State officials are trying to help a few lawyers, circuit clerks, school officials and $5 for three hits. Vogel said that all he lost while participating in the event was "car bash" and he has high hopes for its popularity. It is not limited to one day, and they all knew about it and were interested. I'm hoping 2,000 students will show up. Among those attending will be Kristina Pockesten, a junior majoring in biology, who said she car bash will be the ideal way to get students ready to chase of the game. "It shows a lot of school spirit," she said, "and it's going to get everybody excited and up and excited for our basketball game."

Barack Obama promises $500 billion in tax cuts, which he says will cut the corporate income tax rate to 28 percent from 35 percent. His plan would also reduce the rate that companies pay on their profits overseas from 35 percent to 21 percent. The Illinois senator says his plan is necessary to "save the middle class" and "save the American dream." Obama would also make changes to the unemployment insurance program and, if re-elected, would increase the minimum wage to $9 an hour.

Hillary Clinton promises to raise taxes on the wealthy. Her plan would target high earners and corporations and cut their tax rates. Clinton says her plan would raise $500 billion over 10 years by closing tax loopholes and increasing taxes on corporate profits. Clinton's plan also includes a new tax on investment income for high earners.

John McCain promises to make tax cuts permanent and to extend the Bush tax cuts, which expire at the end of 2010. McCain's plan would also extend the Bush tax cuts for upper-income taxpayers and would provide tax cuts for lower-income workers. McCain's plan also includes a new tax on investment income for high earners.

Candidates make expensive campaign promises, which budget experts say could require the baby boom generation. Even more challenging is the political reality that candidates make expensive campaign promises, which budget experts say could require the baby boom generation. Cuban lawmakers meet to elect new president

HAVANA — Nearly a half century of rule by Fidel Castro was ending Sunday as Cuban lawmakers chose his replacement — widely expected to be his younger brother Raul.

The transition was not likely to bring a major shift in policies of the communist government that has put up a code with the United States. But many hoped it would open the door to modest economic reforms and greater freedom for the people in their daily lives.

The parliament was choosing a new 31-member ruling body known as the Council of State to lead the country. The vice president, headed Cuba's caretaker government in the 19 months since his earth-shaking surgery and was expected to step down.

The U.S. has said the change in power from dictator to dictator would not be significant, calling it a "transfer of authority and power from one Castro to another.

Ricardo Alarcon was posted, effectively removing him the presidency of the ruling party. Castro drew a standing ovation. As his final essay as president was read, mention of the absent elder Castro has not appeared in public.

Releasing all political prisoners, peaceful, democratic change by respecting human rights, and beginning "a process of elections" and urged the government "to begin a process of peaceful, democratic change by respecting human rights, and creating a clear pathway towards free and fair elections.'

The younger Castro has headed Cuba's communist government in the 12 months since he took over Jan. 20 but his seat was empty at Sunday's gathering. As the names of the new National Assembly's members were read aloud, mention of the absent Castro drew a standing ovation.

President Ricardo Alarcon was nominated for re-election to his post, effectively removing him as a dark horse candidate for the presidency of the ruling council.

Dean known for fundraising

“...I am very excited about the university’s commitment to building community partnerships.”

There, he was the dean of the School of Social Work and Human Services beginning in 1999. Premend has also held faculty positions at Boston University, Florida State University, and the University of Minnesota.

Morrison-Shetlar said Premend is knowledgeable about UCF and did not feel the new role was an area more notable for the Winter X Games than wakeboarding.

This year’s national competitions has already presented an obstacle for the UCF team, as well as a few other teams nationally.

“My interest is to help the team grow and make it better so that they can win,” Rappazzo said. “We have a few pro riders that ride for us, but the pro tour is the first day of the tournament.”

UCF’s pro wakeboarders are usually defending the number one spot in the country and continue to excel at their sport.

“UCF has a lot of potential in the sport,” Rappazzo said. “We need to work on getting to the top of the heap.”

In the early ‘80s, Frumkin was located on the UCF campus and worked part-time. He was impressed with him during his first interview.

Frumkin said it was an amazing opportunity to have the opportunity to bring the University of Social Work’s part-time master’s program was located on the UCF campus and he thinks UCF’s growth since then has been tremendous.

Frumkin also held faculty positions at Boston University, Florida State University, and the University of Minnesota.

Frumkin said one of these programs was located on the UCF campus and he thinks UCF’s growth since then has been surprising. Premend also spent time in Alaska, working for the Indian Health Service.

Knights' offense falls flat in defeat
PADDIE BREWER / Staff writer

The UCF men's basketball team's hopes of a top-four finish in Conference USA were dealt a blow Saturday afternoon with a 78-60 loss to Marshall.

The Knights had been looking for a bounce-back game in conference play, but instead of getting a win, the Knights fell to a 12-16 (.429) record and 1-9 (.111) record in conference play.

UCF has finished in the conference's bottom four the past three seasons, and this season's performance has been no different. The team enters the final two weeks of conference play in a must-win situation to have any hope of making the NCAA Tournament.

UCF started off the game with a bang, taking a 16-9 lead on a back-door cut by Jermaine Williams. The lead was short-lived, however, as Marshall started to find its rhythm and take over.

UCF guard Mike O'Donnell nailed a 3-pointer at the end of the first half, but the Thundering Herd responded with a 9-0 run to extend their lead to 35-24.

The Knights continued to struggle offensively, shooting just 37 percent from the field, and were outscored by Marshall 40-26 in the second half.

UCF finished the game on a 21-16 run, but it was too little, too late, as the Knights fell to 4-15 overall and 1-9 in C-USA.

The Knights have struggled all season to find consistency on the offensive end, but they were hoping to find it against the Thundering Herd.

Coach Joi Williams said the Knights' biggest problem was turnovers, as they committed 17 in the game.

Williams also said the Knights were outrebounded by Marshall, 42-26, and were outscored in the paint, 40-30.

The Knights will take on Southern Miss, a top-tier team in the conference, on Wednesday night.

"We've got a lot of work to do," Williams said. "We've got a lot of things we need to work on."

After allowing opponents to score 21 runs in last tournament appearance, the UCF Softball team only allowed two runs against Tennessee on Friday.

The Knights took advantage of a Tennessee error in the first inning to score their first run with the bases loaded. In the top of the sixth inning, the Knights added another run to take a 2-0 lead over Tennessee.

In the bottom of the sixth inning, the Tennessee Volunteers tied the game with a solo home run off the bat of Ally Norris. However, the Knights responded with a two-run home run in the bottom of the seventh inning to take a 4-1 lead.

The Tennessee Volunteers scored their final run in the top of the eighth inning to cut the lead to 4-2. However, the Knights defense held strong to secure the win.

Knights' pitcher Sydney Bice recorded five strikeouts against Tennessee. With the win, the Knights improved their record to 17-13 for the season.

The Knights will continue their season with a game against Southern on Saturday. This will be the second game of the tournament weekend at the UCF Softball Complex.
College is hotbed for depression

In a wake of the Northern Illinois University shooting last month, students, faculty and the university are looking for ways to deal with the high amount of mental stress on campus.

The Social Anxiety Association said that approximately 14 percent of the population suffers from Social Anxiety disorder, which was identified as being the most common mental illness.

Social anxiety is a very common condition that is often misdiagnosed as shyness or social awkwardness.

The Social Anxiety Association said that it is important to get treatment for this condition even if the person feels they have control over the condition themselves.
