First-generation college students find financial relief

WHITNEY HAMBRICK

First-generation students were more likely to report an increase in stress, more financial hardship, and feeling pressure to work more than non-first-generation students. The study, conducted by the University of Florida, found that first-generation students were more likely to face financial hardships and were more likely to work part-time in order to afford their education.

First-generation students were more likely to report feeling like they were a burden on their family and were more likely to experience negative emotions such as anxiety and depression. The study also found that first-generation students were more likely to feel like they did not belong at their institutions and were more likely to struggle with academic stress.

The results of the study highlight the need for additional support and resources for first-generation students. Institutions can provide additional financial aid, mentorship programs, and support services to help first-generation students succeed in college.

Universal Studios matches Disney with raised ticket prices

ORLANDO—Universal Orlando raised its ticket prices Friday, matching $67 ticket prices at Disney World that cross-town rival Walt Disney World announced last week.

The cost of a basic single-day, single-park ticket was increased to $80, up from $67. The price included also increased prices on two-pack ticket packages, and on some ticket holders will be able to buy package deals and to ticket packages, and on some ticket.

USF spokesman Tom Wilson, a graduate of South Carolina, said the university is raising its ticket prices.

"We've worked very hard to the price of our ticket, which is now $80," Wilson said.

"We set prices based on the costs of running our parks and the value we provide to our guests." Wilson said the university is raising its ticket prices.

Enrollment increases for online classes at UCF

By Richard Beld

Class tardiness might become a thing of the past now that more UCF students are choosing to take online courses from home instead of in the classroom.

In the 1996-1997 academic year, there were only 10 online courses available at UCF, but in 2006-2007, there were more than 900 online courses available at UCF.

During the 2006-2007 academic year, 41,758 students registered for online courses at UCF, an 11 percent increase from the previous year. Joel Hartman, UCF's vice provost for Information Technology, said that students sign up for online courses for various reasons, including convenience or need to be working at work. "One of the reasons why students are already doing the right thing is that we're seeing that more and more students are being converted to on-line courses," Hartman said.

"The reason most college students get drunk is because everyone else is getting drunk," Haines said. "So if they hear if they aren't getting drunk, they won't.

"It's normal to be healthy, even by college students, and that's a best-kept secret among college campuses," Haines said. "Good things are ignored.

The social norms approach is also different because it doesn't focus on the negative aspects of stu­dents drinking.

"We assume the students are already doing the right thing and get the right message, and then we find that back to them," Haines said. "So all the content is coming from the students. It's fun to hear about their health rather than advocate their health.

"Other universities using a social norms approach are the University of Missouri at Columbia, University of Vir­ginia, Virginia Common­wealth University and Michigan State University.

"Although UCF doesn't practice social norms research, officials say they support the idea. "The focus of our office is to develop prevention programs that will change the way they are or will change the student behavior," Geiger said.

With the new football sta­dium about to open, the uni­versity is currently assessing its student behavior.

"[It's] a best-kept secret that students are seen as those who have the best alcohol policies," Geiger said. "Although none of our campaigns were targeted specifically at enhancing alcohol policies, they were about the importance of alcohol and alcohol awareness.

Hartman also said that a student graduate and returner who has a degree from UCF's online programs or not, the value of the degree would be unchanged. "A UCF degree is a UCF degree, and neither the degree nor the transcript contains information about the course the student took in a class­room, online via video deliv­ery or through other delivery modalities," Hartman said.

He said that students who plan on taking an online course will have the choice to get advanced technical skills, such as information manage­ment capabilities, time manage­ment skills and experience in working with virtual groups that are highly valued in the workplace.

About 60 percent of students sign up for an online course because they believe they need the course, and 40 percent sign up for an online course because the courses are better than the in-class courses.

"One of the reasons people don't understand is at the university, there's a bar (alcohol).

Located in the new psy­chology building, the lab is under the supervision of researchers who are conducting several experiments with alcohol. Their research includes what people believe alcohol really does versus what it actually does, physiological cues and how advertising plays a role in alcohol con­sumption.

According to Hall, researchers believe that people have an expectancy that alcohol will make them feel better and more social.

"[But] that's not true. Because alcohol is a depressant, the more you drink, the less social he becomes.

"[And] the trends continue the way they are (if they will) will shift.

UCF is also working with another university that already has an on-campus stadium for help with adver­tisement and community awareness of alcohol prevention.

"We work really closely with kids and their social norms center for research," Hall said. "We have a partnership with them.

The data at UCF and FBG is consistent with the social norms data nationally. "What they're finding in their data and our data is very similar," Hall said.

"We work closely with kids and students on what they see are the social norms for their behavior," Hall said. "So that's what this campaign is about, to show the positive contribu­tions to society."
Endeavour inspects heat shield

HOUSTON — Astronauts worked Saturday afternoon on a closer look at a troubling gouge on the space shuttle Endeavour's robotic arm to help determine whether they need to repair the 3-inch wound on the shuttle for launch.

Astronaut Charles Hobaugh used the international station's robotic arm to pull a 20-foot-long lipped boom from Endeavour's cargo bay and hand it off to the shuttle's robotic arm. Later in the day, taskforce-astronaut Barbara Morgan and地面-trainee Tracy Caldwell went to gingerly maneuver the shuttle's robotic arm to scan the damage in the diffiult-to-reach belly area.

"Ever since we got the data from the space station, I have been hoping we can go see this gouge," said Joyce Henckler, president for Major Gifts. "We are hoping this year to do something I enjoy, to be able to do something I enjoy, to be able to give NASA a donation."

Program hopes to get money from donations

For any college student, but for a first-time applicant, the chance to win a scholarship, such as Kewei, cost can be the breaking point. Otherwise, cost can keep a person from applying for a scholarship.

With less money coming in, Kewei struggled with his motivation to finish school.

In 2006, the Florida Lottery was filled with the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). And was awarded a first-year scholarship to UF, a 2-year scholarship to GPA, and a $12,000 scholarship to GPA last year at UF, along with his student loan. His first-generation student.

In 2008, the Florida Lottery was successful in getting $65 million to create a need-based grant program for first-generation students.

The state matches all private donations received by Florida universities and community colleges, according to the UCF Foundation, which handles the collection and distribution of donated funds.

Last year, the UCF Foundation awarded 744 students $450 per semester, disbursing a total of $50,000 in the projects or initiatives that the school's students identified. The program was about 25% funded, شامل Kewei.

"We are hoping this year that we will get more money from donations, so we can raise the bar," said Joyce Henckler, UF Foundation assistant vice president for Major Gifts. "We are looking at how to redesign the application to mitigate this problem.

"We are a bit of a concern to us because this seems to be something that has happened frequently," Henckler said.

Directly beneath the damage is part of the aluminum framework of the starboard wing, which would provide additional protection during re-entry, Henckler said. He called that a lucky break.

Almost every disadvantage the 26 years of shuttle flight has ended with gouges of at least an inch in the thermal tiles that cover the belly. In one flight, nearly 900 tiles that big were removed.

NASA says that gouges like the one on Endeavour are not caused by heavier and faster debris that would be seen on flights before the space station.

NASA "is hoping to keep Endeavour at the space station for at least seven days and possibly several more days as a result of the new system for drawing power from the station."

Mission managers are expected to approve the extra delayed days on Sunday.

Settings on the fuel cell's monitoring system were changed to prevent the alarm from sounding again, officials said.

Astronauts completed the mission's first spacewalk on Saturday, installing a new addition to the orbiting outpost. At least two more spacewalks are planned.

Condom purchases fall as birth-control sales increase

Salient infection because it tends to be a long time before a person would be having signs of infection. They can carry it for a long time. For instance, not all students asking to get tested want to know that they are infected.

At the Health Center, chlamydia and gonorrhea can be tested at the same time through a urine sample or blood culture, costing $40 with results ready the next day.

HIV testing can also be done at the Health Center. Tests range in price and need for results. The 25-cent BeT test delivers results in three weeks. The OneQuick test takes only 30 minutes. Both tests cost $25.

Syphilis testing can cost up to $25. Vitale said that the difference between testing required at the Health Center and that which Health Services offers does not have to do with confidentiality and anonymity.

The Health Center does not require personal information and provides students with a privacy number and a case number to verify results. All students are required to consent to the confidential testing. Students who consent to the confidential testing are not added to the patients’ medical records.

Mastroianni said some students do not seem more responsible for themselves and ask to be checked for “STDs” if they are actually sick. “Some of these people are going around claiming they have all these things we’ve gotten a false sense of security about getting tested,” he added. “The students need to take some responsibility for themselves and ask to be checked for whatever it is [STI] they are actually active with.”

“Just because people have been with multiple males and females does not mean they have all these things we’re thinking we have,” Mastroianni said. “They have blue Vaseline and they think they’re doing something.”

Mastroianni said condoms are not considered the best protection for preventing STDs, but they are not 100 percent effective because some STDs are spread through skin-to-skin contact.

“We have had students who are fastidious and have been using a condom. How could I have the gonorrhea?”

You still get something, but [condoms do] greatly reduce the risk, absolutely,” Mastroianni said.

Health Services plans a Safe Sex campaign, Subaru in the fall to educate people about college norms and about college norms and what people believe are risks for transmitting STDs.

Types of STDs and Treatment

Genital herpes, gonorrhea, syphilis, genital warts, HIV/AIDS, hepatitis are all covered by the nation’s health insurance plans.

Some STDs can be cured with antibiotics if diagnosed early such as syphilis, gonorrhea and chlamydia. But others cannot be cured as medical problems or involve chronic illnesses. Crabs and genital warts can be ‘burned’ off in your doctor’s office, but they may often return.

Drug resistance is not new for STDs. If you are infected with syphilis, gonorrhea and hepatitis, they persist throughout the body and become a dead-end purse. There are a lot of drugs that are not available. The goal is to make sure that you and your partner are not infected with any of those five or they may also be disabled by their physicans.

Social work major Whitmire, 21, also works as a health advocate and an HIV coordinator on the campus, doing work for the nation’s health insurance plans.

Leader of largest Iraqi Sunni block calls for peace

STEPHEN J. HURST

Iraq’s most senior Sunni politician issued a desperate appeal Sunday for Arab nations to help stop what he called an “unprecedented genocidal campaign” by Shiite militias armed, trained and overseen by Iran. The U.S. military reported five Americans were killed, apparently lured into an al-Qaida trap.

Adnan al-Dulaimi and “Pentagon” and “Safawis,” Sunni terms for Iran’s Shiites, were on the brink of total collapse in the capital and neighboring provincial capitals, he said. Iran’s state-run television was broadcast in Baghdad, and they will not stop until they expand to all of Arab lands,” al-Dulaimi wrote in an impassioned broadside e-mailed to The Associated Press.

The five American soldiers were killed Saturday in Arab neighborhoods, where four died in an explosion where one of them stepped on a hidden bomb. Four others were wounded in the blast, a U.S. official told AP.

At least 31 people were killed or found dead in sectarian violence nationwide, more than half of that number in Baghdad, officials said. Leader of largest Iraqi Sunni block calls for peace

STEPHEN J. HURST
Associated Press

Iraq’s most senior Sunni politician issued a desperate appeal Sunday for Arab nations to help stop what he called an “unprecedented genocidal campaign” by Shiite militias armed, trained and overseen by Iran. The U.S. military reported five Americans were killed, apparently lured into an al-Qaida trap.

Adnan al-Dulaimi and “Pentagon” and “Safawis,” Sunni terms for Iran’s Shiites, were on the brink of total collapse in the capital and neighboring provincial capitals, he said. Iran’s state-run television was broadcast in Baghdad, and they will not stop until they expand to all of Arab lands,” al-Dulaimi wrote in an impassioned broadside e-mailed to The Associated Press.

The five American soldiers were killed Saturday in Arab neighborhoods, where four died in an explosion where one of them stepped on a hidden bomb. Four others were wounded in the blast, a U.S. official told AP.

At least 31 people were killed or found dead in sectarian violence nationwide, more than half of that number in Baghdad, officials said. BARRY BONDS BATTERS AARON'S HOME RUN RECORD
SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds hit his 756th career home run Tuesday night, becoming Major League Baseball's all-time home run leader. The shot came in the 6th inning against National starter Mark Rzepczynski. Bonds sent the ball 455 ft. into the right-center field seats. Leterri fanned and fully rejected any suggestion that this record willListItemIcon(" Earnes the " during the course of his career. "It was not a record. But it actually pleased Bond's being present for the occasion," Bonds said. "I'm glad the fans signed it."
Bonds now has 758 career home runs. He currently has 31 career home runs. Bonds's home run ties the record 27th save.

The 756th home run gives Bonds a career total of 756 career home runs. Bonds is currently 27th in career home runs. Bonds has 758 career home runs. Bonds currently has 31 career home runs.

Fresh fantasy livens up lackluster summer season

Yes, the boy will become a man, anPipe guy will get the girl. That much is certain.
Those aren’t promises, but rather threats teasing the concept of serial storytelling, especially with regard to fantasy and particularly a premise of fairy tales. It is therefore no surprise to the imagination and clues at work in Matthew Ladue’s adaptation of Neil Gaiman’s Stardust that such a seemingly simple tale promises so much.

In an English village, unscrupulously neighboring the sorrows of the fantastical realm of Stormhold, Tristan (played astonishingly by Charlie Claus and Victoria Vroomens Alix) is a falling star, which he heaven to retrieve for his friend in a last ditch attempt to save her court. Off he goes, unaware that the fairy star — having now taken the human form of Yvaine (Thai Dunes, seemingly channeling Gwyneth Paltrow) — is also sought by several boys to the Stormhold throne, not to mention a woman of enmity, led by the particularly wicked and equally vast Luna (Odissa, picnic, having a blast, eating the ocean’s path: I think lions.

Ambitions at their very best, and satisfying in a rare first entry, get off to a solid start as the multiple story threads are set up and we off on their parallel and inevitably converging journeys. The readers’ Ian McCullough certainly does not have to wait long to find an immediate sense of purpose to the tale about Stardust, and the early appearance of Peter O’Toole as Stormhold’s royal ruler only reinforces the sensibilities of the open, almost explicitly British, fantasy to come.

As a result, director Michael Douglas (Ray) Coli) and cowriter Sonja Goldswain bring to the forefront an almost suspending tone of humor that breaks the chase considerably.

The entire cast of seventh-in-tenth’s (Mark Strong) best-kept secret in all history, I think lions. Not only a narrative but also a visual adventure, this Angeles and its surroundings in a place that I think lions. Not only a narrative but also a visual adventure, this Angeles and its surroundings in a place that.

Stale third offering of buddy-cop series has less laughs, chemistry

William Gooss

It looks like John Travolta and Brittany Murphy might have found a new way to make people laugh: by writing a terrible script and a terrible movie. "The Honeymooners," asequel to the 2003 film "The Honeymooners," follows the lives of the gang in the 1960s, when their adventures were instead of a soap opera. The movie is a disaster, filled with incoherent dialogue and flat performances. It's not worth watching, especially if you enjoyed the original series. Save your money and your time, and skip this one.
Country crooner stays consistent with new album

Tim McGraw album Let It Go

Let It Go is a bonus track.

In this fairy tale film, Thorne (Charlie Cox) embarks on a quest to capture a fallen star which takes a human form, played by Claire Danes.

There's an eagerness to signal a flood of war whenever it plays. A sample of the lyrics reads: "If you're reading this, look like I only got a one-way ticket over here. I sure wish I could give you some more love. War was just a game we played when we were kids." The CD was released in late March but has been re-released with "If We're Reading This," the set-wide title and title combines with its slow and funky groove, McGraw also returns to the theme of singing duets, the live version of the song that McGraw played at the year's Academy of County Music Awards.

The song "Simpatico" seperates itself from the rest of the content on the album as a bonus track. McGraw tapped into the sensitive subject of fallen soldiers with "If We're Reading This." The song's sound wasn't as obscure as first thought, and the lyrics made you cry out of the track.

Since then, McGraw has continued to swing the success from previous releases while out of the studio. In 2006, he managed to put out a second volume in his greatest hits collection.

Fans of McGraw should check out Rascal Flatts and Keith Urban. Currently, McGraw does not have any concert dates scheduled in Orlando.

Hackers unite in Vegas

Dateline reporter forced to flee event

ANNA R. SHAPIRO

In the back of a tac시, a pamphlet folded, strip, a pamphlet set con division.

The pamphlet showcased the Rivieras — a Vegas establishment known for its exotic dancers. But nowhere in that pamphlet was there any mention of the hacking conference that was taking place at the same time.

The occasion was marked by the 15th year of Defcon — the largest underground hacking conference in the world. The event was attended by some 15,000 professionals at a convention in Las Vegas.

The hacking community represented one of the most misunderstood institutions around the world. In the eyes of many Americans, the term "hacker" conveys a certain negative stereotype.

The term for those who devote their lives to the art of technology.

Student reads between the lines of Cpl. Roop's e-mail

On Aug. 1, Cpl. James Roop of the UCF Police Department pulled students into his office to give them a lesson regarding a sexual battery incident.

Cpl. Roop's e-mail was titled "Déjà vu" and consisted of a letter to the students regarding a sexual battery incident. The incident involved a UCF student and a sexual assault.

The letter begins by stating that the suspect, a black man, was arrested for the assault. The letter then goes on to explain that the UCF Police Department is working with the Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE) to investigate the case.

The letter goes on to state that the suspect, who was a student at UCF, was arrested on the night of the incident. The letter also states that the suspect was released from custody on Aug. 2.

This incident is important because it highlights the need for increased awareness and education about sexual assault on college campuses.

In conclusion, it is important to remember that sexual assault is a serious issue on college campuses. It is important for students to be educated about the risks and to know how to prevent and respond to sexual assault. It is also important for universities to take serious measures to prevent sexual assault and to support survivors.

Rumple deserve a real, twisted UCF apology

When they cut programs, they're cutting up their bodies and those who dependencies. Unfortunately, Tribble's reasoning for cutting the men's cross country program simply doesn't sell. The explanation is signed with UCF full Interest rather than the real UCF. UCF has not a track record of giving cross country programs without track and field departments.

Additionally, a lot of sports fail in the cross country programs without track and field departments.

For example, Florida Southern has enjoyed years of success in the cross country excellence without a track program. If not having a track field would not have signed with UCF in the first place.

I think UCF owes those students a sincere apology. The athletes have the right to have their dreams dashed without compensation.

An online petition requesting the athletic department to reconsider the accumulated over 1200 signatures in just 3 days. And that's in addition to the petition signed with UCF full Interest rather than the real UCF.
