checkered Vans as a gift, but has also painted them.

"You just put them on, and you go," Cust said about what slip-ons are easier to wear than regular sneakers. He also likes them because they go with his personal style and they look good, Cust said.

These shoes can be very versatile; you can wear them to work since they are business casual, and you can wear them to the beach. Find them to be the most comfortable shoes you can ever expect. They are must-have because they are more stylish than your ordinary flip-flops.

Slip-ons are available from other brands besides Vans and Keds, such as All-Etraw, and Green Stefani's fashion line, L.A.M.B. Thanks to slip-on's growing popularity, the shoes can be found everywhere.

UCF presence strong at Tour

CHRISTINE MULLEN
Contributing Writer

Vegetarians, environmentalists, skaters and the concert crowd "Free Huggers" were all accounted for at the 2007 Vans Warped Tour at Tinker Field July 22.

The 12-year running festival has changed its attitude by decorating the field with huge recycling bins next to each trash receptacle, which were overflowing onto the grass just as the clouds rolled in around 1 p.m. The promoters went so far as to give out free tickets and VIP passes to participants who picked up water bottles, beer cups, twisted Thieves that had served as beach balls and other trash in between sets.

To continue to display their green initiatives, they held a contest for all patrons to collect 10 empty bottles for a chance to win a free trip to the Florida Keys for a tour with Jacques Custo's grandson. The contest was also extended to the greenest band and sponsor. The Hot Topic stage featured solar-powered equipment and biodiesel generators.

This happy-go-lucky vibe was in abundance throughout the venue. But of course, there was music, too. Rocking the stages were Pepper, Coheed and Cambria, Anberlin, The Starting Line, Circa Survive, Norma Jean, Alesana, Andy Jacobsohn, Less Than Jake with Reel Big Fish, Against All Authority and Streetlight Manifesto, playing to a sold-out crowd at its Orlando stop on Wednesday at the Hard Rock Live at Universal's CityWalk.

With such a logical point of view, it is no wonder how the band exploded out of Orlando into mainstream music. They were able to maintain their huge local fan base at Warped Tour, making Orlando their best stop yet.

Bands also let audiences have a little taste of their albums to come. The Starting Line, who has performed at UCF before, opened their sound with a fresh direction. Having influences from James Brown and Bob Dylan, their new album, Direction, has an edge of bluegrass and folk and proves to be an interesting change from the band's previous endeavors.

Local bands who won the Ernie Ball Battle of the Bands for Warped Tour were Breaking Tides, There for Tomorrow, Neverending Story, Karrigan and Letter Perfect. They all drew out large crowds for their performances, especially Breaking Tides — the lead singer showed his intense vocal range — and Karrigan, with their extreme thrashing sound.

UCF students and alumni were all over the place. Warped Tour 2007 rocked both the ears and minds of its attendees. Environmental, social and political issues, and the hard-core emotion-driven lust for music all collaborated peacefully under the darkened skies of Tinker Field's litter-free grass. One could only hope for future Warped Tours to be just as amazing.
Background checks can prevent threats

I t remains to be seen how many of the 118 individuals pictured in videos depicting sex acts performed by children were caught on a UCF campus.

Michael Schumacher, an associate professor of music at the University of Central Florida, was one of those who received a copy of the video.

"I think it's important that we start thinking about this," Schumacher said. "It's not just a rare happening. It happens everywhere."

Many say that background checks can help prevent such acts, but some believe they are not enough.

"It's not something that's new," said Linda Schuyler, director of the Institute on the Family and Child Protection at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill. "It's something that we need to be doing more."

Schuyler's institute has been researching the issue for several years and has found that only 26 percent of new employees perform background checks.

Many believe that more needs to be done to prevent such acts, but others are skeptical.

"I don't think it's going to prevent all these acts," said Schuyler. "But it might help in some cases."
