HASA event kicks off Hispanic Heritage Month with food, dance

SINBAD RICHARDSON

Students served up heaping portions of food, music, dance and culture with a distinct Latin flavor on Friday. The Hispanic American Student Association kicked off its celebration of Hispanic Heritage Month at the Reflecting Pond with its annual Pachanga. The event brought a diverse group of students together to socialize and enjoy the musical and cultural aspects of Hispanic culture.

Pachanga is a Spanish term for a friendly gathering or celebration. "It's just like a big party," said Stephanie Morales, a molecular and microbiology major and HASA president. With all of the food served, Pachanga had a crowd of more than 100 people dancing, laughing and mingling together. "HASA's goal is for Pachanga to show our culture to everyone," Morales said.

"People think you have to be Hispanic to join HASA, but that is not true," said Christian Loevery, early childhood education major and HASA community chairwoman. "We want diversity in HASA, so we promote ourselves to get people of all races involved."}

Senator demand stable funding

Gee, Charlie Crist's potential $97 million reduction in the current appropriation for the Saturn of Muggs College of Medicine led the UCF leaders concerned.

President John Hitt went to Tallahassee on Thursday to talk with Carrie Tolstedt, president of the Florida Medical Association, about the implications of the $97 million cut to the university's budget.

Tolstedt said Friday that the Legislature was "very successfully accomplished" its mission to help the governor understand the negative impact of any delay, especially as it relates to accreditation.

A member of the Student Government Association sent a resolution Tuesday to the Florida Senate and House of Representatives, asking for a resolution that will go before the Senate on Thursday.

The resolution is intended to serve as an official statement that the Senate is against Crist's cuts, but that is not true, according to Marc Alaimo, a prominent lobbyist involved in education issues.

"It needs to be publicly acknowledged that the Senate is against Crist's cuts," Alaimo said.

"People think you have to be Hispanic to join HASA, but that is not true," said Christian Loevery, early childhood education major and HASA community chairwoman. "We want diversity in HASA, so we promote ourselves to get people of all races involved."

Two men killed, one injured in ambush in central Iraq

WEST PALM BEACH - Two men were killed, and another seriously injured, in what police are describing as a targeted, drive-by shooting while the victims were sitting in their car at a downtown West Palm Beach parking lot.

Two suspects approached the vehicle, police said Palm Beach County sheriff's deputies and what appeared to be an SUV. The suspects, one armed with a handgun and the other armed with a rifle, opened fire on the parking lot, hitting multiple times, police said.

The two men, who have not been identified, were sitting in the car, said the victim who was seriously injured, who returned fire.

The suspects fled on foot and eluded capture, Miller said. Police said they are still searching for at least three men who were driving a gold 1996 Mitsubishi Galant.

Believe it or not, Lunar Quest is rocket science

RICHARD BILBAO

A team of UCF researchers has created an educational game called "Lunar Quest," aimed at teaching science and technology skills to young people. Senior administrative assistant Joyce Martinez said that the game is designed to engage students in science and technology by making learning fun.

The game is part of a larger educational initiative called the "Lunar Quest" project, which is being developed by a team of UCF researchers and educators. The project is focused on teaching students about the science of space exploration, including the physics and technology needed to explore the moon.

Lunar Quest is being developed in collaboration with the National Science Foundation, which is providing funding for the project. The game is being designed for use in school classrooms, as well as in community centers and science museums.

The game is being developed using a variety of technologies, including virtual reality and augmented reality. It is being designed to be accessible to students of all ages and abilities.

The game is currently in the early stages of development, but the team is already seeing promising results. Joyce Martinez said that the game is being well received by students, who are excited to learn about space exploration in a fun and interactive way.

The team is currently looking for additional funding to help bring the game to market, and they are interested in hearing from anyone who might be interested in supporting the project.

For more information about Lunar Quest, please visit the project's website at www.lunarquest.ucf.edu.

UCF dance groups show Latin flavor

Rachel Longyear

UCF dance groups are adding a Latin flavor to their performances. The groups, which include the UCF Dance Company, the UCF Dance Ensemble, and the UCF Dance K-Crew, are incorporating Latin rhythms and movements into their routine.

The UCF Dance Company, which is the university's premier dance group, has recently performed a routine to the Latin music of salsa. The routine featured dancers from all of the university's campuses, and was choreographed by the group's artistic director, Dhana D'Antoni.

The UCF Dance Ensemble, which is the university's second-tier dance group, has also incorporated Latin rhythms into its routine. The group's latest performance featured a routine to the music of merengue, a popular Latin dance style.

The UCF Dance K-Crew, which is the university's third-tier dance group, has also been incorporating Latin rhythms into its routine. The group's latest performance featured a routine to the music of bachata, a popular Latin dance style.

All of the dance groups are looking forward to incorporating more Latin rhythms into their performances in the future. The groups are currently working on new routines that will feature a variety of Latin rhythms and movements.

For more information about the UCF dance groups, please visit the groups' websites at www.ucfdancecompany.ucf.edu, www.ucfdanceensemble.ucf.edu, and www.ucfdancekcrew.ucf.edu.

90,000 bottles of water in stock for upcoming game

To determine what would be needed to deal with the expected heat.

Even so, water was at a premium. The UCF education building had a water fountain, but it seemed to be used by professors and students who were working in the area.

"We haven't seen anything like this," said Tom Johnson, 60, who was visiting from Boston. "We've been through hurricanes and snow storms, but nothing like this." He said he and his wife had planned to visit St. Augustine for the weekend, but decided to stay home because of the heat.

Johnson said he had been driving through the area and saw people running and walking in the streets, looking for shade.

"I think it's bad," he said. "I don't think people should be out in this kind of weather."

The trial, which started on Tuesday, is being held in a federal court in Tampa.

"We're trying to hold the city and the university accountable for what happened," said attorney James M. Gandy, who is representing the plaintiffs.

Gandy said the city and university have been represented by the law firm of Morgan, Foxwell, and Gandy.

"They've been working on this case for a long time," he said. "We're hoping to get some justice for the people involved in this case."

In the face of this year’s statewide budget cuts, UCF is finding it harder than ever to promote recycling efforts to the student body.

“Recycling should be a familiar concept to students, having grown up through the ‘Reduce, Reuse, Recycle’ campaigns of the ‘90s,” said Brett Bonowicz, assistant director of Physical Plant and head of the Housekeeping and Recycling Services crew.

“UCF’s current recycling rates are well below the national average of 30 percent, but UCF still managed to save 900,000 pounds of waste last year. Still, recycling rates have improved over last year’s lofty.”

UCF’s director of Housing, Recycles said Wormwood’s most ambitious plan is for a drive-up recycling site on campus.

The Physical Plant was allotted $6,000 for its recycling services this year — not enough to fund an expansion of recycling areas on campus, Wormwood said.

“I would like to see more recycling equipment in buildings,” Wormwood said. “That is probably our biggest roadblock at the moment. With an 8 percent recycling rate, we should be ashamed, but at the same time, I have faith that we will turn this around, and I will take every opportunity to convince somebody to do the right thing.”

Wormwood said the lack of student participation might be a main contributing factor to UCF’s low recycling rate.

“The student body needs to be aware of recycling resources because plastic cans are placed throughout the campus,” said Brett Bonowicz, a UCF graduate and nearby resident.

Bonowicz is one of a growing number of off-campus dwellers who are using UCF’s recycling resources because they lack such resources in their own communities.

“I think that people just need to be aware of it,” Bonowicz said. “You can walk around any building around campus and look in the trash to find that 30-50 percent of it is recyclable.”

Currently, there are portable plastic recycling containers in the Classroom I Building, and there is a recycling station on the second floor lobby of Howard Phillips Hall. Another station can be found in the Math and Physics Building, and gray bins marked for aluminum cans or plastic are placed throughout the campus.

One-on-one housing communities also have sites for recycling, but students may sometimes have a hard time finding them due to the bins being removed by the Physical Plant for routine sorting.

One of Wormwood’s most ambitious plans is for a drive-up recycling site on campus.

The crew has already held talks with the county for a possible grant, and location planning has started.

“I hope that the grant comes through,” Wormwood said. “I would pay for the construction of it all, and I really believe that it’s a possibility.”

At the end of the day, it is up to the students to decide to participate in the cause.

“If people are aware of it, then I think they will do it,” Bonowicz said. “If you say to someone, ‘Would you recycle?’ I don’t think that they would say no.”

Sebastian Gil Anderson and Sophomore Karen Olson are among the 9 percent of UCF students who properly recycle, according to the Physical Plant. UCF’s average recycling rates are far below the national average of 30 percent, but UCF still managed to save 900,000 pounds of waste last year. Still, recycling rates have improved over last year’s lofty.

UCF still needs to convince every one of its members to do it, Wormwood said.

Student Tasered at Open Forum

The University of Florida asked state investigators Tuesday to review campus officers’ use of a Taser during a forum with Sen. John Kerry on campus.

According to a police report, officers had been summoned by the forum’s sponsors to escort Meyer from the building. A report of the incident said Meyer was Tasered once in the left shoulder because he resisted when officers were attempting to place him in handcuffs.

UCF and the men are looking to improve on a fifth-place finish in the U.S. Track and Field Coaches Association Southern region.

The Knights will have an award ceremony after the final race of the season. The men's team will host a banquet on Nov. 10 to celebrate the end of the season. The women's team will host a banquet on Nov. 11 to celebrate the end of the season.

The Knights are in great position. We just need to close the gap with the No. 5 rankings. That's our goal and we're looking to improve on our fourth-place finish they had last year in the C-USA Championships. And their preparation starts with these early season races.

Smith Gilbert brings a new energy to the Knights this season after being an assistant coach at Tennessee for five years.

Both UCF teams are filled with experienced runners and pose a threat to make some noise in the conference. The women return five seniors while the men have four seniors on the roster.

Also, the women are currently ranked 11th in the U.S. Track and Field Coaches Association Southern region.

SDS adviser shows holes in Future editorial

There are at least two holes in the "Future" editorial titled "Responding to the Required opinion of the Central Florida Student Daily." First, the editorial states, "We're happy to announce that on Monday, November 14, we will be offering a two-day class." However, as of Wednesday, we have not received any information about the class or the details of the course.

Second, the editorial criticizes Future for failing to acknowledge the upcoming election on Tuesday, November 16. However, Future has already published an article on the topic, "Your vote matters," which includes a link to a news article about the importance of voting. In addition, Future publishes an article every Tuesday on election-related topics.

Future's editorial appears to be written in haste and without adequate research. Future is encouraged to ensure that its articles are well-researched and accurately reflect the facts and perspectives of the student body. Future is also encouraged to consider the implications of its editorial policies and to ensure that its content is fair, balanced, and informative.
