Pet Rescue by Judy could get an Extreme Makeover

MATT MCKINLEY

Pet Rescue by Judy, a private nonprofit organization dedicated to the rescue of cats and dogs in Central Florida for more than 20 years, is fighting for another kind of rescue.

Founder Judy Sarullo, who was evacuated from her home in January due to zoning restrictions, the shelter, a former veterinary office in Oviedo, was a much better option than what she now faces on a daily basis.

Today, Sarullo operates the organization out of her now Colossal Road. It is currently the only no-kill animal shelter in Orange County.

Sarullo has significant- ly more foster families for the animals during the week, and they take them to local adoption events on the weekends.

Despite complaints of noise from neighbors, Sarullo said she cares for the animals at her home only on the weekends.

Sarullo has been on the Orange County code enforcement's radar since its inception over the care and attention we provide," she said.

Most of the bikes that get auctioned off are in dire need of medical treatment, to veterinary appointments often to local adoption events on weekends.

Folk artist tells her story in art

KEITH SPENCER

On Tuesday, the Student Government Association along with the UCF art education department and National Education Association hosted self-taught American folk artist Mary Proctor.

The day featured several events in which Proctor shared her work with UCF students and faculty members. The events began at 11 a.m. in the UCF Art Gallery where Proctor first presented her work.

It concluded with a question and answer session in Room 130 of the Teaching Academy where students, teachers and other faculty had the opportunity to purchase some of Proctor's work.

Proctor's work features a unique combination of contemporary art-making practices with outsider art tradition.

"I definitely have to open my eyes to work that I never used to take second look at," Junior art education major Melissa Rogers said. "I really appreciate Art Education Coordinator Dr. Thomas Brewer for introducing [students] to something that shifts our way of thinking toward a different style."

"I think [Proctor's work] has history. Proctor's work emphasizes black American history that people don't know or have lost. It tells a story of people attempting to hold on to their roots," Rogers said. Proctor was very inspiring outside of her artwork and that Proctor's engaging personality and warming conventional words of wisdom are apparent in her work.

Brewer said Proctor's work is unique to say the least.

"My opinion is it [Proctor's art] is very direct and robust," Brewer said. "It is very honest and deals with things more than one person can relate to.

"It is also something that touches everybody's heart and soul. Proctor's work is outside the traditional view of what art should be. That's the reason we brought her here, to show that there's more to art than just the mainstream."

Proctor began her art career by painting in 1975, after losing three very important people in her life: her grandmother, Curtis, enjoys Proctor's work.

Proctor isn't the only person encouraged to the art community is last words of wisdom. "Giving my words of wisdom from Grandma to all who can receive it is very important," she said. "Try to tell people things that help them remember [about the importance] of life and joy. It is how we survive in life. Whatever you do in life, you should do it from your heart."

Carolyn Barns, a graduate art education student and Brewer's assistant, described Proctor's art as "joyful" and said it's not typically what one sees in the gallery. "It's nice to see a contrast, something with a little more energy to it," she said.

Proctor isn't the only person in her family who has picked up the habit of giving encouragement throughout life. Her son and also one of her biggest sources of inspiration, Carolyn, enjoys involving young people also.

"Stay focused and do whatever you are trying to do in life," Carolyn Proctor said.

About 700 people packed into the Abraham— the former president of Egypt and first lady— to attend a major women's event with Sadat.

Sadat was assassinated last year, but her legacy lives on through her work and that of her husband, Anwar Sadat, who was killed in 1981.

Sadat was a leader in women's rights and worked to promote peace and human rights.

As a result of her work, Sadat was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1981.

Sadat's efforts were instrumental in bringing about peace between Israel and Egypt in 1979.

Sadat's commitment to women's rights and peace-making was recognized internationally, and she is remembered as a trailblazer for women in politics and diplomacy.

Sadat's accomplishments are a testament to the power of leadership and the importance of advocating for justice, equality, and peace.

Facebook started in support of Judy

Judy Muirragui started a group on Facebook to support the petition. "It got a lot of volunteers and members, all spreading the word about the petition," said Sarullo.

Winter Springs City Commission also got in on the act. With a special session to develop a resolution to obtain federal funds for Pet Rescue by Judy, a no-kill animal shelter, two maddest children, with serious illnesses. Extreme Mahawar Executive Producer Denise Cranney said the above never comments on any family under consideration and had no comment on the petition. "We usually find our families through nominations from communities, churches, social workers, government agencies," Cranney said. "It can never hurt to call attention to another's problem and try to get them help." Support for Sarullo continued to grow as word spread about the petition. "Judy is an awesome lady and deserves a proper shelter for the animals," Perez said. Cranney also said the show visited Teresa last spring, so they won't be back to Florida until June 2008. "Thus, petitioners shouldn't be discouraged as the process takes time," she said. To sign the petition, visit www.Centralfloridafuture.com.

University of Florida students, 21 and Stephanie James, 21, began hanging out at the sidewalk kiosk of B&G following Florida Gators football games. "It's a great way to get some exercise and a break from all the classes," said Stephanie. Mirraguila started a group on Facebook to support the petition and the efforts of Pet Rescue by Judy. The group currently consists of more than 500 members, all spreading the word about the petition.

Jessica Perez, a junior psychology major at University of Central Florida, has volunteered at the shelter for more than two years. "I've got a lot of volunteers from the event, and I know all of them to date for what they do for me," Sarullo said.

Knights’ athleticism, character will be tested versus Mustangs

MELISSA HEYBOER

Steve Toliver

If last week’s narrow win over the UAB Blazers was any indication of what could happen to a top-ranked team, then the Knights should know that tomorrow’s game against SMU won’t be any cakewalk.

“Something that coach O’Leary has emphasized is that the hunter has now become the hunted,” offensive tackle Patrick Brown said. “We need to realize that every team is going to give us their best shot because now we’re number one in the conference.”

The SMU Mustangs enter tomorrow’s game with the worst record in Conference USA at 3-6, 0-1 in conference. But if you remember last week’s game, UAB was sitting at 1-4 in C-USA, and they played neck-and-neck with the Knights for nearly three quarters of the game.

“His (O’Leary) job is to let us know that those are the type of things that happen when you don’t start off the beginning of the game playing hard like you’ve supposed to,” tight end Mike Merriweather said. “So that’s what he has emphasized this week. To make sure we go out and play SMU the same way we played UAB in the best half of the game.”

The point is, records don’t always tell the whole story.

“SMU is going to give us their best shot,” Brown said. “They play through and through, and they do a lot of things that we need to prepare for. We know that we can do our best, but at the same time, we still need to prepare for.”

NEXT GAME

UCF vs. SMU

Tomorrow, 3 p.m. Gerald Ford Stadium

The Knights were supposed to dominate the UAB Blazers on Saturday and maybe they got caught up in that thinking. The UCF football team is in that exact position this week as it gets ready to face the one-win SMU Mustangs. But due to their own recent mistakes, it seems unlikely that the Knights will fall into trap.

Here are the main storyline surrounding tomorrow’s game:

Ready and recharged

The Knights were supposed to dominate the UAB Blazers on Saturday and maybe they get caught up in that thinking. UCF’s defense seemed to lose itself in a 17-17 battle as Saturday’s game. But the Knights realize that the game is not over until the whistle blows.

The Knights only had one Division I signee in the program’s history, but the Knights realize that the game is not over until the whistle blows. The Knights went 2-2 in the season and are looking to improve for the rest of the game as they pulled away for a 45-31 victory. Now the Knights see Saturday’s win as a benefit and a wake-up call.

“Get another chance to let you know that we really need to beat Tulane in this one,” wide receiver Kevin Sanders said after Saturday’s game. "And we understand that when we’re down and out and things aren’t going our way, it isn’t over until the whistle blows.”

The Knights will face the Conference USA Championship game with two more wins this season. But the Knights realize that with the position they are in, every game is a championship game. They understand that as Basebal selects five seniors

..."Anthony's been playing all four years on varsity," Pete said. "He's probably the best defensive player I've ever seen at this level. I've seen some great players, and defensively, he's probably one of the best. He's ever seen, if not the best.

Sir Elton John delivers kingly performance at Arena

Although it may be a long, long time before Sir Elton John hits Orlando again, fans who packed the sold-out UCF Arena on Saturday experienced a performance they won't soon forget. As the lights went down and the show began at 8 p.m., the audience was thrilled there would be no opening act. But few realized that, more than 160 minutes later, John would still be on stage, rocking the Arena with his arsenal of unmistakable piano-driven hits.

The sound of wind blowing — the opening seconds of the song "Funeral for a Friend" — began to play, signaling John's arrival, and the crowd gave the star his first standing ovation of the night. Fans remained on their feet as John continued playing. Two large video screens on each side of the stage displayed the evening's action from multiple camera angles. But most impressive was a camera stationed on John's piano, which provided an intimate look at his gifted fingers as they hit each note flawlessly.

John ended the opening number and stood atop his piano bench, embracing the fans as if he were a king on his throne, thanking his loyal supporters. And in some ways, on this night, John was a king.

"This one's for all the ladies," John said later as he began to play "Tiny Dancer." He sang with a deeper voice than that first heard on the original recording more than 30 years ago, but higher-pitched harmonizing vocals provided by John's band complemented the chemist well.

Shortly after it pain, John performed "Rocket Man," his signature tune. This time, John's deeper voice provided a new, new renditions of the classic, while more angelic harmonizing from the band added to the song.

John performed a piano solo — there were many.

Hollywood provides plenty of movies to be thankful for.

QUICK FLIX

WILLIAM GOSS

Before the Devil Knows You're Dead

Director: Sidney Lumet

The 83-year-old Sidney Lumet traditionally returns to form with this multi-faceted morality tale concerning the consequences that two brothers (Philip Seymour Hoffman and Ethan Hawke) face when their ill-fated Every plan to rob a mom and pop convenience store —specifically, the one belonging to their mom and pop— goes awry.

The Mist

Director: Frank Darabont

A giant, gripping and extremely effective Hitchcock-laced, Lovecraftian horror epic. The Mist observer a supernatural flood of panicked people trapped by the sudden arrival of a mysterious mist and the horrid things it becomes, as they begin to side with either the seemingly reasonable David Draper (Chuse Fun) or religious maniac Mary Chester (Mary Garden).

Making his third Stephen King adaptation, Following The Shining Redemption and The Green Mile, writer-director Frank Darabont seems to relish the chronology leading up to its story’s sake, and Robin Williams finds himself wrestling with a weakly written role as the young boy’s assumed assassin, but by cinematic con¬trast, don’t blame your throat for any incoming trams.

Opens Wednesday in theaters everywhere with sneak preview showings Saturday.

Enchanted

Director: Kevin Lima

In the incredibly charming Enchanted, Amy Adams and James Marsden each give career-best performances as Gaston and Prince Edward, respectively, who finds them¬selves thrust from the stimulus laid of Andalasia by a wicked witch (Susan Sarandon) into the love-them-magical reality of New York City.

Director Kevin Lima and writer Bill Miller wisely eschew the opportunity for pop culture references and maintain a nostalgic dream land of Andalasia by a wicked witch (Susan Sarandon) into the love-them-magical reality of New York City.

Director Kevin Lima and writer Bill Miller wisely eschew the opportunity for pop culture references and maintain a nostalgic tone of fairy tales and lightheartedness. Adams’s performance is a love¬ly sight of the ruthless Anton Chigurh (Javier Bardem) and his drug deal in the Texas desert, a slow-to-start but honest-to-god fable about a man, having served his time in prison, trying to do well in the world.

Opens today in theaters everywhere.

I’m Not There

Director: Todd Haynes

Adapting Bob Dylan’s story, Todd Haynes helps to bring a fresh face to the role of the mythic figure. Kneich (Nate Navar) is certainly apparent in this, though the film’s lead roles are certainly not the main focus here. While Bill Murray and his cast do a great job with the writing, it is the film’s orchestra that delivers the most powerful performances.

Opens today at the Regal Winter Park Village 20 and AMC Pleasure Island 24 and Wednesday in theaters everywhere.
